FATE OF REVOLT IN BALANCE

BOTH FACTIONS MASSING FOR A DECISIVE BATTLE

Main Forces of Mexican Rebels Attempting to Join on West Central Front to Meet Threat of 18,000 Federal Warriors, Under Ex-President Calles, Near Zacatecas City—Mexico City Reports a Major Clash is Imminent.

NOGALES, Ariz., March 9—(I. N. S.)—Mexican Consul Vasquez here tonight denied the truth of a report unofficially originating at rebel headquarters across the Mexican boundary that former President Plutarco Elias Calles was assassinated by mutinying federal soldiers at Aguas Calientes this afternoon.

Vasquez declared General Calles left Mexico City today and could not possibly have been at Aguas Calientes at the time the reported assassination occurred.

(By United Press.)

The fate of the Mexican revolution apparently was in the balance tonight, as the main forces of the rebels attempted to join on the west central front running through the states of Zacatecas, Durango and Sinaloa to meet the threat of 18,000 federal troops, under Plutarco Elias Calles, near Zacatecas City.

Reports at Mexico City said a great battle appeared imminent and that it might even have begun.

The crystallization of the prophesied engagement was as follows, according to Mexico City reports.

1—Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar, with a force reported to be 2,000 strong, was prepared to meet the assault of the youthful Gen. Juan Almazan, pushing on Torreon, Escobar's stronghold, with federal forces flushed from victories at Vera Cruz and Monterey.

2—Gen. J. Gonzalo Escobar, with a force reported to be 2,000 strong, was prepared to meet the assault of the youthful Gen. Juan Almazan, pushing on Torreon, Escobar's stronghold, with federal forces flushed from victories at Vera Cruz and Monterey.

3—Plutarco Elias Calles, former president of Mexico, recalled to act in the present emergency as secretary of war, had concentrated 18,000 men near Zacatecas City.

4.—Additional rebel forces were said to be heading south through Chihuahua toward the west central front.

Afraid Kisses Would Spoil Shape of Lips; Wife Wins a Divorce

COLUMBUS, O., March 9—(I. N. S.) — Because her husband would not allow her to kiss him for fear that the kisses might spoil the shape of his lips and ruin his career as a trumpet player, Mrs. Enid Ebenhoch was granted a divorce in the court of domestic relations here today.

MEXICALI, Mexico, March 9—(I. N. S.)—An unidentified Mexican woman was killed at the military aviation field here when the backfire of an airplane motor set off a rack of aerial bombs in a repair shop, it was learned here today.

The engine back-fired while being block-tested. A spark ignited the bombs. A flying fragment of the bursting shells struck the wife of one of the workmen who was looking on.

The mechanics fled from the building as the detonations wrecked the structure.

Four military planes in a hangar nearby were undamaged.

Preparations were being made to rig a plane for service against the rebels when the explosion occurred.

HOOVER FAVORS REVOLVING FUND TO AID FARMERS

Measure Puts Responsibility on Commodity Organizations.

WASHINGTON, March 9—(U. P.)—President Hoover favors the general outline of the new McNary cooperative marketing bill, it was learned here tonight after the president conferred with the author of the measure, Chairman McNary of the senate agriculture committee.

The measure, creating a $300,000,000 government revolving fund to finance orderly marketing of farm products will therefore be made the basis of relief legislation which will be framed by McNary's committee for consideration in the senate as soon as congress meets April 15.

To make some minor revisions the committee will meet about two weeks before the session opens to consult Mr. Hoover's new secretary of agriculture, Arthur M. Hyde, and interested farm parties.

Gets President's Views.

McNary went to the white house today to ascertain the president's views about farm relief legislation which alon with tariff revision and waterways development made up the Hoover farm platform in his campaign.

McNary drew his bill at the start of the short session of congress, but action upon it was delayed by congressional leaders when they were informed Mr. Hoover would call a special session for the specific purpose of acting upon farm relief and tariff revision. He worked out hs draft of the measure in close cooperation with Mr. Hoover's commerce department and with former Secretary of Agriculture Jardine whose views on the subject coincided with those of Mr. Hoover.

INSIST COUNTY IS RESPONSIBLE

Mayor of Scribner Demands Investigation Of Blast.

Business Houses Close During Funeral of Victim.

SCRIBNER, Neb., March 9.—(UP)—Determined that the county shall compensate in some manner the survivors of the six heroic firemen who gave their lives in fighting a fire in a barn that housed dynamite belonging to Dodge county, Mayor F. F. H. Ranslem and the Scribner town board will confer with attorneys Monday.

An inquest called for this afternoon to investigate the blast and attempt to fix responsibility was not held because S. S. Sidner, of Fremont, attorney employed to represent the community, was unable to attend.

Although the town was delayed in starting its investigation the Omaha company which held the compensation insurance policies on the lives of the volunteer firemen, had opened an investigation this afternoon. What was learned was not disclosed by the investigators.

Pay Tribute to Dead.

Business places closed this afternoon as the funeral for the first victim of the explosion in the barn of Carl Hollander, county supervisor, was held. Hundreds packed into the Congregation church for the final rites for Guy Clark. His body was taken to Iowa for burial after the services. The body of Henry Wibbles was taken to Wolbach, Neb., for burial.

Services for Fred Felgner and Gus Pittack are to be held Sunday, and services for Arthur Schoeneck will be held Monday at the church at St. Charles, near West Point, Neb. A military funeral will be accorded William Strube, World war veteran, by the American Legion.

"The county authorities have told me there is no reason why an inquest should be held," Mayor Ranslem told the United Press tonight. "But I think we should investigate this thoroughly. The storing of dynamite in a barn just outside of the city limits, where it endangered the entire community, constituted gross negligence, on whose part is yet to be decided.

"But the facts now point to a lack of judgment on the part of county officials. The dynamite certainly should have been stored at some point along the river away from all buildings and fire hazards. The deaths and injuries to citizens of Scribner doing their duty in a time of grave public need should be regarded by Dodge county both as a moral and legal obligation, regardless of whether the dead and injured had been warned of the

LITTLE HEADWAY IS BEING MADE BY LEGISLATURE

Slow Progress Indicates Session May Continue Well Into May.

Many Bills Executed But Important Problems Still to Be Solved.

It's a long, long trail, and a winding one, which the Nebraska legislature must travel during the next six or eight weeks, before the senators and representatives can pack up their troubles in the old kit bags and take their homeward journeys.

Considerably more than half of what would constitute an ordinary session for lawmaking has already gone, but as yet the solons are hardly started on the important work laid out for them. Saturday was the fiftieth day for the lower house, working by itself while the senate took its accustomed week-end recess. Although the senate has only forty-four days chalked up on its string, its calendar is less congested than that of the house and it has just as much to its credit in the way of major accomplishments as the other chamber—which is nothing to brag about.

In only one particular have the two bodies made much progress thus far. That is in the killing of bills. The work of execution in each branch has been performed mostly on its own bills, but for good measure they have also slaughtered a few of each other's

Two house bills have also been vetoed by Governor Weaver, out of the comparatively small list of the legislative enactments reaching him.

The other three patrolmen then rushed Miquel and overpowered him. He was taken back to the county prison.

This was learned authoritatively despite the refusal of officers to confirm reports that the equipment of forty pursuit planes during the week with machine guns had any connection with the Mexican situation.

Awaiting Orders.

SAN ANTONIO, March 9—(I. N. S.)—"There are no troop movements now being made toward the Mexican border, but all units are being held under orders to entrain at a moment's notice," was the word tonight from headquatrers of the Eighth corps army area here.

HOPE EXISTS OF LOCATING BODY

Holl Thinks He Can Point Out Place Where Boy's Handkerchief Found.

Search, Underway Four Days, To Be Renewed Sunday Morning.

Believing that he can locate the spot where he found the handkerchief belonging to Chris Melvin Peterson, jr., George Holl, 2936 North Thirty-eighth street, will attempt to point the place out to police early Sunday morning. Mud in Antelope creek near the place will be dug out.

The father of the drowned boy believes that the boy's body is buried in the mud near where the handkerchief was found. Many, including George Holl, finder of the handkerchief, agree with him. Others believe that the body must have been washed out into Salt creek.

Mr. Holl was using a 10-foot pole Friday night to gouge out the sides and bed of Antelope creek from the raft constructed by Missouri Pacific employes when he found a handkerchief caught on the prongs of his double-hooked tool. He removed it and tossed it to the banks without further thought. He told police Saturday night, until he read in newspapers Friday afternoon that a handkerchief had been identified as belonging to the drowned boy.

A short time before he picked up the handkerchief he had found a cap believed to have been discarded by one of the searchers.

Identifies Handkerchief.

In removing the handkerchief, Mr. Holl noticed that three holes had been cut in it by the hooks His description of the holes Saturday night tallied closely with those in the handkerchief in the possession of Chris Peterson. Officer Frank Robbins, who was helping haul the raft at the time the handkerchief was found, identified Mr. Holl as the man who had thrown it to the bank. The handkerchief was turned over to Mr. Peterson by J. W. Bridge, 1020 North Forty-seventh street.

Practically the entire Lincoln police force was on duty along the stream at the time Mr. Holl reported. Later the number was reduced to two to patrol the area during the night.

Lack of adequate means of lighting made it impossible to attempt to locate the spot w here the handkerchief was found Saturday night. Officer Mitchell will bring Mr. Holl to police headquarters with him when he comes off his beat at University Place between 6 and 7 Sunday morning. A group of officers will then be sent out to assist in the search for the body after Mr. Holl

SWOLLEN RIVERS CAUSE FEAR FOR THE MISSISSIPPI

Ready to Strengthen the Weak Spots as Flood Danger Nears.

Levee Break on Missouri-Arkansas Border Inundates Land.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 9—(I. N. S.)Hundreds of men were recruited into service tonight to combat threatening flood waters along a wide stretch of the Little river and other tributaries of the Mississippi river as the danger of additional levee breaks appeared imminent.

The levee along the lower St. Francis river was expected to go out next and men and material were being assembled along the banks of this stream to strengthen the tottering walls. They were ready for instant call should alarm of an open break be sent down the line.

Lieutenant Colonel Wilby or an assistant from his office will leave early Sunday morning for the flooded Arkansas region to aid in combatting the flood waters.

A flood stage of thirty-five feet on the Mississippi river at Memphis is expected tomorrow, and unofficial reports say that a thirty-nine-foot stage may be expected by next Friday.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 9—(U. P.)—The case against former Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach, charged with illegally accepting campaign contributions from federal employes, has been transferred from the Waco to the San Antonio Federal court, it was announced here late today.

Wurzbach is indicted on six counts, one of which alleges that he accepted $100 from H. M. Holden, on June 28, 1926 as a contribution for political purposes during the primary campaign that year, in violation of a federal statute. Holden was at that time United States district attorney at Houston.

Wurzbach was released today on bond of $2,500 furnished by his brother, W. A. Wurzbach, following his arrest by United States Deputy Marshal Fleet White.

WOMAN AND TWO MEN ESCAPE FROM A MICHIGAN FLOE

Nels Jensen, Fisherman, His Wife and Brother Return to Chicago Harbor After Hundred Hour Battle to Release Launch From Ice Pack—Objects of Intensive Hunt Since Wednesday—One Searching Plane Passed Over Imprisoned Craft.

CHICAGO, March 9—(I. N. S.)—Exhausted from nearly a hundred hour fight to free his boat from the ice pack which had caught it and swept it out into Lake Michigan, Nels Jensen brought his launch into Chicago harbor late today, under its own power.

With his wife and brother, Jensen had been the object of an intensive air and water search since they were lost on the lake last Wednesday.

WEATHER OUTLOOK.

Weather outlook for the period March 11 to 16, inclusive:

Lower Missouri valley and north and central great plains: Periods of precipitation by Tuesday and again by close of the week; temperature above normal first of week, colder by close.

Nebraska—Mostly cloudy and unsettled Sunday and Monday; rising temperature Sunday and southeast portion Monday.

Kansas—Partly cloudy Sunday and Monday; rising temperature Sunday and in east portion Monday.

Several hours after the trio had gone out to spread their fish nets Wednesday their frail power craft was caught in a March storm. Waves dashed over the cabin, silencing the motor, and the three drifted helplessly into an ice pack, Jensen said tonight.

Hungry and cold, the three struggled to free their boat from the floe.

Plane Passes Overhead.

"One of the searching planes passed over us," Jensen said. "We heard the roar of the motor before we saw the plane. As it came nearer we tried frantically to signal, but it zoomed on over and we were left to face death in the lake.

"Finally we managed to free the boat, and, drifting in the open water, I dismantled the motor, repaired it, and we came in under our own power."

Hope had been given up earlier in the day when coast guard officials said they doubted any boat the size of the Jensen craft could have survived the storm and the ice.

KEEP UP FIGHT FOR AMENDMENT

Kehm to Again Urge Regents Control of Deaf and Blind Schools.

Bill Before Legislature Provides for Another Vote on Proposal.

Having lost their suit in the courts to compel the transfer of the state school for blind at Nebraska City and the state chool for deaf at Omaha from the board of control's jurisdiction to that of the University of Nebraska regents' board, those who were behind the proposal will try to get it through the legislature and submitted to the people of the state a second time in a form that will stand the test of legality.

Karl Kehm, state representative from Douglas county, who sponsored the original proposal as a constitutional amendment in the 1927 legislative session and succeeded in getting his bill passed to refer the question to the people, declared Saturday that the supporters of the plan have not given up, but will get together within a few days and agree on further procedure.

Anticipating the possibility of an adverse decision such as that handed down by the Nebraska Supreme court last Friday, which held the amendment invalid despite its receiving a majority of the votes cast upon it at the general election last November, Mr. Kehm introduced a bill last January—which is H. R. 194—carrying the same proposal.

Those favoring the scheme to turn the Nebraska City and Omaha institutions over to the state university regents will ask that this bill, which provides for another submission of the matter to popular vote in 1930, be brought out and passed by the legislature. It is now in the hands of the house committee on constitutional amendments, of which Representative Ernest Peterson is chairman.

Mr. Peterson said his committee

Revolution Boosts Price of Whisky

EL PASO, Tex., March 9—(U. P.) — Unsettled conditions in Juarez, Mexico, across the Rio Grande, sent the price of bonded whisky soaring here today.

Before the rebel invasion of Juarez, principal source of bootlegger liquor in the southwest, good bourbon and rye whisky could be obtained in El Paso for $2.50 a pint. Today the price was $4.

Bootleggers explaine dthe rebel soldiers, upon vanquishing federal troops, had invaded Juarez' 200 saloons and depleted almost completely the available liquor supply.

DRY DEMOCRATS BACK OF HOOVER

Senator Harris Promises Support in Enforcement Problem.

WASHINGTON, MARCH 9.—(U. P.)—Dry democrats and republicans will work together in advancing President Hoover's program for prohibition enforcement, and in the senate, at least, dry democrats will accord the president's program nonpartisan consideration.

Assurance of this support was carried to the white house today by Senator William J. Harris of Georgia, leader of the senate democrat bone dry bloc and author of the $24,000,000 prohibition enforcement budget program which was rejected in the last session of congress after President Coolidge proposed an increase of approximately $3,000,000 in available funds.

Senator Harris suggested that legislation be passed in the regular session of congress next December authorizing special subsidiary courts to handle the bulk of prohibition cases which now clog the federal dockets.

Favors Increased Penalties.

Another series of recommendations for more rigorous enforcement was placed before President Hoover today by Representative Stephen G. Porter of Pennsylvania, chairman of the house committee, who said revision of the code should increase penalties for repeating of violations. He said that paroles should not be allowed in the cases of narcotic peddlers.

Hoover is looking for outsanding figures who would not be subjected to political pressure. He wants the facts on which to base his own recommendations to congress and does not believe he can get them from a political inquisition.

It was indicated that the American Bar association, the American Medical association and other professional organizations of high repute would be called upon to assist the commission with their researches along related lines during the past decade.

Celebrate Fortieth Wedding Anniversary

Many Friends and Relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Frank White Present at Garrison Party.

(Special to the Star)

GARRISON, Neb., March 9 — Mr. and Mrs. Frank White, assisted by sixty-five relatives and friends celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary in the basement of the Methodist church here last Tuesday night. The affair was arranged and carried out by a daughter, Miss Allie White, of David City. Mr. and Mrs. White are the parents of four children and nine grandchildren, the former being Miss Allie white of David City, Floyd White of Flagler, Col., Mrs. Dora Ludwig of Shaw, Col., and Clara Nuttleman of Canyon City, Col. All were present but the latter.

The program included a vocal solo, "I Love You Truly," Prof. C. Harold McCully, Mrs. McCully accompanist; brief history of the lives of Mr. and Mrs. White, reminiscences and clever poetry, B. H. Clute, a brother-in-law; solo, "When You and I Were Young," Mrs. Jane Wrede, Mrs. W. E. Kennedy accompanist; solo, "Sweetest Story Ever Told," Mrs. Cecil Sellhorn, David City, attired in Colonial costume, Florence Cornue accompanist; reading, Mrs. H. W. Modlin. In the course of the program a number of congratulatory letters were read and at its conclusion all sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," this having been sung at the wedding forty years ago.

In the church dining room, where the refreshments were served the color scheme was pink and white throughout the tables ebing decorated with these colors and with sweet peas and ferns and pink candles. As the wedding party entered, preceded by Rev. Mertie Clute, Mrs. C. Harold McCully played the Lohengrin wedding march. Little Irene Ludwig acted as ring bearer and following her came Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Clute, best man and lady. Then the bride and groom. They were strikingly attired and the mock wedding ceremony was truly amusing. Rev. Mertie Clute officiated with the ring service, after which the presents were opened and presented. These were numerous and valuable, and included a substantial purse of money. The large angel food wedding cake was baked by Mrs. Ray Marquis.

Mr. and Mrs. White are among the pioneers in this vicinity, having farmed for several years, then going to Havelock, where he entered the employ of the Burlington. Later they returned to Garrison, but he continued with the railroad company, in whose employ he has been for twenty-eight years. Both have been members of the Methodist church for more than thirty-five years.

Old Landmark Gives Way to New Apartment

Here is shown the wreck of another landmark in the Lincoln that was.

This old house, built more than fifty years ago at the corner of Tenth and L streets, is being torn down to make way for a three-story modern apartment building. When erected by the father of Fred Eissler, who was born in it, the home was considered pretentious.

Workers who are now tearing it board from board, find it still sound. Its frame and most of the other lumber is of white pine. The two by fours and other timbers are full size members. Its sheeting is 12-inch white pine planks. Nails were used plentifully and are of the stamped out variety.

For years, the house was owned by Tom Carr, a well known early day resident. Now it is the property of Adolph Hock, who will erect the new apartment.

Costing $60,000, this new building will be 50 by 55 feet in size and will have its main entrance to the south on L street. Its exterior finish will be of red face brick and bedford stone.

Seventeen apartments of the three room type, with oak finish and the latest equipment will be provided. They will be ready for occupancy within about ninety days.

LITTLE HEADWAY IS BEING MADE BY LEGISLATURE

The governor had in his hands Saturday a bunch of fifteen bills that piled up during the last half of the week; but previous to that time he had not received more than a dozen or so. Most of those turned over to him up to date come under the generic term of "chicken feed."

Session May Run Till May.

It begins to look as though this legislature may run through March and April and into the month of May before the finale comes. It will certainly be in session as long as that unless it "gets a hump on itelf" mighty soon.

Two years ago the salons adjourned sine die on April 23. This year the legislature convened several days earlier than in 1927, and in the ordinary course it should get through by April 20, but the old, experienced members have no such expectation. They will be tickled to death. If they can get away from Lincoln bfore May day.

In 1925 when Allen G. Burke was speaker of the house, he succeeded in pushing things along at a lively enough rate to bring final adjournment on April 1—the earliest quitting date in twenty years.

Two years before that, however, the session was drawn out until May 2, which broke all records for length.

Judging by the way things have been going so far, the present assembly stands a good chance of winning distinction as the slowest-moving bunch of legislators Nebraka ever had—and at the same time it may have less to its credit in the way of constructive achievement than many of its predecessors.

Appointment of a sifting committee to take charge of the general file in the house will be necessary before long, but this will probably be delayed until some of the main bills on banking and other subjects have been considered.

Weaver's Bank Audit Wins.

The Burke-Weaver bill, H. R. 585, appropriating $150,000 for a thoroughgoing investigation and audit of all bank failures during the past ten years and the disposition of their assets which will include an inquiry into the state banking administration and that of the guaranty fund commission, is now through the house and ready for its first reading in the senate. It passed the lower chamber by unanimous vote Saturday.

The house during the past week also debated and advanced to third reading the Bowring 4-cent gas tax bill, H. R. 242, which will be up for passage Monday or Tuesday, thus making it the next one of first magnitude to be sent over to the senate.

Continuance of the capital levy for two years and provision for a joint heating plant to serve the capitol and the state university are provided for in H. R. 567, which passed the house Saturday.

Banking Measure Delayed.

The lower chamber failed, however, to do anything with any of the three banking bills which had been set as special orders for last Thursday and Friday. All the time on those days was spent on the first one, H. R. 299, to provide revenue for paying depositors in failed banks; but a deadlock developed between its supporters and opponents, and a truce was made between them until Tuesday morning, when the fight will be on again at 9:30.

The South Dakota partial guaranty plan for individual banks, embraced in H. R. 382, and the other bank bill, to abolish the guaranty fund commission and place all receiverships in the hands of the banking department, come next on the list.

Next comes H. R. 466, to combine the state park board and the game and fish bureau as one governmental agency, to be known as the state game, forestation, and park commission, which will supervise all wild life and recreational activities under state jurisdiction. It is on the calendar for Tuesday morning, but will have to wait its turn until all the banking bills are out of the way.

Little Headway on Code Reform.

One of the four chief elements in Governor Weaver's program as outlined in his inaugural message—that of repealing the general administrative provisions of the code and getting rid of duplicatons and overlapping in the governmental mechanism of Nebraska—has been almost entirely neglected by the legislature up to this time.

However, the senate, after once killing the Warner bill, S. F. 78, to transfer the collection of gasoline tax from the agriculture department to the state treasurer, reversed its action and several days ago approved the measure for passage. It will undoubtedly go through on third reading within the next day or two.

The main code reorganization bill, H. R. 425, which abolishes the finance department and transfers its accounting functions permanently to the state auditor, while placing all budget matters under the tax commissioner ,is still in the hands of the house commitee on miscellaneous subjects. This bill also empowers the governor to place code activities in the hands of constitutional state officers, who would render such service without additional salary. It will probably be delivered to the house this week, with a favorable recommendation by the committee.

Taxation Measures Up Soon.

H. R. 921, Raising the intangible tax rate to 10 mills, is now on the house calendar ,as is also the Ashton income tax bill, H. R. 350. Senator Griswold's primary bill, S. F. 105, doing away with presidential preference primaries and making state conventions come before the primaries, instead of afterwards, is another measure on the list waiting to be taken up by the house.

There is to be a joint hearing Tuesday afternoon by the constitutional amendments committees of the house and senate, on H. R. 519 and S. F. 90, which are proposals to ratify the federal child labor amendment.

The biennial dinner of the Nebraska legislative league, which is to take place Tuesday evening at the Cornhusker hotel, will give the solons a little diversion from their labors. At 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the league will have its business meeting in the house chamber, for election of officers.

were in complete control of the west coast of Mexico and had extended their zone of actual occupation from the border southward to the state of Nayarit.

The populous and busy port of Mazatlan, Sinoloa, principal west coast port, fell to the rebels during the morning when Gen. Francesco Bourquez marched with his army into the city close on the heels of the retreating federal forces, under Gen. Jaime Carrillo.

General Carrillo and ris garrison fled southward the state of Nayarit, strongly revolutionary, and is pursued by the rebel forces under General Iturbe. Harrassed by rebel sympathizers, fighting the guerrila warfare known best by the mountaineers of Nayarit, General Carrillo is in grave danger of capture or annihiliation by the rebels.

The state government of Sinaloa had already declared itself in favor of the revolution and Mazatlan was the last point of importance still under the control of a federal garrison. Culiacan, the capital of the state, fell to the rebels hours before.

WILBER NOTES

Members of the American Legion and the auxiliary had a most enjoyable evening together last Saturday at the Wilber opera house. Dancing was the amusement. A fine lunch was served late.

Members of the Boy Scouts are planning a bicycle trip to the Black Hills this summer. They will be accompanied by their scoutmaster and assistant in a truck, carrying their supplies. The boys will accumulate funds this spring and get in shape for the 1,200 mile trip.

William Savage, who had several bones crushed in his left hand Tuesday while putting a hay rack on the running gears, has been receiving treatment at Lincoln, and it is thought he has sustained no permanent injury.

Miss Mary Kafka entertained the bridge club at the home of Mrs. Henry Hein Tuesday. High scores were made by Miss Olga Stejskal and Mrs. Bertus Dodson.

WORLD BANK IS SUGGESTED FOR DEBT PAYMENTS

of a tentative character and upon further examination is subject to rejection in part or as a whole.

Would Abandon Old Plan.

"It is obvious that the committee of experts, in deciding to explore the possibilities of such a new international bank, has been impressed with the belief that in order to achieve final settlement of reparations (with which duty it is charged) it will be necessary gradually to do away with a great part of the temporary war time machinery that was created to collect reparations, and for this, if possible, to substitute permanent peace time machinery.

"The substitution of finahcial for political machinery should, it is believed, transfer the liquidation of Germany's international obligations from the realms of political discussion to the orderly forms of business that characterize a state of peace.

To Act as Trustee.

"If such an institution were created, its primary function at the start would be to act as trustee; receiving from Germany such annuities as may be arranged and disbursing these among creditor nations.

"It also could co-operate with and act as an essential intermediary between all interested governments and the issuing bankers in marketing such bonds as might be issued for commercialization of German annuities. It could co-operate with the existing banks of issue and might, if desired, receive from these both clearing and investment deposits.

"The new bank would be in no sense a 'super bank,' to exercise a dominating influence over existing institutions.

Would Increase Co-operation.

"The authors of the suggestions believe that the operations of the new institution would tend to increase and strengthen the co-operation that already has been developed between central banks and that has been of such marked service during the past several years in restoring the gold standard throughout the world and otherwise stabilizing financial conditions.

"It would supplement rather than duplicate existing institutions and would assist rather than direct.

"As to the management, the scheme makes clear that the bank, if organized, must be non-political. Upon the directorate should sit only men of prominence and international repute."

County's Responsibility.

Sidner said he would confer with the Scribner authorities Monday to determine what action should be taken. There is a question of whether the county is responsible, he said, although an effort may be made to show that it is responsible on the ground of negligence. There also is some talk, he said, of the county assuming part of the burden of paying compensation to the survivors of the dead and to the injured.

The compensation company is expected to pay $5,400 to survivors of five of the dead men who were members of the volunteer fire department. Survivors of Henry Wibbles, the sixth victim, may not receive compensation, since Wibble was not a member of the volunteer fire department, although he was aiding in extinguishing the blaze at the time of the explosion.

With the fire department of thirty members depleted to eight on account of deaths and injuries, Mayor Ranslem swore in several new members today to fill the ranks.

Two members of the department remained in a serious condition tonight from their injuries. They were Fred Pscherer, chief, and Elmer Steil, a printer.

Public Indicted

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 9—(U. P.)—A Jackson county grand jury closed here today by indicting only the public.

Called to investigate the use of punch boards, slot machines and other gambling devices, it said in its report filed today that if there were no public demand for enforcement of gambling bans, individuals should not be prosecuted.

SOLDIERS READY AT FT. RUSSELL TO MOVE SOUTH

railroads had been notified they might be called on to furnish cars on short notice. Unusual activity prevailed at the fort.

It was understood the troops, if they moved, would go to the lower Rio Grande valley. The regiments are infantry units.

Brigadier General Bolles, commanding officer, refused to discuss the orders, but it was learned that a warning had been issued from corps headquarters at San Antonio to avoid publicity in connection with possible troop movements.

In confirmation, Cheyenne supply houses reported that large supples of shipping boxes have been purchased by Fort Russell officers within the last twenty-four hours.

Denial From San Antonio.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 9—(U. P.)—Col. Robert McCleave, chief of staff of the Eighth corps area, with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston here, denied tonight that any orders had been issued from those headquarters sending 2,000 Second division troops from Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming, to the Mexican border.

Colonel McCleave said that the troops at Fort D. A. Russell reported ordered to the border are a part of the Second division, with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, and if moved it would be upon orders out of the Eighth corps area headquarters.

No orders moving any troops from Fort Sam Houston have been issued, Colonel McCleave said.

U. S. To Aid Federals.

WASHINGTON, March 9—(I. N. S.)—Under express orders of President Hoover, the war department today closed all avenues of information concerning the surplus arms and munitions to be sold to the Mexican government.

A notice circulated through the department on behalf of the deputy chief of staff, Lt. Col. J. H. Atkins, secretary of the general staff, disclosed that the strictest secrecy surrounds the measures to supply the Portes Gil government with Enfield rifles and cartridges.

So momentous was the situation with reference to the president's authorization to aid the Mexican government, that it was taken up at once by the war council of the general staff, and when the deputy chief of staff returned from it, the silence order was issued.

It said the action was taken by the express direction of the president, who would make public himself whatever he deemed proper.

The government's supply of Enfield rifles is far in excess of the Mexican requirements, amounting to possibly 4,000,000, which had been manufactured for the army during the World war because that type was particularly suited to quantity manufacture.

The surplus Enfields are stored at San Antonio, Tex., Rock Island, Ill., Columbus, O., Augusta, Ga., New Cumberland, Pa. and New Orleans.

It was considered probable that sufficient rifles would be available from the stores at San Antonio, and shipments would be made from that point because of its accessibility to the Mexican border.

Ammunition Available.

Several hundred million rounds of standard 30-30 rifle ammunition are available, and the supplies to be furnished the Mexican government are expected to come from southern depots, at El Paso and San Antonio. It was said the ammunition to be declared surplus would be that which is so old it would not be feasible to keep it longer.

It may be, it was explained, that some of it—possibly a dozen cartridges in a thousand, would be defective. There is a large quantity of such ammunition on hand. From these stocks, distributed among virtually all depots, the ammunition will be drawn for sale to Mexico.

The war department, it was indicated, will begin shipping at once the amounts Mexico wants, by railroad either through Eagle Pass or Laredo, Tex. Both of these railroads are open to that part of Mexico which is securely under federal control, it was said.

Little information reached the state department today from American diplomatic officers in Mexico, but Secretary Kellogg declared he believed from reports he had received that the Portes Gil government was now in a better position than it had been since the revolution started, despite the setback at Juarez, which yesterday fell to the rebels.

The state department is confronted with the problem of what to do with the three generals and 300 odd federal soldiers who crossed over into American territory at El Paso and were disarmed and "detained" by Maj. Gen. William (Wild Bill) Lassiter, eighth corps area commander. The Mexicans came over to escape slaughter by the revolutionists when they were driven to the river bank.

Promp Shipment Seen.

NUEVO LAREDO, Mex., March 9—(U. P.)—American airplanes, arms and ammunition being rushed to the aid of government forces in Mexico are due to pass through this port within the next day or two. American customs officials at Laredo have received instructions to facilitate their entry and Mexican officials on this side are waiting anxiously to receive them and speed them to the federal distributing points.

These war weapons from the United States, their delivery sanctioned by the state and war departments, are quite likely to mean the salvation of the established Mexican government, the suppression of which is admittedly a dangerous revolutionary threat, and the retention of power by Emilio Portes Gil, provisional president whose real authority is that supplied by former President Calles.

Information received here thus far indicates the American succor to Calles and Gil will include at least one thousand rifles, a million or more cartridges and probably a dozen airplanes. The airplanes are bombers fully equipped with bombs, machine guns, bombing racks and all other accoutrement essential to an effective fighting plane.

TWO SCOUT TROOPS.

"Your majesty, Michael I, King of Rumania, in care of the president of the Regency Council, Bucharest, Rumania.

"I thank your majesty for the kind message sent in your name by the high regency. I greatly appreciate the cordial sentiments which it conveys.

cific coast and Rockies, are headed this way.

Much apprehension was felt as the result of this report as levees of the Mississippi as well as its tributaries are now at the straining point and additional torrents falling into the watershed of the Father of Waters would increase the danger of disaster.

Lowlands Flooded.

MEMPHIS Tenn., March 9—(I. N. S.)—Raging tributaries of the swollen "father of waters" tonight evoked the fear of the worst flood in the Mississippi valley since the disastrous overflow of 1927.

As other sections were threatened by a deluge, the lowlands of Arkansas and Missouri were inundated as a result of a 125-foot levee break on Little river, near the Missouri-Arkansas line.

Although government engineers believed that the levees along the Mississippi would hold, they were fearful of the consequence should rains fall in the watershed of the Father of Waters within the next few days.

A contingent of engineers and workers were rushed to Blythville, Ark., today following the break in the Little river levee, and 20,000 sandbags were hauled there to combat the torrents and levees which may weaken and crumble.

A close watch was being maintained along a wide stretch where the danger is most imminent, and it was hoped that with the sandbags the weaker levees in the danger zone could be reinforced and would hold.

Old Channel Breaks.

The first break occurred in the old channel of the Mississippi thirty miles northeast of Blytheville. A few hours after the water gushed through, countless acres of lowland were inundated, and many eastern Arkansas highways were reported under several feet of water.

Predictions were that the St. Francis river, now several feet above flood stage, will rise higher, and this sent alarm through the section. Other streams were reported badly swollen or above flood stage.

However, the swollen Mississippi, government engineers believe, will keep within its levees, unless there is a new rise in the Ohio, Missouri and upper Mississippi. Nevertheless, precautions were being taken to strengthen any weak spot along the way.

Flood Grips Gergia.

Meanwhile, the southeastern states were recovering from one of the worst floods in their history, although this will not affect the Mississippi area. Georgia was still in the grip of an overflow that has claimed twelve lives, inundated thousands upon thousands of acres of farmland had caused an untold damage to property.

Additional fear was felt in the southeastern district today with the prediction that general rains would prevail over the the entire area tonight in Georgia the second March crests approached southern portions of the Flint, Ocmulgee, Oconee and Chattanoochee rivers.

The little town of Newton, Ga., whose inhabitants fled for their lives a week ago, is still under several feet of water, and it and the surrounding towns were faced with a higher crest as the Flint river continued to rise. Parts of Albany, Ga., were sandbagged against the overflow of the Flint.

Fire Threatens Stinson's Plane

BAY CITY, Mich., March 9—(I. N. S.)—"Sally Sovereign," the monoplane in which Eddie Stinson and R. C. Page hope to shatter the world's airplane endurance flight record, broke into flames late this afternoon as the motor was being primed in preparation for another take-off.

Spread ofthe blaze was quickly halted with fire extinguishers. The craft suffered no serious damage, according to W. J. Sovereign, backer of the flight.

The blaze made impossible, however, all further attempts to take off on the endurance flight until Sunday morning at least.

Stinson and Page abandoned their attempt to break the flight record yesterday when they were forced down by a lake gale after being up for eleven hours.

PLANS N. Y.-BERLIN HOP.

NEW YORK, March 9—(I. N. S.)—William Pellegrini, former member of the Italian flying corps and now a member of the bricklayers' union here, will fly from New York to Berlin some time in the near future, it was announced here today. The flight will be backed by American trade unions.

SMITH AWARDED LAETARE MEDAL

Highest U. S. Catholic Honor for Gift to Political Science.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 9.—(U. P.)—Alfred E. Smith, former governor of New York and the presidential nominee of the democratic party in 1928, has been named as the 1929 recipient of the distinguished Laetare medal, conferred annually since 1883 by the University of Notre Dame.

Announcement of the award was made tonight by Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell C. S. C., pesident of the university.

The Laetare medal is considered to be the most notable distinction that can be conferred upon a lay Catholic in the United States. It is symbolical of an old world tradition, the Golden Rose, an award of the pope.

Former Governor Smith was selected for the 1929 medal because of his contributions to governmental science. The time and the place for the presentation of the medal will be announced after the administrative officers of the university have conferred with Governor Smith.

The award is given each year on Laetare Sunday, the fourth Sunday in Lent.

President's Statement.

In announcing the award, Father O'Donnell said:

"The award of this medal is made annually to some lay Catholic of the United States who has achieved such distinction in his field of special endeavor as to reflect glory upon the Catholic faith. Notable services in religion, philosophy, science, art, literature or to any other worthy activities of life or division of knowledge, as well as distinguished service to our country in public life, are among the reasons determining the selection and bestowal of this honor.

"This year the award falls to ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York.

"These public and private virtues are inseparable from the man's sterling Catholicity. Therefore, in the choice of this latest recipient of this medal, the university feels that the end for which this honor was established is fittingly served."

of a federal farm board consisting of the secretary of agriculture and six appointees of the president to be confirmed by the senate, no more than three of whom shall be members of the same political party. The board would administer the $300,000,000 government revolving fund, being empowered to lend as much as $225,000,000 for loans to any stabilization corporation for the purpose of buying and storing a commodity suffering from a flooded market.

Loan Proposals.

The board could lend not more than $25,000,000 for building warehouses; $25,000,000 to any co-operative marketing association for the purpose of enabling the association to advance to its members a share of the market value of the commodity; $2,000,000 to enable consolidations of any marketing organization ,and $23,000,000 for insurance funds. All loans would be subject to 4 per cent annual interest.

The theory of the proposal is that farmers interested will form strong co-operative community organizations and work with the board for control of their market. It throws the responsibility for such control on the co-operatives themselves rather than on the government.

No strenuous objection to the plan has yet been raised and under normal conditions it shall be enacted early in the special session.

MACHINE GUNS MOUNTED.

NOGALES, Ariz., March 9—(U. P.)—Machine guns were mounted on the hills surrounding Nogales, Sonora, today to forestall another attempt to fly Mexican federal planes over the city, now held by the rebels. Yesterday a plane dropped pamphlets advising the revolutionary soldiers to drop their arms and return to the support of the federal government.

Mr. Holl was one of the many volunteer workers who participated in the search. He worked nearly all of three nights in the quest for the body.

Found In Atelope Creek.

The handkerchief was found in Antelope creek between the point where the creek comes out of conduit after crossing Sixteenth street and the street car bridge farther north on Sixteenth street. This is the area immediately beyond the point where the boy was last seen to go down.

Police and firemen have been engaged in the search for the body for more than four full days and nights.

Saturday night police were contributing 50 cents each to the fund being offered as a reward for the recovery of the body.

probably will be willing to report out H. R. 194 for consideration by the house, although its members hold different opinions as to wether the change in management of the institutions would be desirable. It is not expected, however, that the bill's friends will ask to have it brought out until the latter part of this week.

The board of control and the board of university regents are both opposed to the transfer plan, as is Supt. Ned C. Abbott of the Nebraska City school for blind. Supt. F. W. Booth of the Omaha school for deaf is said to be in favor of it.

STOCKS TOUCH HIGHS OF YEAR

New York Market Overcomes Handicap of 12 Per Cent Loan Rate.

Favorable Reports From Steel, Copper and Other Basic Industries.

BY W. S. COUSINS.

NEW YORK, March 9.—(I. N. S.)—The bull movement in the stock market overshadowed every other development of the weekend. Starting the week with a moderate reaction, the usual market action of a presidential inaugural day, the stock market overcame the handicaps of a 12 per cent call loan rate and a widespread withdrawal of funds from the call loan market, and pushed on aggressively to the highest prices of the year for many of the speculative favorites.

Favorable reports from the steel, copper, rubber and other basic industries flowed into the financial district from every section of the country. The copper producers are unable to supply the demand for home and foreign requirements, but in the interests of stabilization they are keeping the price of the metal around 19½ cents a pound. The steel mills are operating at close to 95 per cent of capacity, and the output of the automobile manufacturers in the first quarter of this year is expected to make new high records for the period.

Reparations for spring business are broadening, both in distributing and producing branches, says Dun's Review, and crop and other outdoor work, although retarded by storms in some sections, is engaging wide attention. An early Easter this year should add to the current acceleration of retail trade, and railroad freight traffic, which is a measurement of distribution, shows continued gains over last year's movements.

Cotton Prices Advance.

Among other statistical indices, Dun's continues, the report of the largest average daily pig iron output for any February, with but one exception, has a prominent place. Advancing cotton prices, futures reaching new seasonal highs the latter part of the week, have been partly a reflection of delayed agricultural operations in the south, from excessive rainfall, while increasing demands for goods manufactured from this staple have necessitated overtime running of the mills in different instances.

Of eighty-two commodities of all kinds quoted in Bradstreet's seventeen advanced as compared with last week, thirteen declined, and fifty-tow remained unchanged.

Bank clearings in the United States for the week ended March 7 aggregated $15,274,584,000, against $11,450,659,000 last week, a holiday week, and $11,508,111,000 in this week a year ago.

Wheat Closes Higher.

CHICAGO, March 9.—(I. N. S.)—Wheat closed 1⅝ to 2⅛ cents higher today with short covering and scattered commission house and local buying. Firmness at Liverpool figured in the advance here. Corn rested with advances of ⅝ to 1⅛c, in sympathy with wheat. Oats were unchanged to ⅝c higher.

For the week wheat was ⅞ to 1⅜c lower, corn 1¼c higher to ⅜c lower and oats unchanged to 1⅝c lower.

Wheat averaged lower most of the week. Heavy liquidation on bearish private estimates of farm reserves, issued early in the week forced the market to drag. Support was lacking, the majority being inclined to await the government report on farm reserves. Government figures were about as expected and not much out of line with private estimates. The total on farms was placed at 148,813,000 bushels against 131,000,000 bushels a year ago. Foreign news was bearish. Canadian clearances continue heavy. Weather conditions generally favorable over the winter wheat belt.

Corn maintained independent strength during the week. Lighter receipts and an active shipping demand encouraged good buying. The government estimate on farm reserves was construed as bullish. Estimate of stocks on farms was 1,029,000,000 bushel against 1,012,000,000 bushel a year ago. The report showed a tremendous disappearance during the first four months of the crop year. Export business continues fair.

Hogs Finish Steady.

CHICAGO, March 9—(I. N. S.)—Hogs finished on a par with a week ago. Steers were up 25 to 75c, cows and heifers 25c. Lambs gained 25 to 40c.

Hog prices scored continuous upturns the first four days of the week and with active demand and light receipts. Top soared to $12.10, highest since last September, unfavorable conditions of country roads, which modified receipts and higher trends to the eastern dressed trade figured in the advance. Gains were quickly lost, however, on Friday and Saturday when buyers turned bearish and demanded concessions. Receipts for the week were 164,000 against 221,000 a year ago.

The market for steers advanced agreeably for the first time in more than a month. There was a better outlet for beef and the supply was more in harmony with the demand. Receipts were 39,000 against 37,000 last week and 40,000 a year ago. Top was $14.50, with a fair percentage of good to choice steers at $13 to $14 and plainer grades at $12 to $13.

Cows and heifers were higher in sympathy with steers. Most of the cows sold at $7 to $10 and heifers at $9 to $13. Calves advanced 50 to 75c and scored a new season top at $18.

Sheep receipts for the week were 59,000, against 70,000 last week and 47,000 a year ago. The market displayed considerable unevenness during the week, but the trend was generally higher. Shippers bought most of the good lambs at $17 to $17.50 and a few loads went to yard speculators at $17.60 to $17.85. Packers were satisfied to take cheaper grades of lambs at $16 to $17.

Chicago Cotton Soars.

CHICAGO, March 9—(I. N. S.)—Cotton prices soared to new highs for the current movement and finished 82 to 97 points above a week ago. The market was active all week in line, with general speculative and trade buying. Offerings were limited.

Favorable reports from dry goods markets, firmness at Liverpool and unfavorable government weekly weather report were outstanding bull factors.

Today's final prices were 6 to 17 points higher, March at 20.60; May 20.95, July 20.95, October 20.60, December and January 20.64.

Banner Crop Year Anticipated in Nebraska Panhandle.

ALLIANCE, Neb., March 9—The coming year will be an outstanding one for agriculture over western Nebraska, believe leading farmers and others identified with the agricultural industry. This opinion was emphatically called to the attention of a large group of farmers who met in Alliance this week for an agricultural outlook meeting at which faculty members of the state university agricultural college were the chief speakers.

Although it is considered early to determine the winter wheat prospects for the very large acreage over the Nebraska panhandle, every present indication points to favorable crops this year. Nearly every part of the western end of the state is soaked with moisture, due to the heavy snowfalls of the winter, which fell evenly over the large fields. Farmers are making heavy purchases of implements and are giving advance orders for combines and tractors, to local implement firms.

It was thought by some that the winter wheat was injured by the prolonged cold weather of January and February, but at this time the grain men doubt this very much. Some, who have made a thorough inspection of conditions over entire west Nebraska say that this is not greatly to be feared. The blanket of snow acted as a protective covering for the winter wheat.

That beneficial combination of a fertile soil and wide range of rainfall, which makes the entire state of Nebraska conductive to the large scale production of nearly all the leading staple crops, is particularly noted in the western end of the state, with its high altitude and new, freshly made tillable land.

COUNTY SEED DAY IS REAL SUCCESS

(Special to the Star.)

BRIDGEPORT, Neb., March 9—A Morrill county's first seed show and exchange day proved a big success on Thursday, when more than a score of farmers exhibited seed of various kinds for sale and display, and some exhibitors from Box Butte and Cheyenne counties came here with seeds and potatoes. There were men from the agricultural college at Lincoln, who gave talks of seed culture and other phases of farm work, including sanitary hog lots and stock raising. The day was merely to provide farmers with knowledge of where and how much good seed could be secured in this community, and contracts were made for thousands of bushels of seed.

25 Blinded By Peoria Liquor

CHICAGO, March 9—(I. N. S.)—Twenty-five cases of blindness, in addition to twenty-one known deaths due to alcohol containing poison, were reported by hospital authorities in Peoria late today.

A special grand jury to investigate the liquor situation in Peoria county has been called to meet Monday.

A similar inquiry will get under way in Galesburg, wheer seevral deaths occurred.

Assistant State's Attorney Albert J. Weil of Peoria tonight expressed the belief that Maurice Mansfield, bootlegger, was not telling the truth when he "confessed" that he obtained the poisoned "alky" from Chicago "runners" and distributed it through this section of Illinois and even into Indiana.

According to government chemists, the "alky" contained 90 per cent wood alcohol, before the attempts of bootleggers to re-cook it and eliminate the poison, to render it fit for drinking. Weil said tonight he believed the efforts at re-cooking had taken out little of the wood alcohol.

Contained 15 Per Cent Poison.

The poison victims died after drinking liquor found to have contained 15 per cent wood alcohol.

Surprise was expressed by authorities today that the death and blindness toll has been as small as it was, in view of the fact that evidence indicates the poison liquor was wide distributed in this district.

Efforts of police tonight were centering in an attempt to find a giant still in which, it was beligved, the bootleggers made their attempt to re-cook the wood alcohol.

Mansfield, his wife and seven other persons, including one more woman, all have been named in murder warrants. State's Attorney Harry Pratt this afternoon intimated that when the cases come to trial the death penalty may be asked in some cases.

Delatour of Lewellen for $65,000, and will be opera ed as a stock ranch. It is one of the best improved ranches in the country, with several full sets of farm improvements, an irrigation system for part of the land, perpetual running springs, corralls and stockades and waterworks. GOVERNOR URGES CODE REVISION

Change Advocated in Address at Farmers Union Meeting.

Favors Taxing Intangibles and Tangibles On Same Basis.

A thorough revision of the state governmental system to do away with the duplication and appointive features of the code system was advocated by Governor Weaver in a political review given at a dinner held by the Lancaster County Farmer's Union at the chamber of commerce Saturday noon. About 150 attended.

The governor reviewed his stand on all the principal issues. Besides the code, he discussed the intangible tax law, the bank guaranty fund, and the gas tax.

The junking of the code system was urged to rid the present machinery of government of "excess baggage" and to change some of the present appointive offices to elective ones.

Should Be Taxed Alike.

Discussing the intangible tax, the governor said it had perplexed the state for the past forty-five years. Unseen property should be taxed on the same basis as tangibles, he said.

To support a Farmer's Union resolution against the intangible tax law would be a mistake and a backward step, the governor maintained, declaring that farm property and personal taxes bring in 64 per cent of the revenue of the state, and that intangible ought to be levied with the same mill tax as the farm property tax.

The governor urged the gas tax to connect county roads with the principal markets, and an income or luxury, or both, to make up the guaranty fund deficit. To keep the good name of the state a policy of redemption rather than repudiation should be followed, he said, adding that property already has been taxed to the limit.

Legislators There Also.

About a dozen state legislators were in attendance and some of them spoke. A round table followed the addresses.

Frank D. Eager, president of the chamber welcomed the Union delegates. Senator W. F. Dale of Lancaster presided and introduced the speakers.

Representative John Havekost of Dodge county, democrats, opened the political discussions. He declared the minority members of the house were almost squarely behind the governor in his efforts to support the intangible tax law.

He asserted that the financial situation of the state would be improved by levying a fair and equitable tax on property which cannot be seen as well as all property which can. He referred to the action of the constitutional convention at which Governor Weaver presided, when the intangible tax idea was given the stamp of approval.

Representative Havekost expressed the opinion that the exact cause of the bank guaranty shortage should be found out through a thorough investigation and that nothing satisfactory could be done until more definite information is obtained.

On the subject of the gas tax he declared his opposition to the four-cent tax. He thought the farmers of his county were against the measure.

Party lines have been almost meaningless in the decisions of the main issues during the present session of the legislature, Havekost declared.

Senator Charles Warner of Lancaster spoke on the bank question and Representative B. L. Hunt of Otoe county on "Lady Lobbyists." Senator Rickard of Guide Rock expressed his approval of the intangible tax law.

NEW PAMPHLET TELLS VISITORS OF CAPITOL ART

A nw leaflet for the information of visitors to the Nebraska capitol, which contains a list of all the symbolical panels, carvings, ornamental tile work, and paintings bothoutside and inside the building, has just been printed by the capitol commission.

The folder which is intended primarily as a guide and not a catalogue does not attempt a description of the various art murals, sculptural figures, and Mosaics, but gives the location of each individual specimen or group, together with a general idea of what it is intended to symbolize. A reproduction of the pioneer panel in bronze and gold, which is seen over the main entrance on the north side of the capitol, appears at the top of the first page.

Names of the capitol commission members, the architect, sculptor, mural and mosaic artists, and originator of the symbolistic figures and inscriptions are printed on the same page.

The leaflet, prepared by W. L. Younkin, superintendent of construction for the capitol, will not only enable visitors to see everything at the capitol but will also serve as a neat souvenir for them to take away..

Fred Ryons, Nebraska Student in '90s, Secured Degree in 1918

When Fred Ryons left the University of Nebraska in 1898, he lacked only a few hours for graduation.

He has never attended the university since that time, but when he returned during the past week as a visitor, it was as a graduate of the University of Nebraska.

Mr. Ryons, now president of the Occoquan Hydro-Electric Power Co., Occoquan, Va., is listed as having received his degree in 1918, but he never actually attended the university after 1898.

During the World war, Mr. Ryons served as captain of engineers, and was promoted to major. According to a ruling passed by the university in 1918, students lacking but a few hours credit were made eligible by engaging in military service, providing all requirements had been removed.

The college of engineering noticed Mr. Ryon's case, and wrote, asking him if he desired to have his degree. He accepted, and received a degree in civil engineering.

While in Lincoln Mr. Ryons is the guest of his mother, Mrs. R. J. Ryons, his sister, Miss Laura Ryons, and his brothers, W. B. Ryons and Arthur Ryons. During the week, he visited the college of engineering.

After the war, Mr. Ryons became lieutenant colonel on the general staff at Washington. He removed to Virginia after four years in Washington. Following the Spanish-American war, he was in Cuba with the engineers.

DISPUTE OVER CHILD SETTLED

The dispute over the custody of 8-year-old John Graham, which led his father, Elmer, to file a habeas corpus action in District court against the mother, Lena, apparently has been settled. District Judge Chappell, who issued the writ, ordered that the boy be released from the detention home and turned over to his grandparents at Firth. Mrs. Graham got a divorce in Wyoming along with custody of the child during school months. Mr. Graham feared, it was said, that she would take the boy back to Wyoming.

EVERYBODY TALKING ABOUT NEW MEDICINE

And Many Good, Reliable Lincoln Citizens Are Calling Daily at Harley's Drug Store, 11th and O Sts., to Tell of the Great Relief It Has Given Them.

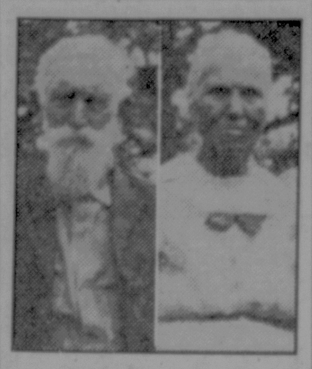

So many people have been benefited by the great nature medicine that the very name, "Miller's Herb Extract," formerly known as "Herb Juice," has become a household word everywhere. The results accomplished by this wonderful remedy are astonishing. Thousands of people not only in and around Lincoln, but in all sections of the United States are now praising and endorsing this great herbal tonic-laxative. Among the latest to call was Mr. Mark J. Burgess, well known city employe, who resides at 3727 Everett St., Lincoln, Neb., who had the following to say: "I'll certainly be a booster for your Herb medicine the rest of my life. It's a world beater."

MR. MARK J. BURGESS.

Continuing Mr. Burgess said, "I am indeed grateful for the wonderful benefit this great medicine has been in restoring my health, and I am only too glad of the opportunity to let other sufferers know about it. For some time I have been in a rundown condition. I suffered from several ailments, mostly constipation; indigestion, sour stomach, gas pains, nervousness and soreness and pains across the small of my back also gave me a great deal of trouble. I had always seemed to enjoy the best of health until I started suffering from constipation, then after it became chronic it caused all of the other troubles to arise—in short it had poisoned and disordered my whole system, making me feel bad all the time. I didn't have much appetite, and what little I did eat disagreed with me, was very nervous and restless and could many peopel praising this great herb medicine sleep soundly at night. As I heard so much I decided to try it. Today I can't say enough in praise to justify the good it has done me. It has cleansed, purified and regulated my whole system to the extent that I feel 100 per cent better in every way. Am now free from constipation and aches and pains, have a splendid appetite, no bad effects after eating, sleep soundly all night long and have more pep and energy than I have had in many a day. It's a world beater. I feel like a new man, and as above stated, I am only too glad to pass the good word on to other sufferers. Hundreds of people are calling to see the Herb Juice Company's special representative, at his headquarters at Harley's Drug Store, 11th and O Streets, Lincoln, voluntarily giving testimonials for publication, praising this great medicine that their friends may read and profit by their experience. By mail, postage prepaid, $1.10 per bottle—at store $1.00.—Advertisement.

TWO BOYS CAUGHT PILFERING PURSE ESCAPE PURSUER

Two boys thought to be about 15 years old and believed responsible for the theft of several gum machines recently, escaped Saturday night after L. L. Vroman, 510 North Fourteenth street, pursued them when he discovered them pilfering a pocket book at Fourteenth and S streets, shortly after 9:30 Saturday night.

Vroman was hiding in a truck on the chance that the boys would try to take a gum machine belonging to him, which was located there. He believes they had taken one of his machines about 5:30 Saturday evening.

The boys ran around the corner, Vroman told police Saturday night, and stopped and began to empty the contents of a lady's brown hand bag, but fled when he started after them. He called police, then followed the boys east on S street to Sixteenth, where they turned south and headed toward O street, when Vroman lost sight of them.

Vroman returned and picked up the pocket book and turned it over to police. It is believed the boys stole it from a car parked for the high school basketball games in the university coliseum. There was nothing in the pocketbook to indicate the identity of its owner. A check book had several stubs filled out but no name was found on it.

Vroman told Lieutenant of Detectives Rymer that he had noticed the boys hanging around for two or three days. He said one wore a gray suit and a black, felt hat, and that the other wore a leather jacket and a cap.

FARM MORTGAGE FIGURES LISTED

State Auditor Reports $3,059,721 More Canceled Than Recorded During Past Year.

As a result of an article published in the newspapers of February 17, showing the amount of farm mortgages satisfied to be larger than the amount filed during the calendar year 1928, numerous inquiries have been received by L. B. Johnson, state auditor, for comparative totals for farm mortgages filed and released for the calendar year 1927.

After omitting the four counties where the totals were affected by the release of large railroad mortgages, the figures show the total of farm mortgages filed for the year 1928 to be $84,458,211.13 and the aggregate of those released $87,517,932.76, or a difference of $3,059,721.63 more farm mortgages cancelled than recorded.

The figures show $98,074,631.55 of farm mortgages filed in 1927, as against $92,321,665.15 released, or an excess of $5,752,966.40 in mortgages given over the number discharged. The records of the auditor's office show that 1928, the first year since statistics have been kept of mortgages filed and released, that the amount under the latter heading exceeded the former.

Inquiries have also been numerous as to whether or not foreclosures are included in the amount of mortgages released and whether or not extension agreements are included in the amount filed.

Mr. Pearce, register of deeds of Douglas county, states that in his figures foreclosures do not show as mortgages released and that extension agreements are not included in the amount filed.

Mr. Wheeler, register of Lancaster county, says his report shows foreclosures as mortgages released, when certified to him by the clerk of the district court, but that extension agreements are not included in the amount filed.

Ralph C. Lawrence, bond examiner in the state auditor's office, thinks that, as a general rule in most of the counties, the clerk or register of deeds makes it his practice to include foreclosures in the amount released but not extension agreements in the total filed.

GREATER CITY EXPOSITION TO OPEN MONDAY

Doors of Coliseum Swing Wide at 7 O'clock Every Evening of Week.

40,000 TO ATTEND BIG ANNUAL EVENT

More Entertainment and Exhibits Than Ever Have Been Provided.

With more booths, more exhibits and better entertainment than ever before, the third annual Greater Lincoln Exposition opens Monday evening at the University Coliseum under the auspices of the Lincoln American Legion post.

Thirty thousand persons attended the show last year—forty thousand is the goal set for 1929.

The doors open at 7 o'clock each evening and close at 11. A 10 cent admission is charged to cover expenses.

Twenty-six stalls have been allotted to automobiles this year. All have been engaged and practically every Lincoln dealer will have some of his machines on display. Lack of space, however, prevented several from making their appearance.

Auto Show Is Featured.

The automobile show, the biggest yet put on here, is being emphasized. Many models that may be seen in it are unfamiliar to the public as they have not yet been delivered extensively.

There are 124 booths in the show, a considerable increase over last year's number, and they will be occupied by the wares of more than seventy exhibitors. Dozens of lines of commercial articles, from food to furniture, will be shown.

And besides that, there will be several booths that carry a civic interest for every resident of Lincoln.

In the first place, the postoffice will contribute an air mail display for the first time. An electrically lighted plane route map of the United States will be included, as well as a 7-foot model of a standard mail plane. Actual mailing facilities also will be provided in the both.

Several Free Booths.

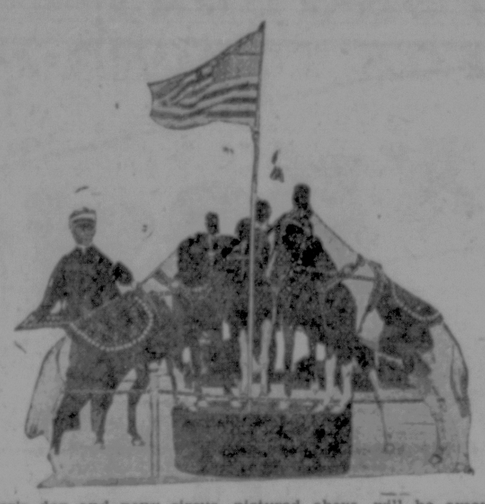

Then free booths have been granted by the American Legion to the Camp Fire Girls, the Boy Scouts the Lancaster County Humane Society, the industrial arts department of the Lincoln schools, and the Lincoln park department.

Plans of the present park system, as well as those for the expansions now under way, will be put up in the park booth.

Refreshments will be sold in the coliseum at two American Legion canteens.

The equipment used at the show is made up of standard exhibition appurtenances owned by the hardware association.

Pony Troupe to Entertain

Harper's dog and pony circus, pictured above, will be among the entertainment features at the third annual Greater Lincoln Exposition this week in the Coliseum.

REQUEST TO CUT COMPENSATION TO MORAN IS DENIED

The application of the London Guaranty & Accident Insurance Co. for a reduction in weekly compensation payments to Fred Moran of Lincoln was denied Saturday by the state labor commissioner.

Moran was injured in 1925 when an explosion occurred in the Westover Steel and Iron works. Following the accident he remained in the hospital for many months and also underwent two serious operations. He has been receiving $12 a week in compensation.

Through the department of vocational education he has started learning a new trade. The doctor's report, according to the labor commissioner, says that Moran is permanently disabled so far as carrying on his former trade is concerned. Also, his ability to do even the lightest kind of work has been impaired to the extent of 20 per cent, the order states.

TEST BRITAIN'S AERIAL POWER IN AFRICAN FLIGHTS

LONDON, March 9—(I. N. S.)—The British air ministry, so Universal Service learns, is planning next summer to begin experimental flights on the inauguration of a commercial and military airline from Cairo to Johannesburg which shall include flying boats and land planes.

When the air ministry's scheme resolves itself into actual operation some time within a year the distance of 5,000 miles between London and Johannesburg which now requires approximately two months to cover will be made in not more than six days by air route. Already aerodromes have been established in the heart of equatorial Africa after incredible labor.

In several instances jungle had to be cleared, necessitating the felling of thousands of trees, blasting of stumps and leveling off of ground. To insure a smooth surface for the landing had to be moved by native laborers who carried the dirt away in baskets. Some of these anthills were over 25 feet in height and 45 feet in diameter.

From one aerodrome in northern Rhodesia 25,000 tons of soil had to be removed. Blasting was tried and found not to be efficient and it took a gang of 700 coolies five months to complete the job.

When the new airline is opened flying boats will operate from Cairo to Kisumu whence land planes will cut down overland to Johannesburgh.

CAPITOL WILL BE OPEN EVERY DAY

To accommodate Nebraska citizens and other persons wishing to visit the new capitol, Governor Weaver announced Saturday that guides had been employed to conduct all visitors through the building every day, including Sundays and holidays. The guides will be on duty for that purpose at 2 p. m. every day, in the vestibule just inside the main north entrance. Heretofore the capitol has usually been closed on Sundays and holidays and guides were employed only on special occasions.

It was explained that the capitol would be open henceforth on Sundays and holidays, at the hour mentioned, because those days offer the best opportunity for many persons to visit the building. The guides are being employed in order that all visitors may see and fully appreciate the paintings, sculpturing and other art and architectural features of the structure. Leonard and Meredith Nelson, brother of Lincoln, and University of Nebraska students, have been employed as guides.

The governor also said a registration and information bureau will be conducted by Mrs. E. B. Fairfield, who operates the cigar and confectionery stand in the vestibule on the main floor. All visitors will be asked to write their names in the registration book.

CHEVROLET SETS OUTPUT RECORD

Over 100,000 New Sixes Manufactured In Forty-five Days.

Assurance that Chevrolet's position as "world's largest builder of automobiles" will be sustained again this year, is contained in official production figures which give 106,914 passenger car and truck units as output for the first 45 days production on the new sixes. This figure not only eclipses all previous records of manufacturers of six-cylinder cars, but actually exceeds the entire year's output of any other manufacturer during the first year.

The figures, as revealed by W. S. Knudsen, president of the company, date from December 15 to February 1. January production was 86,178, meaning that 20,736 units were produced the last two weeks of December.

A highlight of this remarkable 45 day production record was the manufacture, January 31, of 6,729 cars. This was peak for any day during the period and can be regarded as an indication that February would find all Cheyrolet's mammoth productive facilities geared to meet maximum quotas. Chevrolet's peak day as a producer of sixes does not compare unfavorably with the company's all time record for a single day, which occurred May 28, 1928, when 7,075 four cylinder units were produced.

Further comparison with last year shows that production this January is only 5,406 units less than January 1928, despite numerous handicaps incident to a changeover as hugh as Chevrolet effected successfully last fall. And it is 12,502 in excess of January, 1927, when 73,676 four cylinder units were turned out. Last falls' turnover involved 20 widely scattered plants, and called for an entirely new set of machine tools, patterns and dies. Replacements began while the company still was engaged intensively in volume production of last year's four cylinder car—an achievement, which for speed and efficiency, has never been surpassed in the industry.

Some interesting statistics relative to the turnover were recalled last week by Mr. Knudsen, who dcleared that the Flint Motor plant manufactured 12,000 motors, an average of better than 1,000 per working day, between November 15, when the six cylinder announcement was made, and December 1. During December, he related, 60,000 motors were produced, an average of better than 2,000 a day.

PANAMA CANAL'S PROFITS CAUSE OF CONTROVERSY

Row in Congress Arises When a 6.8 Per Cent Profit Disclosed.

WASHINGTON, March 9—(I. N. S.)—The Panama canal, America's largest government-owned and government-operated industry excepting the post office department, is making money, but just how much it is making is a matter of controversy among high government officials.

This was disclosed when the house appropriations sub-committee of the war department began to explore the value of the canal as a purely commercial asset.

Eliminating more than $100,000,000 of the cost of the canal as a national defense project, the canal earned 6.8 per cent in 1928 but figuring profits against the total investment the net return was slightly under 3 per cent, according to testimony of Col. Harry Burgess, governor of the canal zone.

Steamship Battle.

The controversy apparently does not arise so much from a difference of viewpoint on the question of government ownership as from the persistent effort on the part of steamship interest to secure lower toll rates through the canal.

Colonel Burgess, who opposes lowering rates at present, contends that the real earning power of the canal is slightly under 3 per cent on the basis of an investment of $386,000,000 and delinquent interest charges which bring the total to $540,000,000. Those who figure the higher earning rate point to the canal's books, which charge $113,127,000 to the national defense.

The canal, according to naval officials, has almost doubled the efficiency of the navy, by making it possible for the Atlantic and Pacific fleets to combine quickly.

The navy, it is estimated, would have to be increased 60 per cent in size and about 50 pe rcent in annual cost if the canal had not been built, and ships traveling from one ocean to the other had to round the southern tip of South America.

The canal made a cash return to the treasury in 1928 of more than $18,961,564.29 but interest charges amounted to more than $16,000,000.

Bonds Still Out.

About $125,000,000 of the original bonds issued for the construction of the canal are outstanding. When the canal was struggling for a start there were no net revenues to pay interest on the bonds and the canal officials in their bookkeeping now charge themselves with back interest.

The canal can easily handle its present business, according to Colonel Burgess. He estimates that it is now operating to 40 per cent capacity, handling on an average of 19 ships a da" against a total capacity of about 54.

He estimates that it will be 30 years before it is necessary to construct a new set of locks to handle increased business.

Importance of Tool Kit.

New cars are always equipped with a special tool kit, with which to meet emergencies that may arise. Those special tools, furnished by the manufacturer, should be preserved with care, because nothing else will meet the need quite so well. Tools need not take up unnecessary room, but can be packed into a compact space provided for them.

TEFFT RESIGNS FROM FACULTY

Assistant Law Professor Accepts Position at Chicago University.

Sheldon Tefft, assistant professor of law at the University of Nebraska since 1927, has tendered his resignation to accept the position of visiting associate professor of law at the University of Chicago, according to an announcement made Saturday by Chancellor E. A. Burnett.

Mr. Tefft came to the University of Nebraska in 1927 to take the place of Prof. E. M. Dodd, jr., who went to the University of Chicago, and later to Harvard. Mr. Tefft will receive $1,500 a year more at Chicago than he does at Nebraska, with possibilities of advancement to a $10,000 position. Mr. Tefft said Saturday that he greatly regrets leaving Nebraska, but the inducements, financial and otherwise, offered by the University of Chicago, are such that he has felt obliged to accept. It is understood that he will take the courses offered at Chicago that were given by Professor Dodd.

After graduating from the high school at Weeping Water, Mr. Tefft came to the University of Nebraska in 1918. He received his A. B. degree in 1922 and won Phi Beta Kappa honors. In 1924 he received his LL. B., Cum Laude, from the college of law. During his attendance at the university, he also distinguished himself as a debater. In 1924 he was appointed Rhodes scholar from Nebraska and entered Exeter college, Oxford, England, where he graduated with the distinction of being the first American to win the Vinerian scholarship. This scholarship is the highest distinction open to law students at Oxford and was founded by the same benefactor who endowed the lectureship at Oxford made famous by Blackstone.

"Mr. Tefft is a native Nebraskan of unusual ability. His resignation brings us face to face with the pressing problem of holding the younger members of our faculty at the University of Nebraska," said Chancellor Burnett in commenting on the resignation. "While we probably shall never be able to meet the offers of great eastern universities, we should at least be able to keep our most promising young men here for a considerable time. By our low salary scale we invite competition for our younger as well as for our older men."

A Tire Tip.

Sometimes a tire becomes damaged by striking the curb or some object, breaking the inner wall, but leaving the outer walls intact. It is always advisable to have a reliable tire repair man vulcanize a piece in at once, as delay will cause additional damage to the tire and possibly chafe another hole in the tube.

COUZENS PRAISES CHEST PLAN FOR SOCIAL SERVICE

Michigan Senator Extolls System on Tenth Anniversary.

350 Cities Now Have Centralized Welfare Agencies.

The tenth anniversary of the community chest plan of financing and administering local philanthropies, culminating in a conspicuously successful inauguration a month ago in the city of Washington, was the subject Saturday of a statement by United States Senator James Couzens of Michigan who extolled the chest method as "one of the country's major instruments for guaranteeing adequate public attention to the social order in this era of intense preoccupation with industrial and commercial expansion."

The chest plan has spread from twenty cities in 1919 to 350 cities and towns, Lincoln adopting the plan in 1923. In the six years that the chest has been in operation here, $576,403 has been raised for the maintenance of chest agencies. This amount represents only one-third of the funds spent in Lincoln for welfare and character building work, the chest agencies being two-thirds self supporting which means that $1,729,209 has been spent in behalf of community welfare during the past six years in Lincoln.

Has Built Up Co-Operation.

In addition to increased efficiency in raising and administering welfare funds, the chest and council of social agencies have built up the closest and most satisfactory co-operation of welfare, civic and educational organizations that has existed in the history of Lincoln.

This month marks the tenth birthday of the community chest in the perfected form in which it is now functioning over the country. There were sporadic attempts at federated financing and planning of welfare work prior to 1919, but it was not until then, following the impetus of the war period, that the idea took permanent hold and began to grow.

In his statement Saturday Senator Couzens, speaking as one of the pioneers in focusing national attention upon the plan, and also as chairman of the board of the community fund in his home city of Detroit, says:

"The community chest movement has had a rapid growth during its ten years of existence and has become one of the country's major instruments for guaranteeing adequate public attention to the social order in this era of intense preoccupation with industrial and commercial expansion. It has enabled welfare enterprise to keep pace with business and to pass on the fruits of prosperity to people in need of aid and encouragement, and those who have recognized the merits of the idea from the beginning are looking forward to still more rapid development under the influence of the new national administration. President Hoover has been a student and supporter of the chest since its inception, realizing that, by raising the tone of community life wherever it operates, it has been distinctly an asset of national significance.

"The rapid growth of the movement is attributable to the fact that it has proved itself peculiarly adapted to this period of post-war devotion to business and economic progress. The last decade has been one of marked impatience with desultory methods in all lines of endeavor. With such a spirit in the ascendant, vitally necessary welfare, health and educational activities would have been seriously jeopardized under the disorganized and competitive way in which their financial needs had previously been presenetd. The people would have had no time to participate in endless individual 'drives,' and the resultant neglect of local social service, in spite of prevalent prosperity, would soon have become a matter of national conecrn. It is no wonder, then, that welfare work has, with few exceptions, fared so much better in communities having chests than in those in which have not had them.

"It is peculiarly fitting that, in this tenth anniversary year, the two latest evidences of the vitality of the movement should have come from the capital city and from the nation's metropolis. Washington has just adopted the plan, and its first campaign, ending in February, was a conspicuous success. The goal was $1,343,000, and in record time went 'over the top' with $1,475,000, giving the city a sense of civic unity such as it had not experienced since the war. In New York, where the problem of welfare administration is more complex than anywhere else, the welfare council, I am informed, whose business it is to co-ordinate the work of some 1,200 agencies, has approved a study of central financing and is submitting a plan of inquiry to its constituents.

Raised Over $70,000,000.

"The year 1919 found but twenty cities holding in permanent form the united fund-raising structures erected for war-time purposes. Now there are 350 chests which have raised over $70,000,000 for welfare, health and character-building work in 1929, and the National Association of Community Chests and Councils, at its headquarters in New York City, is constantly receiving requests for advice and guidance in chest organization.

"The community chest was not a creation of the war, as many of the 'war chests' did not provide for peace-time work, but it was nevertheless the war which gave the movement impetus nationally. By dramatizing in a time of emergency the potentialities of united effort, the war hastened the development of a movement which had been born as early as 1887 in Denver and which had been recognized prior to 1917 in many cities such as Cleveland, Dayton, Baltimore and Detroit."

WORLD BECOMES AMERICANIZED

Survey by Geographic Society Discloses U. S. Influence.

Borneo, China, Africa And Remote Places Are Affected.

WASHINGTON, March 9—(I. N. S.)—American mass production of practically every living necessity and luxury is Americanizing the world.

In the world's most remote sections American customs are being adopted or aped, often in the most singular manner, a survey by the National Geographic society has found.

The prime minister of Nepal has a grand staircase in his palace which is artistically lined with slot machines and mechanical scales. They are polished brightly and undoubtedly enhance the beauty fo the staircase to a marvelous degree, but they are not used.

Another ruler, who sways the destinies of a Borneo principality, has in his electrically lighted and refrigerated palace a fleet of luxurious and shining motor cars—in which he delights to whiz back and fourth over the mile and a half of specially constructed road which constitutes the road system of his country.

Strange Fancies.

African natives wear American running trunks for shirts, thrusting their arms through the leg openings. Five gallon American kerosene cans are used in Kamchatka and Bakar for water buckets, and in Beersheba cans of this same type draw water from the wells from which Abraham and Sarah used to quench their thirst of old. Arabs, abandoning their tents, use the cans to build tin houses.

Although none of his family plays a note, a Chinese merchant has installed a piano in each of the four corners of his parlor.

An American manufacturer discovered through the Department of Commerce that the large quantities of pearl buttons, each sewed to a square of red flannel, which he had been sending to a South American country, were being used by Indian women to make dresses.

However, not all American export products are being used so capriciously.

In China it is the height of fashion to have the kerosene lamps which are fast disappearing here.

Hundreds of business office fixtures, headed by the typewriter, are educating foreign countries to American business methods.

Motion pictures featuring the modern exotic bathroom scenes have suggested to millions of the unwashed the pleasant possibilities of bathing and thus helped American plumbing manufacturers.

Phonographs have not only tuned the Oriental ear to the Occidental eight-note scale but have increased the foreign musical instruments.

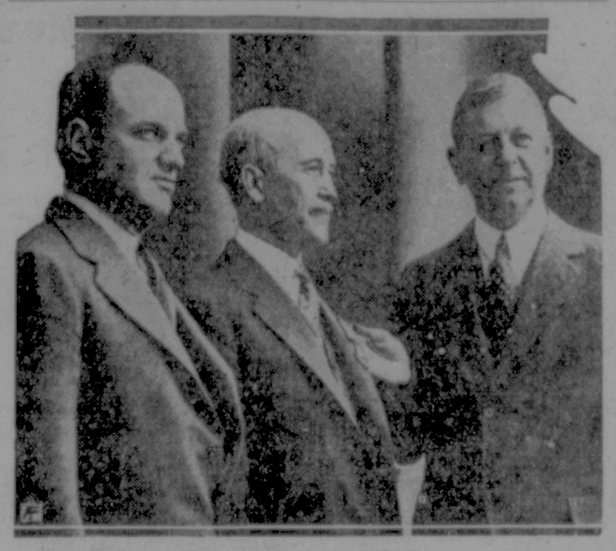

Foreign Demands.

Foreign sales of athletic goods have greatly increased by the exploits of one Dempsey, pugilist whose clean-ups in the ring have inspired youths of all colors to test the dexterity of their fists for profit. Many of them now hold prominent places in the American arena.

Here are a few other statistics, listed in the Department of Commerce publication, "What the World Wants:"

Java wants slot machine, garters, and flashlights; Costa Rica, automobile hearses; India, outboard motors, smoke-writing apparatus for airplanes, plumbing fixtures and silk hosiery; Manchuria, phonographs; Malaya, more progressive, automatic phonograph record changers and radio sets; British Guiana, rebuilt typewriters; England, grapefruit, (a delicacy the English are just beginning to appreciate); Mexico, bathing suits; and Denmark, overalls and vanity cases.

Air Pioneers Receive Medal

Orville Wright, center, was presented the distinguished flying cross and that awarded posthumously to his brother, Wilbur Wright, in recognition of their pioneering efforts in aviation. Secretary Davis of the war department, right, made the presentation in the presence of F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary, left.

Professionals Are to Provide Entertainment

Entertainment at the Greater Lincoln Exposition this year will be by professionals, with the exception of one act which will have the distinction of being made up of local girls in "follies" costumes.

At 7:30 o'clock each evening, the Harper dog and pony circus will appear on the stage. Then the regular evening program calls for the Bauer ring act at 8:15 o'clock, the Bauer aerial act at 9:15 o'clock, and the follies revue at 10 o'clock.

Saturday evening, however, the follies will be at 8:15, the Bauer ring act at 9:15, and the aerial act at 10.

The Bauers, who style themselves "the monarchs of the air," are two—a man and a woman. Their ring stunts are performed on the great stage of the Coliseum. Their aerial act will take place over the heads of the spectators.

A dozen or more Lincoln girls, all with some experience in professional appearances, will participate in the revue. It will be built on the well-known lines of a "follies" entertainment and the girls will wear brilliant and especially designed costumes.

Worth Remembering.

A heavy load affects the brakes of some types of cars, where the brake mechanism is attached to the frame. The rear springs flatten out and tighten the brake rods. When parking, the brakes should be set again after the load is removed.

Modernize YOUR HOME WITH AN

ELECTROL OIL BURNER

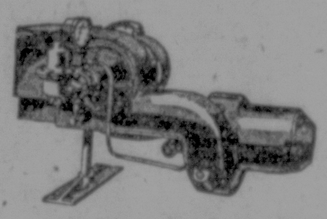

An ELECTROL oil burner installed in your old furnace may make it unnecessary to buy a new one.

In installing an Electrol we remove your grates and build in a new pot anyway, therefore, if your old grates are gone and your fire pot burned out, this may make no difference to a good ELECTROL installation.

With an ELECTROL burning fuel oil, you can heat your home, large or small, cleanly, quietly, safely, absolutely automatically and as CHEAPLY AS YOU CAN WITH COAL.

An Electrol will increase the heating capacity of any furnace 30%. You can put more heat in your furnace with an Electrol than you ever could with coal or a pot type burner, and you can maintain that heat at its maxium for any length of time desired.

The ELECTROL is 100% electric. It lights itself electrically, heats your home to the temperature set on your thermostat then turns itself off. There is no gas pilot light to light—to watch—to worry about or to pay $4 to $8 per month for.

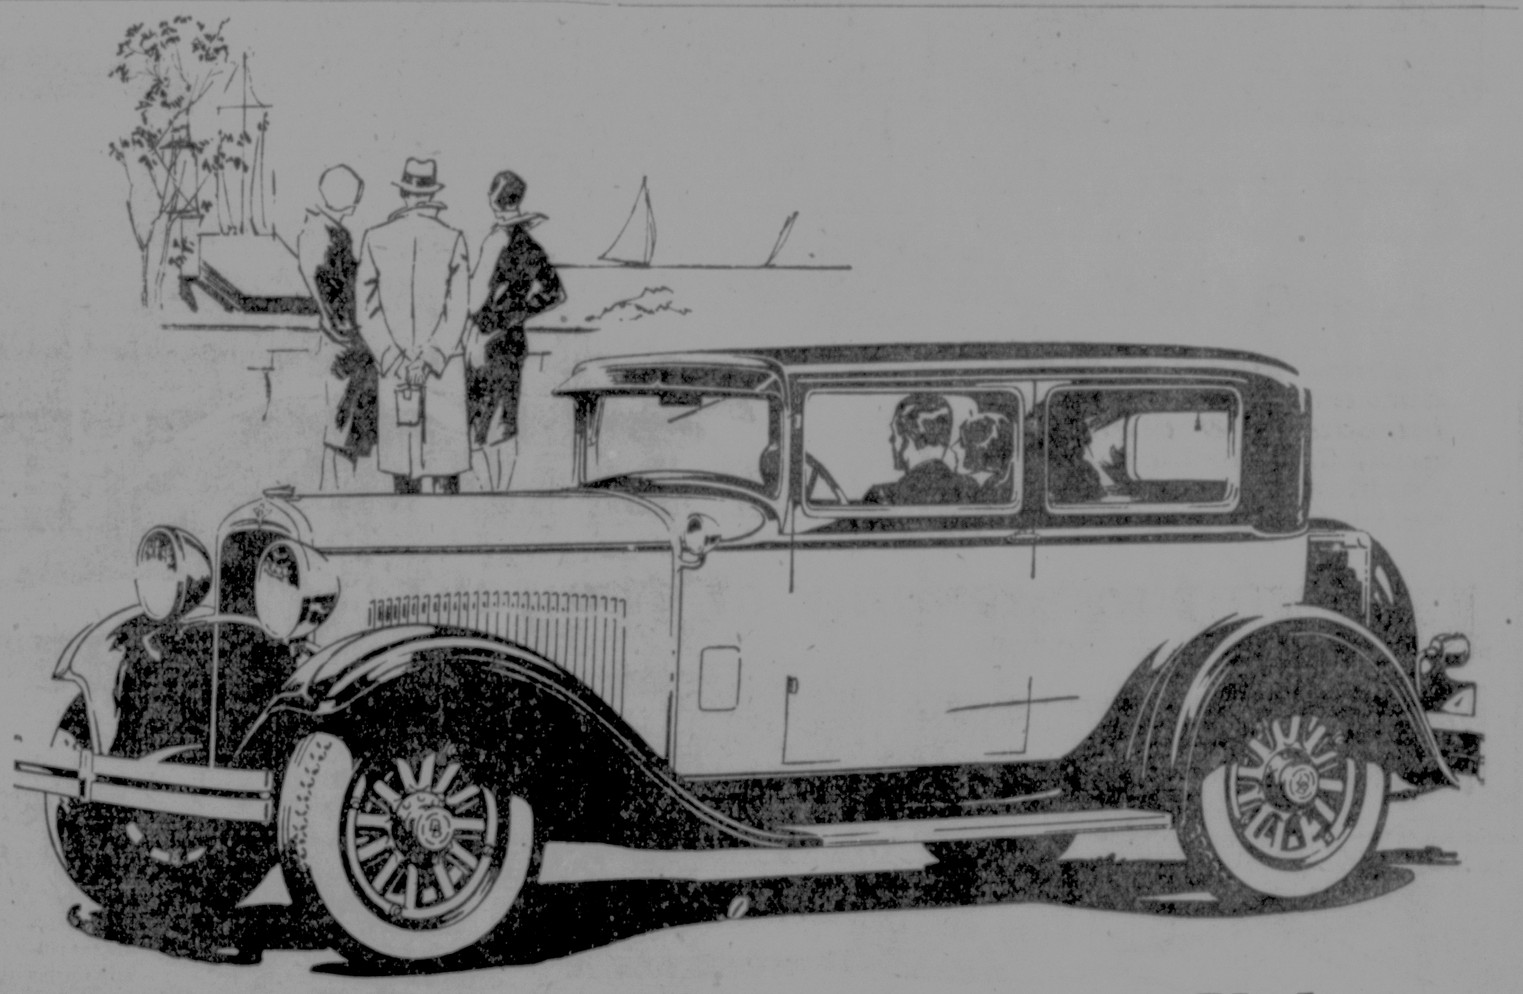

WE CAN install an ELECTROL any day between the hours of 7 a. m. and 6 p. m. and NOT ALLOW the temperature of your home to drop 20 degrees.

SEEK DECREASE DILUTION OF OIL

Oakland Engineers Perfect Devices to Aid Lubrication.

Thermostatic Control, Crankcase Ventilation Introduced.

Lack of proper lubrication is the principal reason why many motor cars must either be scrapped or given expensive service attention after only two or three years of operation, according to Oakland Motor Car Co. automotive engineers.

The most common cause of faulty lubrication is found in dilution of the oil in the crankcase. As dilution reduces the viscosity of the oil, the rate of wear on moving parts rapidly increases.

Two principal sources combine to cause this oil dilution. The first source of dilution is the water formed during combustion through the chemical combination of hydrogen in the gasoline and oxgen in the air. Almost a gallon of water is formed for every gallon of gasoline consumed. The second source of dilution is found in unburned or imperfectly burned gasoline which remains in the cylinders especially when the choke is used to start the engine.

Two-fold Protection.

In motor cars of modern design such as the Oakland and Pontiac sixes, the crankcase oil is protected in two ways from this two-fold dilution—first by thermostatic control of engine temperature and second by crankcase ventilation.

In a cold automobile engine only a small portion of the gasoline becomes vaporized. And only vaporized gasoline will burn. The normal mixture ratio in a warm engine is approximately thirteen parts of air to one part of vaporized gasoline. But when the chill of a cold engine permits only a fraction of the gasoline to vaporize, the mixture ratio becomes so disturbed that the engine must be choked. The choke cuts off part of the air supply to the carburetor with the result that the engine receives ten or twelve times the normal amount of gasoline. This is necessary in order to provide that one part of vaporized gasoline required to produce combustion.

The remaining portion of liquid gasoline has insufficient time to burn during the brief period of the explosion. A small amount of this liquid gasoline may partially burn, leaving the kerosene "low ends." This kerosene and unburned liquid gasoline works down past the piston rings and drops into the crankcase, diluting the oil.

The thermostat which prevents circulation of water in the cooling system until engine heat reaches 140 degrees, reduces the period of imperfect vaporization and naturally shortens the time during which this type of dilution may occur. Engines not so protected warm up slowly and suffer a consequent increase in dilution by gasoline.

May Use More Oil.

The average driver who replaces an old style automobile by a car equipped with thermostatic control and crankcase ventilation, frequently complains that "the new car uses a lot of oil." The explanation is quite simple. Every automobile consumes oil just as it does gasoline in direct proportion to the average driving speed. Higher speed results in higher consumption of both gas and oil.

In an engine that lacks crankcase ventilation and thermostatic control, the oil level may appear satisfactory after several hundred miles of operation. In some cases the oil level actually may rise. But analysis of the oil would reveal a large percentage of dilution from gasoline, kerosene and water. Oil is being consumed but dilution is holding up the level.

No sane man would fill his crankcase with a mixture of oil, water, kerosene and gasoline. Yet that is exactly what happens in such cars, the dilution increasing with every mile of travel up to 500 miles when the lubricating value of the oil falls below the point of safety. The old style car requiring frequent oil changes and the modern type represented by Oakland and Pontiac requiring gradual replenishment over a long period of time consume approximately the same amount of oil, a slight advantage resting with the latter design. However, the modern type enjoys a greater length of life because, under normal driving conditions, it always receives complete lubrication from clean oil.

NEW YORK STATE WILL ADVERTISE

ALBANY, N. Y., March 9—(I.N.S.)—The New York state legislature has been asked to appropriate $300,000 to advertise industrial, recreational and agricultural resources of the commonwealth.

The request was made by the New York Development Association, Inc., an organization of civic associations, devoted to this purpose.

Such a policy of exploitation, the association pointed out, is formulated on sound economic theory.

The entertainment of tourists for instance ,has become a very substantial industry with an enormous cash income which is very widely and equitably distributed throughout the regions visited.

Advertising, according to the association, has more than repaid the states of California, Florida and Minnesota, which have from one-eighth to one-tenth the number of available tourist prospects within a reasonable traveling distance than has New York.

Advocating also that the legislature enact a gasoline tax of two cents so as to make the tourists pay for the use of the state highways, the association maintained that revenues from such a tax would relieve the farmers of highway levies as well as educational assessments. The greater the stream of tourists resulting from advertising, the greater the income of the state.

"With respect to our manufacturing industries," the association told the legislature, "careful studies of the national industrial conference board very clearly show that the Empire state is gradually falling behind competing states. Certainly the state should provide some official source of information for the use of individuals, firms or corporations desiring to establish manufacturing plants.

ESSEX SPEED IS SHOWN IN TESTS

Car Makes Beatrice to Lincoln Run in 35 Minutes.

An Essex four door sedan driven by a Lincoln representative accompanied by two passengers made a record run last Tuesday from the city limits of Beatrice to the south limit of Lincoln in thirty-five minutes and forty-seven seconds.

This was only one of the local tests to which Essex cars were subjected during national Essex Challenger week. Tests were conducted in every large city of the country to prove the speed, power and stability of the car.

In the Beatrice-Lincoln run, two newspapermen acted as official timekeepers, holding stop watches which tallied exactly at the end. Due to heavy snows the road was not in the best condition, with only a comparatively solid track through the center. Fifteen vehicles were passed en route. The drive includes six turns, five railroad crossings, four narrow bridges and two towns.

Many times the brakes had to be applied to break the speed of the car as soft roads, bumps, turns and other cars were encountered. Those who made the trip praised the car's easy caceleration to around seventy miles per hour, and its smooth ridding qualities at that rate of speed.

Auto Notes

Save the Glycerine.

The glycerine, used as an antifreeze agent, can be used for more than one season and the cost of the solution will not become excessive when considered over a period of years. When spring arrives, the liquid can be drained out, put in bottles and tightly corked. In the fall this same material can be put back into the radiator, with perhaps the necessity of adding a small amount of new material each year.

Clean Windows a Joy to Motoring.

Clean, shining windows and windshield add to the pleasure of motoring. Wash the inside of the glass with clear tepid water applied with a chamois. Polish with the chamois wrung dry. Carefully wipe off any loose mud and dust from the outside and, with a soft cotton cloth, apply a thin covering of a mixture made in the following way: Stir together an ounce each of powdered whiting, denatured alcohol and liquid ammonia, and one pint of water. Allow the application to dry on the glass, after which rub it off with a clean cloth and polish. Amazingly clean and brilliant windows will result.

Attention to Brakes.

Brakes, responsible for many accidents, should be kept in the best of condition—both sets of them. They should bind tightly when pressure is applied to them, and be free and clear when the pressure is released. Should the brake band bind when pressure is taken from it, friction is produced and the car runs with difficulty. Slipping brakes can be traced to worn brake linings, grease on the shoes, or poor adjustment. If the brake lining is worn it should be replaced at once, as it may fail to hold at the next emergency. Sometimes the lining, if not too much worn, can be put in good shape again by taking up the turn buckle but a worn brake lining is never to be relied upon. Should there be grease between the brake surfaces it can be washed out with a little gasoline. If the lining is of leather, neatsfoot oil or castor oil may be used to advantage.

A Motorist's First Worry.

The first indication of trouble in the engine is the carbon knock. It is the cause of an accumulation of carbon in the combustion chambers. This carbon comes from insufficiently ignited fuel, which in turn is the result of choking the engine while it is being warmed up, or feeding too heavy a mixture through the carburetor, or allowing the lubricating oil to get so thin that it can creep past the piston rings into the combustion chambers. This trouble can be averted by proper attention to the car at the proper time. The choke need not be used more often than is essential in starting. The carburetor should be adjusted for a heavier mixture in winter than in summer, but it should not be so heavy as to cause much waste of fuel. The lubricating oil should be watched carefully and renewed before it gets too thin. If the car is started properly and the driver is patient, the choke need not be used except at the very start of the motor. The motor may be run just fast enough to keep it from stalling, and yet not too fast for racing a cold engine. With patience, the motor may thus be warmed up and much fuel and trouble saved.

When Stuck in the Mud.

One of the best plans to get a car out of a mud hole, especially if back wheels spin around, is to get a piece of plank 6 inches wide or wider and about 5 or 6 inches long and notch it on each side near the middle. Tie a rope around it at these notches, put the plank down lengthwise in front of the wheel with the end firmly against the tires (put it behind the wheel if you are going to back out) and tie the other end of the rope to a spoke. When the wheel turns it has to climb up and onto the plank where it will get the necessary grip to move the car.

Requisites of a Good Driver.

Intelligence ranks far above strength in the medical analysis of what counts in the success and safety in piloting an automobile. A driver with sight and hearing above the average, and muscles acting quickly and smoothly together, but with a slow brain is regarded as a poor driver. He is declared to be more dangerous on the road than a one-armed man who has a brain quick in response to the impulses coming in from eyes and ears. For the eyes and ears and muscles are the more mechanical parts of the combination.

Inferior Oil Ruins Car.

Proper lubrication is one of the most vital elements in the life and performance of automobiles. Cheap or poor quality of oil will snap connecting rods, break the crankshaft, freeze the pistons, ruin the cylinders or bring on any number of troubles that mean big repair bills, or even dangerous accidents. Inferior oil is bound to cause excessive wear and tear on every moving part.

Home Rule for Scotland May Be Accorded by Parliament

NEW YORK, March 9—A home rule movement in Scotland is meeting with increasing approval north of the English border and is likely to be granted before long by the British parliament. The agitation is in large part the result of the successful working of Irish home rule. The Scotch people want the right to pass on their own exclusive affairs and are showing dissatisfaction with the present necessity of submitting their requirements to the house of commons for sanction.

Whether Scotch representation will be continued in the London parliament or whether Scotland finally will demand an entire separation of legislative activities has not yet been determined. Both systems are in operation under Irish home rule. The Irish Free State does not send representatives to Westminster any more than Canada does. But the North of Ireland continues to have representatives in the national parliament while at the same time maintaining parliamentary government in Ulster.

It is probable that Scotland will follow the example of Ulster, at least during the early period of home rule. There are advantages in such a procedure, since Scotland and England are geographically united and also because the Westminster government must continue to direct foreign affairs. It would be a serious disadvantage if Scotch ability and finesse were not to play any part in guiding British international relations.

Scotland's home rule demand is likely to be followed by a similar demand by Wales. When both of these developments are realized, there will then be five parliaments in the British Isles, the two in Ireland, the Scotch, Welsh and English. A federal system, somewhat like that of the United States thus will be in process of evolution. Each local parliament will devote itself exclusively to its own affairs, somewhat like the American state legislatures, except that the English parliament will also control foreign relations. This double function of the English legislators will have possibilities of complications which can only be worked out in practice.

If the other "states" within the British Isles send members to Westminster, the question will arise whether they shall have any vote in matters concerning England exclusively. There will be no English representatives in the other parliaments and if the Scotch, Welsh and Irish are given a voice in passing legislation for Englishmen, there are possibilities of discord.

Eventually, it is likety that after the separate parliaments are created, members other than those representing English constituencies, who sit at Westminster will be permitted to vote only on international questions or such other "states." Such an outcome may lead to the British self-governing colonies also sending delegates to London to participate in international matters. An entire readjustment of governmental activities in the British Empire is thus in the making.

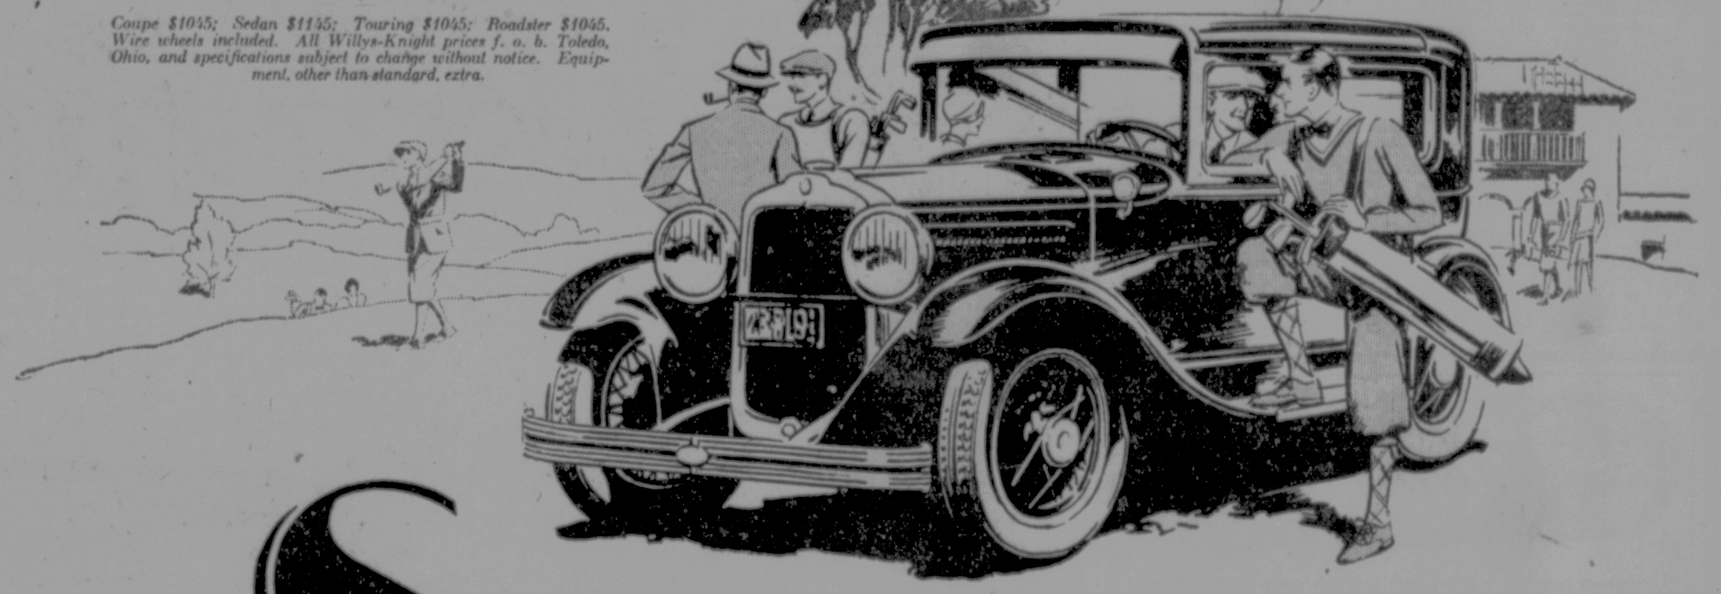

The British cabinet, under so complicated a development, would assume an entirely different complexion from its present character. It might tend to resemble the German system. In Germany, although the federal government sits in Berlin, it does not control the internal affairs of Prussia. There is a Prussian ministry as well as a German ministry. So, there may be two ministries in London, one controlling English affairs, composed entirely of representatives of English voters, and the other controlling foreign and inter-British affairs.

The matter of supporting the British fleet would assume a difficult phase under a federal British system. Coptributions from the component parts of the federation would have to be exacted; but the British colonies would probably object to any levies assessed on them. At present, they make occasional gifts of warships to the British navy but do not support the London admiralty with proportionate money grants. They desire the benefits of the navy's protection at very little cost to themselves. This is one of the complications of the future, which full-fledged federation may cause. It is characteristic, however, of the British people not to try to solve difficulties in advance. The federal idea seems certain of eventual realization, but the movement will be step by step and one difficulty at a time will be dealt with.

St. Paul Retains Laurels as High Cage Champ

Apostles Ahead In Cage Thriller

Champions of Last Year Victorious Over Hastings In Finale of State Prep Tournament.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

The blooded race horse delivers in the blue ribbon turf event, fistic champions have the winning punch in title bouts, world champion baseball clubs hit in the pinches and conference football champions come in with the bacon at every turn of the road.

It's the old story that class tells and the champion of any sport is supposed to have "It" when under the fire of heated competition.

Saints In Driving Finish.

Saturday night in the University of Nebraska coliseum the championship basketball team of St. Paul high school which carried off top honors in the 1928 tourney, staged one of the most thrilling comebacks in tournament history to beat Hastings, 25-22, in an over-time game and win the 1929 championships.

Trailing by four points, with scarcely more than 30 seconds to play, Coach Pat Panek's St. Paul team rang up the four points necessary to tie the score and proceeded to beat out the Tigers in an etxra session of wild scoring.

It was the fourth time a school has scored consecutive championships, Omaha Tech having repeated on one occasion and Lincoln cashing in with two doubleheaders.

Thrilling Finale.

The tourney finale, if not the most thrilling in the history of the cage classic, certainly was the most nerve-racking since the good old days when the boys used to hold forth in the city auditorium. The crowd of more than 5,000 people howled itself hoarse during the Hastings rally, which shot the Tigers from nowhere to tie the score and then forge to the front of the defending champions. The roar swelled as the Tigers grabbed what appeared to be a safe lead. Then St. Paul's delegation of 400 rooters added their voices to the bedlam.

With Hastings leading, 19-15, and about 30 seconds remaining, Lynch got loose back of the foul ring and pitched one through the hoop for a needed two points. After Hastings had teamed the ball up the court, the Saints gained possession and hurried it down to Swallow, a guard, who had slipped through the Hastings defense. Swallow potted one from close-in just a second before the timer's pistol barked the end of the second half.

Riot of Noise.

The extra period was a riot, with each team racing up and down the court and scoring like mad. With the howling 5,000 cheering and pleading for points, the athletes rose to the occasion like inspired men and in the give-and-take three minutes of the extra period, the teams tossed defense to the four winds and counted nine points, with the Saints controlling the play as the result of the lead established when Lynch tossed the first basket.

The gallant stand made by Hastings in the tourney finale brought glory to a team which fought hard every inch of the way and rose from what appeared to be a discouraging handicap to actually take the play away from the champions.

Fine Fight By Tigers.

Forced to cope with superior height and a more experienced team, the Tigers were trailing 11-4 at the half. Sensational guarding completely shut out the Apostles during the third period and a spectacular fourth period rally threatened to carry the title award to the Adams county seat.

The fact that Hastings' defense cracked in those late minutes brought no reflection on the Hastings showing. The Adams county boys were fighting just as hard, but the comeback ability of St. Paul, demonstrated in two previous tournament starts, told—the champions were not to be denied.

Before the class A game got under way, Regent M. A. Shaw of David City presented the winning and runnerup team captains in the lower classes with trophies. After the court was cleared, the Hastings and St. Paul squads came on the floor for a preliminary warmup.

FIRST QUARTER.

St. Paul got the first tip and E. Davis missed one from the side. Hoerner got the ball of the backboard and Hastings raced up the

LISKA PRIZE OF SENATORS' CAMP

Dwight Boy Shows Goods By Making Monkey of Manager.

Big Train Mark for Ad's Stuff; Bool and Gooch Also In Line.

Lincoln baseball fans will be "keeping cases" on the Washington Senators with a more than ordinary interest. What's the answer? Three former Lincoln players are trying out with the Senators under the watchful eye of Manager Walter Johnson at the Tampa, Fla., camp.

This trio includes Adolph Liska, Links pitching tryout in 1927; Albert Bool, catcher for Lincoln's state league Links of 1922, and Charlie Gooch, with Lincoln's Western leaguers during a part of the season of 1926. Early reports from Tampa suggest that all three may make the big league grade.

Ad Fools His Manager.

Liska, for instance, has caught the fancy of Manager Walter, one reason being that Adolph made a monkey of his manager during a recent batting practice.

Bool, the reports say is so good that he stands a chance to anchor himself as the Senators' refgular backstopper, while Gooch is a serious contender for the vacancy at the second sack.

The St. Louis Sporting News publishes the following account, under Tampa date line, of the activities of Liska, Bool and Gooch at the Florida training camp:

Candidate for Second.

"Charley Gooch, former Little Rock infielder, who showed an agumentative disposition, has accepted terms, and departed from his home in Los Angeles for camp. He performed at third base last year, but is versatile, and has been suggested as still another factor in the keystone problef.

Billy Smith, assistant secretary of the Senators, and well known as a successful pilot of teams in the big minors, is out with a strong boost for Gooch and Catcher Bool, about whom he has been flooded with dope by his Southern league cronies, all of which is of the most encouraging kind.

Bool Has Real Goods.

"One of Smith's informants is so sold on Bool that he predicts the youngster will take the first-string job away from Muddy Ruel. This would be some jolt, but whether or not there is any chance of that, all are agreed that in throwing, batting and blocking the plate he has the

Brass Tacks by Cy Sherman

Old "Rip" Still Asleep. Why Protect Cheaters? Jack's Scrap of Paper. Once Plenty for Mickey.

Big town news hounds, meaning those who hold forth in New York, were made to look foolish by their failure to corral some of the important details of the recent session of the national football rules committee in the Atlantic coast region. When the meeting was declared adjourned, the Gotham publicity scouts dug up the news that the "fumbled ball" rule had been written into the statutes but failed utterly to discover that the rule makers had enacted legislation to curb the activities of the tricky coaches who have been slipping "bootleg" footballs into the game.

Not until Mike Ahearn, director of athletics at Kansas Aggie college and member of the national committee, returned to Manhattan did the information leak that the "bootleggers" had been put out of business.

Credit for the announcement belongs to R. I. Thackrey, Manhattan correspondent of The Star, who interviewed Mr. Ahearn and wired the news to this newspaper for publication in last Sunday's issue. Thanks to Mr. Thackrey, The Star "beat" the east a full week or more. Three days later, the Gotham newspapers woke up to the importance of the rules committee's action and put a belated story on the press wires.

Expose of the "bootlegging" racket and the declaration by the national committee that certain coaches had been playing sly tricks on unsuspecting opponents was something of a shock to the football public, which for years has been fed on yarns calculated to create the belief that college football stands for the highest standards of sportsmanship.

In the main, the college game is highly worthy of commendation, but the millenium isn't with us yet and neither is a coaching fraternity that is 100 per cent perfect. In other words, at least a few of the mentors will bear watching quite as close as in the days when some of them were slipping iron plates into head gears, shoulder and hip pads or pulling similar stunts intended to gain an unfair advantage.

Introduction of a standard football—standard as to weight, air pressure and measurement—and the barring of the "bootleg" article, by which one coach grabbed an advantage by using a ball designed to favor his own kicker, to the detriment of an opponent which stressed forward passing, or else worked his racket the other way around, was a smart move by the national rule makers.

The chief regret provoked by the incident is that the national committee failed to make public the identity of the coaches who were guilty of working the "bootleg" game, thus giving the great college sport a darkened optic. If there are crooks and cheats in football the public would like to have their names spread on the record. The sport could right well, go along without them.

Jack Kearns, managerial sly fox of fist fighting, has put one over on Paul Prehn, head of the state boxing commission in Illinois and chief executive of the national boxing association. The Jocko person, it appears, has given his check for ten thousand as a guarantee that he will pit his protege, Mickey Walker, against Ace Hudkins or "some worthy challenger" in a middleweight title brawl during the coming summer. Said guarantee was demanded by the gullible Illinois commissioner as a condition to the granting of a permit for the Walker-Loughran bout in Chicago late this month.

After Jocko and Mickey have gathered in considerable kale from the March event, Paul's job will be to force a showdown, meaning a Walker-Hudkins battle, or collect on the check. In doing either, Paul would have to be nothing less than a wizard. Paul probably could qualify as a trusting soul, but as a wiz we fear he hasn't even started.

The up-and-down of the Walker-Hudkins business is this: An obscure promoter, one Kennedy, proposes to send the bulldog against the wildcat next July 4 in Las Vegas, a Nevada town located in the middle of a desert. It is presumed that Mr. Kennedy at least owns his hat, but when it comes to financing a quarter-million dollar prize fight, the suspicion naturally crops out that this Kennedy person is slinging conversation quite as super-heated as is the atmosphere in which Las Vegas broils during six to eight months of the annum.

If Jocko could be sentenced to

Jull's Team Steps Away From Wesleyan High; Wins 27-11.

Valley high won its first state tournament trophy when Coach J. C. Jull's quintet captured class B honors. The Valley team defeated Wesleyan high in the finals, 27-11.

Against the young Methodists, the Valley team performed in a fashion that would do credit to any member of class A. They had speed, good defensive ability and a keen eye for the basket at all ranges.

G. Wickland was all over the court, scoring 10 points during the final half.

The teams battled 2-2 during the first quarter and Valley led, 9-7, at half-time. This margin was widened during the third quarter, and the Wesleyan defense cracked in this period when Max Egbert dropped one in from the middle of the court to put the game on ice.

First Quarter.

Hoag scored for Wesleyan when he shot a high arched effort from the sidelines. Wickland evened the count for Valley after a few minutes of milling up and down the court. The score was 2-all at the end of the period.

Second Quarter.

G. Wickland sank a long basket to send Valley ahead 4-2 soon after the second quarter opened. Parker pulled Wesleyan high up even with a long heave from the sidelines.

M. Egbert scored from back of the foul ring for Valley and repeated with a follow-in toss which sent his team ahead 8-4. Hoag cashed in on T. Egbert's foul. T. Egbert got back the margin for Valley by converting Underkofler's foul into a point. Underkofler pivoted away from the Valley defense to score a basket from close-in. The half ended with Valley holding a 9-7 lead.

Third Quarter.

Parker of the young Methodists made it 9-all a few seconds after the second half opened, dropping in one from the center and Valley took out time. McCormick fouled G. Wickland and the Valley player made good one of the two tosses.

G. Wickland scored after McCormick's foul and Valley was leading, 11-9. Some fine teamwork set up the pins for an under-basket shot by G. Wickland.

M. Egbert shot one from the center of the court, one of the longest shots of the tournament. His brother, Temple, was loose on the next tip-off and scored from beneath the hoop to give Valley a 17-9 advantage as the third period ended.

Fourth Quarter.

T. Egbert sank one from the side soon after the last period opened

Finger of Scandal Points at A.A.U.

Athletic Union Czars Put In Tight Hole By Barbuti's Charges; Ray Also In Mood Tell Tales.

BY FRANK GETTY.

NEW YORK, March 9—(U. P.)—The case of Ray Barbuti, America's outstanding Olympic hero of 1928, whose suspension has been continued by the A. A. U., indicates how badly the governing body of amateur sport in this country needs some of the firm leadership it enjoyed under James E. Sullivan.

It is extremely unfortunate to have a man of Barbuti's stamp under a cloud solely because of some thoughtless remarks he made while in a bit of temper. It is equally unfortunate to have the integrity of amateur sport under suspicion, if such suspicion is unfounded.

Diplomacy Bonehead.

The Amateur Athletic Union showed woeful lack of diplomacy and directness in dealing with the Olympic 400-meter champion. The registration committee of the metropolitan association took four hours to come to a decision which was no decision at all.

As matters stand, Barbuti is under suspension and the A. A. U. is under suspicion. It lost an opportunity to clear itself because its committee did not know how to size up the situation and get together with Barbuti on the proposition.

Declares Back Down.

Ray is tremendously sorry now that he spoke as he did, but he isn't prepared to back down before a committee which attempted to bulldoze him.

Meanwhile, what of the unretracted charges made by Barbuti to the effect that he has heard that some athletes have received unduly large expense accounts, with the knowledge and consent of at least one A. A. U. official?

Barbuti says he has nothing further to say, since his comments were based on hearsay.

Joie Promises to Talk.

Joie Ray, who recently turned professional, is due in town next week. Joie has consented to give names and facts and the A. A. U. has invited him to do so.

It may be that Ray can tell some very interesting things about this business of expense money for amateurs, or it may be that he will feel, as Barbuti did, that there is no use "getting some one in trouble."

Class H Final.

Gretna Wins Decisively.

Gretna high cagesters, with a record of three decisive victories in tournament competition, swept through the class H final Saturday afternoon by defeating Nora, 34-11. Gretna, which has more than doubled opponents' scores in the earlier contests, had things pretty much its own way in the final affair, setting off with an early lead and maintaining it throughout the game. The count stood 13-2 at half-time.

Center Miller of Gretna was high point man with six baskets, while forwards Smith and Ruff stood next in line with nine and 10 points, respectively. Gretna won the class B finals in the Omaha district, defeating Louisville, 21-14. The score:

ROCKVILLE HIGH GRABS TROPHY

Sherman County Village Steps On Imperial to Win Class C.

Rockville may have only a few hundred population, but the Sherman county town boasts an all-American string of names in Seabeck, Roshynialski, Bugno, Jacobs and Schmaljohn. Incidentally, the boys play considerable basketball, which explains how and why Rockville defeated Imperial for the class C basketball honors by a 19-12 score.

Imperial started with a three-point lead, but Rockville came back to set a 4-3 pace at the quarter, 9-5 at half-time and 17-9 when the final period got under way. The score:

Dannebrog won its first state tournament trophy Saturday night by defeating Stockham, 16-10, in the class D finals. The Stockham team made it interesting until the last few minutes of play, when Dannebrog piled up its winning margin.

Dannebrog led 6-5 at the quarter, 10-7 at the half and 12-10 at the close of the third quarter. J. Jensen and Lauritsen looked the best for Dannebrog, while the long range shooting of Druba featured for Stockham. Score:

Yanks to Doll Up In Finest Raiment

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 9 — (U. P.) — The New York Yanks, baseball champions of the world, expect to dress the part when they launch the 1929 campaign for another title.

One hundred and twenty uniforms, costing $21 each, have been ordered for the squad. Each man will have four of his own—two home suits and two travelling uniforms. It is estimated the entire outfit will cost the champions more than $2,500.

Babe Ruth wears the largest uniform, a size 48, and the biggest cap, 7 5-8.

LINKS MASTERS ALL IN FLORIDA

Every American Wizard On Mark for Golddom's Richest Prize.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 9—(Special)—For the first time since the playing of the national open golf championship last summer, all of the royalty of golf will meet here March 21, 22 and 23 to compete in the greatest tournament of the winter season, the $15,000 Miami Beach-La Gorce open.

Because of its monetary awards, the time, location and circumstances of its playing, the Miami Beach-La Gorce in its second year has taken its place beside the U. S. open, the P. G. A. tournament and the British open as one of the most important professional events. The proof of this assertion is that every member of the new American Ryder cup team has entered, in addition to the largest and most important field of pros since the national open.

Farrell and Diegel.

The playing of the La Gorce open will bring Johnny Farrell, national open title-holder and defending champion, against his most stubborn competition since he won the U. S. title. The smiling Irishman did not enter the western open last summer and arrived too late to qualify in the P. G. A. event, which was won by Leo Diegel.

Diegel has been playing inspired victory and would welcome the opportunity to ride rough-shod over the only title-holder who tops him. Sir Walter Hagen will cast his cocky shadow across the path of Farrell and Gene Sarazen, pal and playing companion of the national open champion, will leave his friendship in the locker-room and attempt to become lord and master of all important championships in the Greater Miami area.

"Wild Will" Also Present.

Snorting his defiance at the committee that forgot him in naming the 1929 Ryder cup team, "Wild Bill" Melhorn, with a successful western and south-western winter record to his credit, will rank among the favorites along with the phenomenal youngster from Joplin, Mo., Horton Smith.

To keep the field clear of driftwood and hold it only for the class A professional golfer, an entry fee of $25 is being charged. The winner receives $5,000 in cash and $1,000 in gold plate, and the runner-up $2,500. The first 40 professionals will be in the money.

Team Title At Stake.

MIAMI, Fla., March 9—(U. P.)—Sixteen teams of leading professional golfers tee off here tomorrow in the International team championship for prizes totalling $5,000.

Heading the list is the team of Johnny Farrell and Gene Sarazen, defending champion. Both men have been shooting low scores throughout the winter season and will be favored to repeat. Other teams include Walter Hagen and Leo Diegel, Tommy Armour and Bill Melhorn, Horton Smith and Al Watrous and the British pair, Henry Cotton and Frank Ballus.

Finn Shows Heels To Veteran Demar

BOSTON, March 9—(U. P.)—Age bowed to youth today as 28-year-old Kaarl Koski, fleet footed Finn, outdistanced the veteran favorite, 40-year-old Clarence De Mar, to win the 44-mile Providence-to-Boston marathon in the record smashing time of five hours, 30 minutes, 57 seconds.

The weary Melrose school teacher proved no match for the Finnish—American A. C. star of New York as the two battled their way out of a field of 42 starters.

Chilly weather, icy rain and interfering automobiles did not prevent Koski from finishing 16 minutes, 43 seconds ahead of the record made by De Mar in winning the event last year. Koski finished strong while De Mar looked dazed and spent.

De Mar's time was 5:49:01, compared with his mark of 5:47:30 last year.

Michelson Off In Front.

The race started at Providence at 10:12 a. m. with Albert (Whitey) Michelson of the Milrose A. A. New York getting away to an early lead. It was raining at the start, but later the weather cleared somewhat.

Michelson maintained the lead to the half-way mark, at Wrentham, where he abruptly dropped out of the race, explaining to officials that he was merely training for the Boston A. A. marathon to be held April 19. His time was to that point was two hours, 10 minutes—18 minutes and 13 seconds faster than De Mar's record time of last year. Koski was in third place as Michelson gave up.

The winner, a short, wiry bald headed little man, smiled broadly as he faced the thousands of spectators gathered at the finish line on Tremont street mall.

"Oh, fine—" he exclaimed when reporters asked him how he felt. "The last two miles were the hardest."

A physician took the winner's pulse. It was 100, compared with 70 at the start.

DIFFERENT NOW.

Once amateur boxing champion in the 130-pound class, Johnny O'Brien, of the New York Athletic club, now tips the scales around 230.

East Coast Title To Chicago Miss

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 9—(U. P.)—Virginia Van Wie of Chicago today outplayed Helen Hicks of New York in the Florida east coast women's golf championship, one and three, to win the second leg on the Mrs. William R. Keenan trophy.

Miss Hicks held the advantage in most of her tee shots, but experienced difficulty with her approaches and could not sink enough of the long putts which fell to her to keep on even terms with her opponent. She was two down at the turn, without even having been in the lead.

The match was followed by a gallery of nearly 3,000 persons attracted by the keen rivalry of the two players and by a perfect, sunshiny afternoon.

Miss Hicks, standing three down at the fifteenth, had a chance to prolong the match with a possibility of an ultimate win at the sixteenth. Her approach had landed 15 feet from the cup. She stroked boldly, the ball rimming the cup and coming out.

RECORDS TUMBLE ON IOWA TRACK

Hawkeyes Are First In Annual Indoor Cinder Championships.

IOWA CITY, Ia., March 9.—One world's record was broken, an American mark tied, four Big Ten standards shattered, and another tied as teh University of Iowa upset the dope here tonight to win the nineteenth annual western conference indoor track and field championship. The Hawkeyes scored 29 2-3 points, followed by Illinois with 20 5-6 and Wisconsin with 15 5-6.

Canby of Iowa shattered the world's pole vault mark from a dirt take off when he soared over the bar at 13 feet, 7½ inches to nose out Warne of Northwestern for first place. The former world's standard for the event was 13 feet 6½ inches set by Warne of Northwestern.

Dash Record Equalled.

Simpson of Ohio State tied the American 60-yard dash yard record when he won from a crack field in :06 (2-10. Timm of Illinois had previously tied the mark in the preliminary heats.

The western conference records in the 70-yard high hurdles and the one-mile run went by the boards, in addition to these in the pole vault and dash. Haydon of Chicago broke the high barrier standard by nosing out Allison of Iowa in :08 7-10. The former mark was :08 8-10 made by Allison last winter. Martin of Purdue won the mile run in 4:22 9-10 to better the old mark of 4:23 4-10 made by Kennedy of Ohio State in 1926.

Fast Two Mile.

Abbott of Illinois tied the Big Ten two mile mark when he covered the distance in 9:26 5-10. Abbott lead his competitors in this event by 75 yards. The meet was not decided until the final event on the program the mile relay. Iowa, with three sophomores, Depping, Ferguson and Thomas among its quartet nosed out Wisconsin by two tenths of a second for first place while Illinois did not place. The Hawkeyes won three first places, and a two-way tie for the high jump crown.

Following Wisconsin in the team scoring was Chicago, 13 5-6; Michigan, 7 5-6; Ohio State, 7; Indiana, 6; Purdue, 5; Northwestern, 4, and Minnesota, 1.

LISKA PRIZE OF SENATORS' CAMP

faded. There is going to be a lot of disappointment in and around the capital of this nation if Bool and some others of this year's highly touted crop of recruits do not come through in unusual style.

Johnson Likes Ad Liska.

"Pitcher Liska has been in this class of rookies from the start. A real expert is the latest to predict a career of great usefulness to the local interests for this hurler. Manager Johnson bases this on his own experience at bat against Adolph and it should be remembered that Barney is some clouter, both for average and distance.

"With the pitchers instructed not to cut loose, Liska was still able to baffle Johnson, who declared his delivery the most deceptive he ever saw, and so unlike any other that opposing teams will have no chance to practice against anything like it.

"It would be fine if Liska should come through right off the reel, as it would be a case of 'help wanted' if there should be any real hitch in the cases of Jones and Marberry, or even of one of them."

Americans Aspire Win British Race

NEW YORK, March 9.—(I. N. S.)—Three American turfmen whose colors will be carried in the Grand National steeplechase at Aintree, March 22, sailed for England early today on the Berengaria. The sportsmen whose thoroughbreds will compete in the outstanding jumping classic of the world are Howard Bruce of Baltimore, owner of Billy Barton; Stephen (Laddie) Stanford, who is depending on Bright's Boy to repeat Sergeant Murphy's 1923 triumph; and John Hay Whitney, who is starting Easter Hero in his first attempt to win the historic fixture.

With victory in sight, Billy Barton fell at the last jump in 1928 and was beaten out by Tipperary Tim. Bright's Boy finished third in 1926. A. C. Schwartz, who won with Jack Horner in that year, was included in the party of turf enthusiasts on the Berengaria.

New Word Record In Hurling Discus

PALO ALTO, Cal., March 9—(U. P.)—Eric Krenz, giant athletic star, broke the world's discus throw record here today with a heave of 163 feet 8¾ inches.

The toss broke the record held by "Bud" Houser, former Stanford trackman, of 158 feet 1¾ inches.

Krenz appeared today in a Stanford meet with the Olympic club of San Francisco.

CHANGE TO CUBS SOFTENS RAJAH

Word Wafted From West Different Hornsby in Game This Year.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, March 9—All is irritatingly tranquil so far in the camp of the Chicago Cubs at Catalina Island—to the regret of those who predicted that Rogers Hornsby would get along wit' Hack Wilson, Hazen Cuvier and other liberals something like the skin gets along with sandpaper. So far, there hasn't been even a suggestion of friction and, judging by reports from the camp, there will be none as long as Hornsby preserves the air of austerity he quite evidently determined upon before he reported to the outfit.

One Observer Observes.

One observer describes him as a "lone wolf" and I judge from this that he meant that Hornsby was avoiding those entangling alliances that so frequently end with the allies entangled in each other's beards. Anyhow, the suggestion that Hornsby was high-nosing everybody evidently wasn't intended, for the camp attache discussed the young man's attitude in terms of obvious admiration.

He pictured him aloof, but gently courteous. He spoke of his ardor when on the ball field and his unobtrusiveness when off. He seemed to think that Hornsby was proving his lack of "chest" in failing to wear knickers about the town and he seemed actually charmed by the fact that the man wears his hat in public.

Absorbing His Lesson.

The portrait of Hornsby striding along the beach at night, listening to the eternal message of the sea, also was drawn with a fine touch of repressed melancholy. Is this, then, to be the 1929 Hornsby? If so, it must appear that he has absorbed the lesson of other years and other camps.

Hornsby always was unassuming. He was and is so extrospective that he takes himself and his ability strictly for granted, so that the fact that he has neglected to "chuck the swell" at Catalina is like the dog biting the man. It isn't news.

Bad News For Rivals.

But if Hornsby has become less impetuous, less intolerant, that is news—good news for Chicago, and bad for the seven other National league cities. And if he has decided to play his baseball only on the baseball field, that ought to be worth a high-powered dissertation on the editorial page.

These are the things Hornsby has to learn or un-learn; his intolerance of others' mistakes and his inclination to take the ball game, first, to the dinner table and then to bed with him. This often made him a bad roommate, if not a rather poisonous dinner companion.

Too Gabby For His Good.

It often deprecated the things he had done on the ball field, if it didn't dissipate their value entirely.

It seems a little thing for a man to learn that he can't win the game after they call the last man out in the final inning. It has taken a smart guy like Hornsby more than 12 years to learn this—if he has learned it.

Cubs' Leader Goes After Ump for Halting Los Angeles Game.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 9—(U. P.)—Jo McCarthy flared into a fighting pitch today when Umpire Chet Chadbourne called the Chicago-Los Angeles exhibition game at the end of the sixth inning on account of rain, with the Angels leading 11 to 8.

The Cubs' manager jostled and shoved the arbiter and protested that the game should continue, since Chadbourne had not halted it at the end of the fifth inning, when the Cubs were ahead.

Chadbourne retreated to the clubhouse, while McCarthy and his players swarmed about him.

The game was a slugging match, featured by a home run by Rogers Hornsby with the bases filled. It was the second circuit clout in two days by the "Rajah."

Walter Berger of the Angels won the contest in the sixth with a homer with one man on.

Guy Bush and Art Nehf hurled for the Cubs, while Walsh and "Deacon" Plitt were on the mound for Los Angeles. The teams will meet Sunday in the final game of their first series.

Tigers Broil In Arizona.

PHOENIX, Ariz., March 9—(U. P.)—Playing under a brilliant sun, the Detroit Tigers rookies today defeated the regulars, 6 to 5, in the first exhibition game played at the spring training camp. Manager Bucky Harris sent in his entire squad to perform in the inter-club competition.

The regulars started with a run in the first inning and followed with three in the second, but the yannigans soon overcame the lead and forged to the front with two runs in their last half of the second, another in the third and two more in the fourth. Another tally in the fifth gave the rookies their sixth run.

Flashy fielding with three double plays featured the rookies' defense.

With two out in the last inning, the regulars scored a run and threatened to tie the count, but tight pitching ended the rallq.

Howley Slings 'Optimism.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 9—(U. P.)—Manager Dan Howley of the St. Louis Browns believes he has a coming second base combination in Kress, shortstop, and O'Rourke, second baseman. He teamed the pair for the first time today and they worked with remarkable precision.

Harper Signs On Line.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 9—(U. P.)—The latest of the holdouts had been signed by the Boston Braves tonight. George Harper, who was given until today to reach a decision, signed the papers after a conference with Judge Emil Fuchs.

Phils Have Star Infield.

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 9—(U. P.)—Manager Burt Shotten of the Philadelphia Nationals believes he will have one of the best infield combinations in the majors this year. Hurst, Thompson, Thevenow and Whitney have been showing constant improvement and Shotten has great confidence in the quartet. Lefty O'Doul, outfielder, reported today for his firt workout. An attempt will be be made to convert Bernie Friberg, utility infielder, into a pitcher, Shotten said.

scheme might be worth while, but as the spot for a world's championship ring joust, where the fighters must be paid in real money, the Nevada town is hopelessly beyond consideration.

But Jocko isn't tied fast to the Las Vegas scheme. He has No. 2 up his sleeve, to-wit: A San Francisco promoter has horned into the plot, giving assurance, as Jocko tells it, that he will bid for the Walker-Hudkins rumpus.

As a matter of guess, the Frisco plan is Jocko's best bet to crawl out. The terms he will demand for Mickey's services easily could be made a complete bar to acceptance by Hudkins—and if anybody imagines Jocko will overlook a single opportunity to prevent the wildcat from getting at the bulldog in a resined ring, then that sort of person is more gullible even than Paul Prehn.

The plan is a paragon of simplicity. Mr. Kennedy lacks the backing to make good at Las Vegas and the San Francisco promoter, with Jocko pulling the strings, will be unable to sign the fighters. That Chicago guarantee, therefore, will be just another scrap of paper.

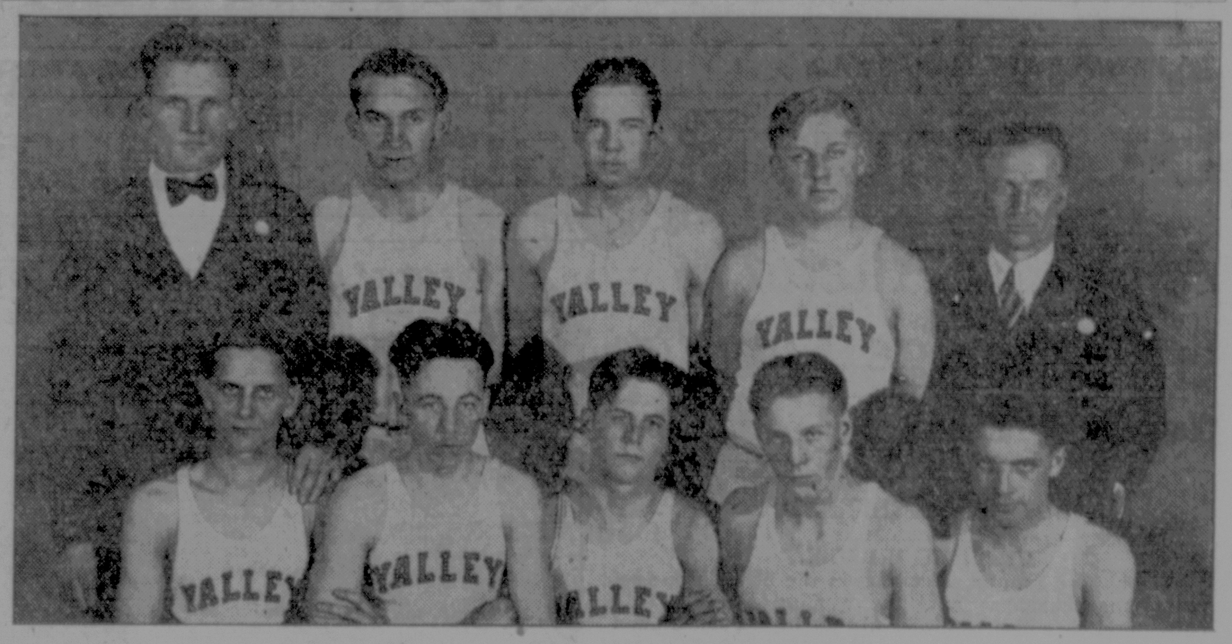

Idea of matching Walker and Hudkins has been dizzy from the first and for the very obvious reason that Mickey had his fling at Ace last June, when he got the nod via the most outrageous decision in the history of what Damon Runyan terms the "sour science," and, meantime, took one of the most thorough lickings of his life.

What? Pit Walker against Hudkins again? Not if Jocko can prevent—and Jocko is cocksure that he can.

PORTLAND LANDS PIRATE PITCHER

court, Kockrow scoring from the side for the first points of the game.

A few seconds later Shea dribbled in and sank one to give Hastings a 4-0 lead. The Tigers had made good on both chances.

Keith Davis then arched a high one through the hoop for St. Paul and the Saints' rooters went wild when Lynch repeated from back of the foul ring to make the score 4-all.

Lynch batted in a follow-up effort beneath the ring and St. Paul led for the first time during the game, 6-4. St. Paul took out time.

Lynch got the ball on a pass from E. Davis and pivoted to sink one dead from the foul ring. Lynch failed to score after Kockrow's foul as the first quarter ended, with St. Paul on the heavy side of an 8-4 score.

Second Quarter.

Hoeppner fouled Lynch beneath the ring, but St. Paul missed the free toss.

Keith Davis scored from the side and the Apostles led 11-4 when K. foul.

Davis scored a point on Kockrow's.

Hastings was missing the hoop and, with both teams letting down from the fast pace set during the first quarter, the half ended with the Apostles riding along with an 11-4 lead.

During the second quarter each team showed the effects of the strenuous play and started passing wildly and hurrying the shots.

THIRD QUARTER.

Adrian Bivens replaced Shea in the Hastings quintet soon after the third quarter started. Hoerner came up from a guard position to follow-in Krockrow's effort, which was wide. The Hastings red-head hooked the follow-in with one hand and the ball looped through the ring. Swallow failed to cash in after Kockrow's foul.

Krockrow brought the score to 11-8 when he dribbled in to count an easy basket. Fine teamwork and a shot from the corner by Krebsbach added another two points to the Hastings total and the Saints' lead was cut to 11-10.

K. Davis fouled Krockrow beneath the hoop and the Hastings forward to play as St. Paul took out time. Hastings had a 19-15 lead.

Martin held Hoeppner, but the Hastings guard missed the free throw. Lynch came back to score from beneath the St. Paul basket and the score was tied as Swallow sank a sleeper basket five seconds before the second half ended.

It was a brilliant rally. With twenty seconds to go, the St. Paul team rose to the occasion and scored the two baskets necessary to tie the score at 19-19. On the last basket the Hastings team allowed Swallow, a guard, to drift up the court for an easy effort from the side.

Extra Period.

The teams started the three-minute extra period. On a held ball from near the foul ring, Keith Davis tipped the ball to Lynch, who shot the ball toward the backboard. The ball zipped through the netting for two points. Hoeppner held Martin and the St. Paul forward missed both efforts.

Hoerner took the ball off the backboard and Kresbach's shot rattled the rim. Keith Davis hacked Kockrow and the Hastings forward sank the first free throw. The second bounded back from the ring and St. Paul got the rebound and rushed it up the court, Martin scoring. Hoerner got the tip and dribbled in for two points for Hastings. The score was St. Paul 23, Hastings 22.

Martin came back with another basket for St. Paul and the game ended with the Saints winning by a 25-22 score. The score.

BIBLE BANQUET AT FORT WORTH

Farewell Feast Tendered "D. X." By His Former Athletes.

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 9—(UP)—Dana X. Bible, who goes to the University of Nebraska this fall after eleven years as head coach at Texas A. and M. was the honoree at a ferewell banquet in the Texas hotel here tonight when 450 former Texas Aggie students gathered to pay tribute to their former mentor.

Among those at the banquet, which was sponsored by the Fort Worth A. and M. club, were many grid stars who have performed under the tutelage of Bible.

Colonel Ike Ishburn, former commandant of A. and M. was toastmaster at the banquet. He flew from Houston to be present. Others present included W. B. Bizzell, former president of the Texas Aggie school and now president of the University of Oklahoma; T. O. Walton, president of A. and M., Representatives from S. M. U. T. C. U., Rice and Baylor.

Kearns Points His Boy Fighter, Irish Mickey, For Fling at Heavies

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, March 9—Tunney? He was just a bum. Dempsey? He may pass away in a punch if he fights again. Sharkey? Pretty well washed and dried. Heeney? Von Porat may knock him oblong in Chicago next week. Loughran? Washed up and full of bubble lather.

Jack Kearns, the laundryman, was delivering the washing and ironing to fistic doorsteps today and, by the time he had finished his route, most of the neighborhood had enough laundered linen to last it for life. The only customers who weren't forced to take delivery were Paulino and Schmeling and, in their case, it seems the laundry bag wasn't quite ready when the driver called.

Asserts Mickey Really Good.

"There isn't one complete fighter in a half dozen of them," said he. "That's why I say Mickey Walker can run through the lot of them. He's my fighter and naturally I'm prejudiced, but I can't fool myself about him. He's the only man in the heavier divisions today who can really fight."

It is Mr. Kearns' ambitious plan to have Walker crowned a champion thrice over before the end of the summer and this is the way he would do it:

Beat Loughran by a knockout for the light-heavyweight title in Chicago late this month; successfully defend his middleweight championship against Ace Hudkins in Los Vegas July 4 and beat the survivor of the heavyweight tournament for the title in September. This latter, Mr. Kearns will inform you, is as easy an assignment as any of the three named.

Gives Out Information.

"What kind of heavyweights have we got?" Mr. Kearns wasn't seeking information; he was giving it "Look at the man who laid all over them like a bed spread for three years. Carpentier was an old man and Tunney couldn't beat him very convincingly. We won't talk about his fights with Gibbons and Bartley Madden; look what Greb did to him until Harry's blindness got him. The rest of his record includes Dempsey and Heeney, an old has-been and an old never was. Tunney was no fighter.

"Sharkey was a fair man, but he isn't today. I don't know much about Schmeling, but I'll say that his inexperience will catch up with him yet. There's no sense in going crazy over the victories he has gained to date; he hasn't licked anybody. Paulino looks like the best of the lot, because he still is tough, but, when you get right down to it, he's only a chump fighter.

Second Toledo Dempsey.

"Walker can punch too fast and too hard for that bunch. He will go in with them around 170 pounds and, at that weight, he'll be the Dempsey of Toledo all over again. Yes, he's short; but so was Joe Walcott. Those short guys always can make a big lunmbering heavyweight look like a clown. Loughran isn't so big. But he's lumbering. He has slowed down to a walk and, if Walker nails him, they'll have to recognize him as a heavyweight contender.

"Dempsey? Say, I know Dempsey better than he knows himself. If they get him in the ring again, he's likely to go out in a punch."

What About the Wildcat?

Mr. Kearns then was reminded that the lightest man of all prospective opponents, Ace Hudkins, was a bit short in his change when they paid off on the Chicago decision with Walker last summer. The reminder was like a visit to the automat; you press a button and out comes the old "chills and fever" story.

Walker, you learn, was a very sick man that night. And, indeed, he was—after the seventh round. Somehow, the impression won't down that Mr. Kearns is convinced that, in Walker's quest of three titles—equalling or bettering Fitzsimmons' record, according to whether or not you admit there were light-heavyweights in Fitz's time—he, Mr. Kearns, expects the most grief in getting away with the Title that Walker already owns.

Spinning wheels have the same effect as a slipping clutch, especially when trying to put the car out of a snow bank.

The cellulose finish of the hood and fenders can be easily marred by thoughtlessly placing the radiator cap on any of these surfaces for the addition of antifreeze or water. A cap dripping with alcohol solution will surely damage the lacquered part.

Jack Stands Ace High With Writers for Press

Dempsey Big Hit In New Role as Promoter of Battle at Miami

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

NEW YORK, March 9—Jack Dempsey, as a promoter, "pulled" something on the newspaper gentry in the "Battle of Miami" that still has the architects of sporting items hanging on the ropes and gasping in sheer gratitude.

He showed to each who drifted into Miami the courtesy that belongs only to an honored guest, and the things he did and the way he performed them were so refreshingly different than the treatment ever accorded by promoters that the lads still are in half-swoons and not sure it really happened.

Seldom Show Gratitude.

Although the ballyhoo performed by the writers has been the vital factor in the success of every fistic promotion in the last 15 years, the promoters, in the main, have never shown any real gratitude toward the writers as a mass. So far as the extension of courtesies was concerned—well, that was practically nil. Even in the matter of ticket distribution, the promoters—and that includes Tex Rickard—were tighter than the roof of a bass drum.

When I started parking in Miami in mid-January, just about the first thing Dempsey said was:

Newspapers Made Him.

"I agreed to take this job only upon condition that I would be allowed plenty of expenses to see that every newspaper man, whether he is a star or just a cub, would be taken care of. The newspaper fellows made me. Many are my pals. But whether the fellows that arrive are my friends, or my enemies, they all will get exactly the same dea." And then he added:

"There won't be an bunk or hokum about this show. If the receipts go to $100,000, that's what I'll tell the boys. There will not be any doubling or trebling of actual figures. I'll give it a to them straight and honest, whether it helps the fight or hurts it."

Held Rigidly to Resolves.

No man ever held more rigidly to both resolves than did Jack Dempsey. He delegated to three assistants the job of making arriving newspaper men comfortable. If they had no hotel reservations, he secured rooms at the hosteleries for them—and at minimum rates. He established headquarters for them at the Kennel club and also at one of the hotels.

Anything they wanted to eat, or use for throat quenching purposes, was theirs for the asking. He secured for them guest cards to golf clubs, night clubs, dog tracks, race tracks, and everywhere else public entertainment was offered. In emergencies, he provided busses and automobiles.

Johnny On the Spot.

If they had any troubles or grief, Dempsey dropped all that he was doing to extricate them. And although there were a few among the group who rapped the show and razzed him as a promoter and then, strangely accepted his hospitality at luncheons and dinners, he treated them with the same courtesy as he did the reporters who have been his friends for years.

One writer, fresh from college and aiming to make his reputation as a caustic wit, never lost a chance to call the fight a flop and to razz Dempsey. After which the extraordinary youth always was present and voting whenever Dempsey invited the newspaper group to some little shindig.

Forgiving to Critic.

When comment was made about it to Dempsey, his only answer was: "That guy was born that way. He can't help it. So he's all okay."

When Dempsey learned that the requests for working press seats exceeded the original specifications for the press box he ordered the box made larger, even though it meant reducing the number of $25 seats.

Dempsey went further than that. He granted all requests from newspaper men for complimentary seats in the arena which they wanted for their friends or associates who were not actually "covering" the fight.

Special Section for Wives.

And then he set aside a section in the stadium for the wives of newspaper men who could not sit with their husbands because women are barred from the working press box.

Nothing like that ever has happened before. In fact, nothing like Dempsey's thoughtfulness concerning the newspaper folk ever happened before.

Until Dempsey became a promoter, the reporters were accustomed to being ignored in the matter of courtesy and practically forced to battle to get seats to meet their actual needs for "covering" a battle.

Fares Free On Special.

As a climax Dempsey announced to the newspaper delegation:

"Just hired a special train. Leaves Miami Saturday night after the fight, headed for New York. Any of you newspaper men that want to get aboard can just climb on. It's all free, lads—and that invitation goes for any of you that have your wives with you on this trip."

Is it any wonder that the reportorial delegation finds itself groggy over the wallop of Dempsey's extraordinary courtesy and hospitality?

Giants Take Picks On Texas Leaguers

LAREDO, Tex., March 9—(U. P.)—The New York Giants downed the San Antonio Bears, 8 to 2, in an exhibition game here today before 700 fans. Home runs by Cohen and Welch of the Giants and Wetzel of the Bears featured the game.

McGraw used Benton, Ogden and Henry on the mound for three innings each. Ogden retired the nine men to face him without allowing one to reach first. The Bears scored one run off Benton and one off Henry.

Sox Dehorn Steers.

DALLAS, Tex., March 9—(U. P.)—The Chicago White Sox today repeated their performance of yesterday by defeating the Dallas Steers, 12 to 5, in the second game of a scheduled three-game series. The game was full of Steer errors, five being chalked up against the local boys, while the Sox played an errorless game. The two teams are to play again Sunday.

BROWNIES' PILOT LIKES HIS CLUB

Manager Howley Sounds Warning That Mound City In Race.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 9—"I think this will be the easiest year to win the American league pennant in years. The New York Yankees are not going to make a runaway race of it. The Browns will be right in the thick of the fight for the flag this year."

Dan Howley, aggressive manager of the St. Louis Browns, "sensations of 1928," made this comment today while sitting on the bench watching his players work out at the local ball field. Howley took a rebuilt team that had been generally picked to wind up in seventh place and brought it under the wire third last year.

Tougher This Year.

"I think we will be awfully hard to beat this year," said Howley to International News Service. "We were a tough club the last two months of last season and we are going to be tougher from the jump this year.

"The New York Yankees have not improved. They will be no better, if as good as last season, even though they have Ruth, Gehrig, Meusel and other heavy hitters. That club has seen its best days. The Athletics are a fine club, but they haven't improved either.

"Detroit is going to be a hard club to lick. There is a team that has improved.

Boosts Bucky Harris.

"Bucky Harris is a wonderful manager and he will get the most out of his material. I wouldn't be surprised to see him get great work out of George Uhle, the veteran pitcher the Tigers obtained from Cleveland. Harris will steam the Tigers up. You can bank on that.

"Cleveland is another club that has improved considerably. With Bib Falk, Porter and Averill in the lineup, the team will have a punch.

"St. Louis has improved. So has Boston. I don't know about Chicago, but they will be hustling under Lena Blackburne.

Yanks, Macks No Cinch.

"I think Detroit and St. Louis will have to be watched this year. Both have plenty of power and the Yanks and Athletics are not going to have a runaway race of it this year, in my opinion."

Howley has his mind pretty well made up regarding the lineup of the Browns. One of his most important changes is his decision to start Ed Grimes, a rookie from Tulsa, Okla., at third base. Another kid up from Tulsa, Leonard Dondero, may perform at second. Grimes hit .334 last year and Dondero .373.

Grimes at Hot Corner.

"I tlod Grimes the third base job was his, and not to let anybody take it away from him," said Howley. "I have the veteran O'Rourke for third, too, but Grimes has the call.

"Our catching staff looks good, especially Dick Ferrell, up from Columbus. He handles himself very well and will divide the work with Wallie Schang. Many good judges think Ferrell the best young catcher in baseball. He is a quick thinker and fast on his feet. He hit .333 last season.

Likes His Mound Staff.

"I think my pitching staff will stand the test. Alvin Crowder and Sam Gray should have another great year. I have two others who may be sensations. They are Dick Coffman, a tall right-hander, whose home is in Athena, Ala., and Ed Strelecki, a Newark, N. J., boy, also a right-hander. It may be that they are a year awy, but if they should come through this year, we will be all set. They both showed promise with us last season, although their records do not indicate it.

"Lou Blue will play first, Dondero or Melillo second, Ralph Kress shortstop and Grimes third.

Gives Outfield His O. K.

"The outfield will be made up of Magush, Schulte and McNeely, with Frank McGowan, whom we got from Kansas City standing a fine chance of breaking into the outfield. McGowan hit .363 last year and he knows how to go after a ball.

Manager Howley, who has been 23 years in baseball, predicted that all the clubs are going to make it harder for the front-running Yanks this year. Howley pointed out that in 1927 the Browns won only one game out of 22 from New York, but that last year they won 10 and lost 12.

Head and Heart Lead Feet In Grid Game

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 9—(I. N. S.)—The head and the heart, and not the foot, as one might be led to believe by first appearances, are the most important factors in the makeup of a football player.

This on the word of Knute Rockne who has assembled enough championship teams at Notre Dame to speak authoritatively on what makes them stick.

Coach Rockne who addressed a local gathering recently declared "The proper morale is essential, and morale is synonymous with the will to win. Some mollycoddles in educational institutions shout about over-emphasis in sports and say the will to win is a horrible thing. But they forget that we are preparing our athletes for life and competition is the essence of modern life. I know nothing wrong with winning so long as you win fairly."

HIGH HATS NUDGE UP TO HOI POLLOI

Men of Wealth Rubbing Elbows With Rabble In Fight Game.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH.

NEW YORK, March 9—(I. N. S.)—Can it truly be that the vulgarian enterprise they call boxing is to go genteel? Is the aristocracy "going slumming" for a new vogue by identifying itself actively with the pastime just as millionaire sportsmen race their horses? Must one prepare oneself to look to the society page for boxing or to the sport page for social chit-chat or both?

Don't answer questions, ask them, is a cardinal rule for all seekers after information and I must confess that, any time "Tack" Hardwick and Eddie Mack occupy the same pullman stateroom, I am utterly baffled and must seek the light of understanding. Hardwick is strictly Back Bay and dear, old Harvard; Mr. Mack is prominently connected in Revere Beach or something. They occupied the same stateroom not only because they found the arrangement mutually agreeable but because their interests happened to be identical, Hardwick being vice president of the Boston Garden and Mr. Mack its matchmaker. They wanted to talk to a prize fighter and they came here to do it because the prize fighter wouldn't talk to them under any other circumstances.

Society Manager.

This might have been something with which to regale the membership at Piping Rock, if it wasn't for the fact that Wall street, Madison Square Garden and Narragansett Pier have been moving in the same set these several years. Never, however, had it become necessary before for the social register to rub covers with the city directory. It simply represented the trend of a day that has witnessed the entree of Tony Biddle, jr., into the field as the dilletante manager of a fighter.

Tony actually has nothing to do with the active management of Rene De Vos, the Belgian, but the fact that he lends his name to such a proposition is significant. He even permitted himself to be introduced from the ring the night De Vos fought Hudkins and seemingly was in nowise abashed. Indeed, there was no reason for embarrassment, for lorgnettes were held on high and white shirt fronts gleamed bright in the night. He was strictly among friends.

Boxing, as a matter of fact, had gone "uplift" for that particular evening, as Mr. Biddle subsequently proved by paying gracious host to a lot of heels and ears at the St. Regis after the fight.

What Is the Answeru

What is the answer? Who is responsible for this impending transition from gutter to salon?

Some blame it on Brother Tunney, who is alleged to have lured the Better Element to the fount of his dazzling personality. Besides, didn't he marry into the landed gentry, thus making all of us kin? You rapidly answer yes and no, in the order named, to that one. Anyhow, the matter out-dates Brother Tunney.

It goes back to Benny Leonard and Ritchie Mitchell, a couple of society men from Stillman's gymnasium, who consented to aid devastated France, at the behest of Anne Morgan.

Miss Morgan's behest was accompanied by a purse of about $150,000 and I will say the young men earned it. These lads put on a prize fight that evening and society, which attended the show as a duty, went away in a glorious daze. The chances are good that converts in High Places were made that night. The Dempsey-Carpentier business must have helped, too.

Then Comes Tunney.

Brother Tunney's appearance on the scene undoubtedly was fortuitous, for it established the fact that prize fighting wasn't always conducted in a manner calculated to make those of sweeter natures swoon right away in horror. The fact that the Better Element found itself intrigued by what went on probably had its influence in the shaping of Brother Tunney's self-determined destiny, too. But that doesn't explain the fact that Jack Sharkey, the ex-sailor, is living in the exclusive Chestnut Hill section of Boston with a young millionaire for a patron; nor does it explain how it comes about that Johnny Bucklev the ex-truckman, is so busy attending Boston "first nights" that life has become one shirt stud after another.

No, the more I think of it, the more I am convinced that I must ask myself one more question: Whither are we drifting and why not?

GEHRIG FANS AIR IN YANKEE GAME

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 9—(U. P.)—Miller Huggins ordered his New York Yankee pitchers to open up for the first time today in a practice game with the yannigans. The regulars won, 5 to 2. With the pitchers bearing down, Lou Gehrig fanned twice and Babe Ruth was retired once on strikes.

Chink Outen, former North Carolina State college star, twisted his ankle today sliding back to first.

Huggins has warned his men against golf, limiting them to Sundays only on the links and advising them to forget the game in favor of fishing.

Dodgers In Tie Game.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 9—(U. P.)—Dave Bancroft's lame arm was well enough today to allow the veteran to work at shortstop for the regular Brooklyn Dodgers team in a six-inning ocntest with the reserves. The game ended in a 5 to 5 tie. Babe Herman hitting a homer in the sixth, with Gilbert on base, to tie the score.

Jake Flowers, forced out of early workouts by an attack of ptomaine poisoning, was in uniform for the first time today.

SHOOTING MARVEL.

The greatest exhibition of marksmanship in America is credited to Adolph Topperwein, who with a 22-caliber rifled fired 72,000 shots at wooden blocks two and a quarter inches square, thrown 20 feet in the air, and missed only nine. This demonstration was at San Antonio, Tex., in 1907, and lasted a week.

SPEEDERS HELD UP BY BUMPY COURSE

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 9—(I. N. S.)—The international speed trials will not get under way here until next week, if then, the uneven condition of the Beach speedway remaining unchanged, it was announced definitely by officials tonight.

As a means of breaking the monotony of delay, Major Segrave tinkers with his speed boat, "Miss England," with which he hopes to set a new world's record for water at Miami the latter part of this month, and J. M. White putters with the ponderous Triple X which has long since been mechanically okay.

Despite the rough sands, barrel turn automobile races, drawing the cream of southern racing talent, will be held on the beach course Sunday.

These Hints Worth While If Your Golf Needs Cure

By "E. M. In K. C. Star.

Ever since winning the box of guaranteed wooden tees in the fifth flight of the club championship tournament last fall we have been besieged with questions as to how we achieved our success, and is kicking the ball in the rough ethical?

As to this query we would say it oftentimes is very foolish to kick the ball in the rough, since the act has to be done stealthily-like and frequently the ball is in a worse lie after the kick than before. There is nothing more discouraging than this, and sometimes it will cause a player to suddenly decide it is better to be honest.

Since these questions are of public interest they may as well be printed here together with the authentic and unabridged answers.

Question—Every time I drive into the foursome in front of me and the man says what's the matter, can't you see, and one of the women adds there should be a rule prohibiting farmers on the course, all I can think of to answer back is, "I thought you was looking for a lost ball." Can you suggest something else?

Answer—One of the newest gags which ought to work for at least one season is to blandly inquire: "Oh, are you playing golf? I thought you were out picnicking." At present no comeback has been discovered for this.

Question—Very frequently I miss the ball entirely. Isn't there some cure for this?

Answer—Try lying on the ground. When expert at this, gradually rise to your knees. By the end of the summer you may be able to hit the ball while standing on both feet. If this doesn't work, change your ginger ales.

Question—What can a fellow do when he gets behind a slow foursome?

Answer—Look at this optimistically. When stymied by slow humans, why not run over some of the books on golf? This will improve your game. An average book of 200 pages can be read in an hour, and very frequently one has to wait at least this long.

Question—What is the correct stance for the slice?

Answer—We're glad you ask this one, because we can answer it glibly. The best way to slice is to make up your mind to hit the ball straight down the fairway. Pick out a spot right in the center of the fairway and conventrate on it. Then don't be at all suprised to see your caddy running for the woods after you've shot. If this doesn't work we've got some other hints along that subject.

Question—I have an ungovernable temper. Twice last season I missed putts because my opponent sneezed. Of course I had to take an afternoon off to attend the funerals. How could I prevent this?

Answer—You were very foolish. Bury them on the spot where they drop. No more than ten or fifteen minutes need be consumed in this, and you can then continue on with your game.

Question—Which is the preferred grip?

Answer—Some players like Jones or Hagen support the interlapping or overlocking grip, but we've always found it is best to grasp the club firmly in both hands, wrapping the index finger of the left hand around the thumb of the right, doubling up the little fmger of the right and letting the second digit of the left hang limply. This method is much simpler and brings the same result. You can't hit the ball anyway.

Question—I have been told I strike the ball too quickly. Can you offer a cure for this?

Answer—Always count ten before striking. Then better judgment will prevail. You will sell your clubs and take up stamp collecting.

Booster Bowlers Tear Into Maples

CHICAGO, March 9.—(I. N. S.)—After a week of the most sensational bowling by booster teams ever witnessed in competition here, the American Bowling Congress tournament plunged into the serious business of competition tonight in the twenty-eighth renewal of the hardwood alley classic.

Elmer O'Brien stood as the greatest single performer tonight, wtih a 673.

For a booster team, W. Thuesen and R. Phillips made a high score, with 1,234, but not a score expected to stand in the later competition.

This is the first year for booster teams to bowl in the 2,700 class for five men, yet all the five-man teams had rolled more than that according to standings tonight.

Bert Cook of Cincinnati nearly accomplished the singles lead but for a railroad in the ninth frame of his last game, leaving him a total of 664 and second place for the week. The first week's standings:

Their game scores were consistent, 942, 948, 955. The Mansfield Tire & Rubber company team of Mansfield, Ohio, went into second place with a score of 2,828, while the Main Recreation of Battle Creek, Mich., took third place with 2,786.

UPSET LAD WINS MIAMI CLASSIC

MIAMI, Fla., March 9—(U. P.)—Upset Lad, a mighty son of Upset, the only horse to defeat Man O' War, won the Florida derby at Hialeah park here this afternoon. He defeated Boris by a short nose before more than 10,000 people, who turned out to witness the event. Stand By, a three-year-old that has yet to finish unplaced, took third money from John B. Virado, and Ritzy completed the field.

Upset Lad, which carried the silks of the Belle Isle stables, was last to leave the barrier. He moved up quickly, however, and in the back stretch was closest to Stand By, which set a rapid early pace. Entering the stretch he assumed command, while Boris was working his way up fast. Stand By dropped back slightly but did not stop.

A few yards from the wire, the winner began to tire slightly, and Boris closed with a burst of speed, just failing to get up. Upset Lad's victory was extraordinarily popular, as he was favorite in the speculation. His backers received seven to five, while his owners received $8,600 as the winner's share of the purse.

The mile and a furlong was run in 1:53 2-5.

BADGERS MOVE UP TO BIG TEN TIE

MADISON, Wis., March 9—(UP)—The University of Wisconsin basketball team moved into a tie with Michigan for Big Ten leadership here tonight by defeating Chicago, 19 to 15, in a slow, uninteresting game that marked the close of the conference season.

MORE AND MORE DOGS.

The remarkable increase in dog show entries in this country in recent years is even surpassed in Great Britain, where registrations of pedigreed canines have grown since the war from 19,000 to almost 60,000.

MATTHEWS AGAIN IN MAIN EVENT

Harold Matthews, Lincoln's mighty fighting mite, has signed with Matchmaker Billy Hale of the Maccabees for another 10-round main event mitten rumpus at the Liberty theater. Date of the battle is Monday night, March 18.

Hale, in Omaha Saturday, used the wires to announce that he is gunning for a flyweight or bantam battle of established class.

The Maccabee matchmaker is angling for three boxers—Pat Jennings and Bobby O'Dowd of Chicago and Joe Fernandez of Kansas City. He figures that any one of the trio mentioned is worthy of Harold's best.

Irish Tracksters In Conference Triumph

NOTRE DAME, Ind., March 9—(I. N. S.)—Displaying unexpected strength in every event on the program, University of Notre Dame trackmen scored their third straight triumph in the Central conference indoor championships when they piled up 44½ points here this afternoon. Michigan State was second with a total of 33 points and the other teams finished in this order: Ohio Wesleyan, 13; Miami and Grinnell, 7; Marquette and Butler, 6; Western State Normal, 4½; Detroit university, 5; Detroit City college, 4; Depaul, 3; Drake Depauw, Kalamazoo and Lincoln, 2.

HEAVIEST HITTER.

J. Francis "Shanty" Hogan, gigantic Giants catcher, was the only regular receiver in the National league to finish last season with a batting percentage exceeding .300.

League Prexies Pick Cubs, Mackmen Win Flags

Hot Arguments Ahead In Chase of Pennant Laurels Season of' 29

BY LES CONKLIN.

NEW YORK, March 9—(I. N. S.)—Big league presidents usually are most reticent in picking pennant winners, but this year both league heads are out with predictions as to the probable flag winners. President John Heydler picks the Cubs to win the National league race, while President Barnard thinks the Athletics will check the reign of the Yankees in the junior circuit.

Barnard's prophecy may have been influenced somewhat, however, that he was speaking at a sport banquet in Philadelphia at the time. If he had picked the Yanks the evening would have been ruined for the boys who threw the party.

Giants and Pirates.

Heydler believes the Giants and the Pirates will be Chicago's strongest rivals. John McGraw expects the Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals to give his Giants the most trouble. Charley Comiskey, White Sox owner, picks the Cubs to lead the National league procession.

The early betting odds rate the Cubs 3 to 2 favorites, with the Giants, Cardinals and Pirates all 5 to 2 choices. The Reds are 8 to 1 and you can write your own ticket on the others.

In the American league the Yanks are even money favorites, with the Athletics quoted at 5 to 4. The St. Louis Browns are third choice at 8 to 1.

The uncertainty as to how the Yankees will fill Joe Dugan's shoes at third base has influenced the odds on the world's champions to some extent. The A's have a big edge on the Yanks at this position with three capable third sackers available in Dykes, Fox and Hale.

Yde's Second Chance.

Emil Yde, the tall southpaw with the short name, gets another chance to make good on the big time circuit this year. "Eedie" is up with Detroit. Five years ago he was a sensation with the Pirates, and American association men declare he is as good as ever. Last year he won 19 games and lost 12 with Indianapolis.

Even if he fails to star on the mound for the Tigers, Yde may be converted into an outfielder because of his hitting. He always bats over .300 and starred as a pinch-hitter with the Pirates. Bucky Harris, however, declares he will use him only for pitching purposes.

A Hero Returns.

Bruce Caldwell, the idol of Yale a year ago last fall, goes back to New Haven this season. But the youth who once was the toast of the town is returning as a failure, not as a conquering hero. He has been farmed out to the New Haven club in the Eastern league by the Cleveland Indians for further reasoning.

What a comedown for the Rhode Island boy! Heralded as one of the greatest baseball and football stars ever turned out at Yale, he failed to make good with the Indians and made such an indifferent showing with the New York football Giants last fall that they decided to let him go. He will spend the season in the drab parks of a minor league circuit, a far cry from the huge stadiums packed with thousands of admirers.

RICHEST PRIZE IN GOLF REALM

Purse of $15,000 Goes to Best Linksmen in La Gorce Open.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 9—Unsteady rest the heads that wear the crowns of winter golf.

Horton Smith of Joplin, Mo., and "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, pace-makers of early season western and the southwestern tournaments, have packed their bags and are heading for golfdom's greatest money event, the $15,000 Miami Beach La Gorce open.

Menacing their path to seasonal glory are Walter Hagen, the iron man; Gene Sarazen, for the past three years both Miami and Miami Beach open champion; Johnny Farrell, national open champion and defending champion of the La Gorce $15,000 title; Leo Diegel, P. G. A. champion; Willie Klein; MacDonald Smith, and other veterans who have heretofore dominated the Florida play.

Smith and Mehlhorn.

Ripping and roaring down the fairways like two mad men of the links, Smith and Mehlhorn have given no quarter to the golfing enemy. In the meanwhile, Sarazen was continuing his mastery over the southeast coast of Florida, with Farrell and Klein making an excellent showing.

It may be possible that the second annual renewal of the $15,000 classic may bring a repetition of that sensational scramble of last year.

Farrell shot phenomenal golf to overtake the fast traveling Bobby Cruickshank who had himself shot a 66 over the last 18 holes. Farrell traveling the last round in 63 strokes, established a mark of 274 strokes for 72 holes, which has since been smashed by Mehlhorn.

It is certain, however, that the eyes of the golfing world will be turned to the "tailor-made" La Gorce golf course on March 21, 22 and 23 to watch Mehlhorn, the golfing orphan, play against the entire membership of the Ryder cup team selected to play the British this year.

The Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE.

INVOCATION.

Come, gentle spring, in sunshine clad,
I'd like to golf—and then
If I should find my swing is bad
Bring on your snow again.

YES, SHE CAN SWIM.

Miss Martha Norelius, at the age of 20, has already broken just about that many records. And when Miss Norelius breaks a record she breaks a record. She doesn't merely bend it, or twist it.

She took four seconds from one record, five seconds from another and six seconds from a third. If there was ever a human built for swimming, the name is Martha Norelius. She has beauty of line, length and symmetry, all the evidences of power—power and grace combined. With all this she has a marvelous disposition for competition—a carefree type that is full of courage. And apparently she has only started to break records with her best years still ahead.

STILL AROUND.

A human splinter joined the old Cubs somewhere around 1904. He weighed about 114 pounds. That was twenty-five years ago. He has had to fight the storms of twenty-five years, but they can't keep him away. Johnny Evers, the Trojan, will still be one of the features of the year, even though the Braves are engaged in another desperate battle for the cellar.

It has been a long, long time since F. P. A., in behalf of the Giants, made the following announcement:

Tinker to Evers to Chance;
Trio of bearcats and fleeter than birds,
Tinker and Evers and Chance;
Pricking forever our gonfalon bubble,
Causing a Giant to hit into a double,
Words that are heavy with nothing but trouble,
Tinker to Evers to Chance."

This still remains one of baseball's classics. It told a story no Giant fan has ever forgotten. Chance is dead. Tinker is a prosperous oil man. Evers alone remains in the game that made him and the game he helped to make. There have been rare characters in the old game, but none quite as picturesque as the Human Splinter from Troy, the greatest little dynamo that ever stirred up war along an entire front. He was all flame and time hasn't yet turned him to anything like ashes.

THREE OF THE GREAT.

Three of the greatest second basemen that ever played must include Nap Lajoie, Eddie Collins and Johnny Evers. And it is noteworthy that Evers is mentioned with the other two when they out-batted him by 40 or 50 points, and were possibly a shade better in defensive work. At least every whit as good. But Evers was always the big spark of any game. Probably the most alert ball player in action the game has yet seen. He missed no point he could use for victory.

FAIRLY QUICK ACTION.

With big fight emporiums now operating in New York, Boston, Chicago and Detroit, it should not take any too long to weed out most of the surplus heavyweights now cluttering up the landscape.

It may be at the finish there will be no heavyweight left worthy of wearing a champion's mantle. Suppose Sharkey and Stribling had been the last two survivors? Would any one have named the winner the new heavyweight champion of the world? Not many would have done so—not enough to have made it stood up with a public that ought to be getting wiser year by year.

No promoter can make a champion. He must make himself. It has been said that Tex Rickard made Dempsey champion. It happened to be Jack Dempsey who made Dempsey champion and it happened to be Gene Tunney who made Tunney champion.

The public, which pays the freight, will hardly be inclined to accept any fighter as the next heavyweight champion who doesn't fight his way through—not wrestle or clinch or dance his way through.

Max Schmeling seems to be the best one equipped along this line, but he still has to prove he can take a solid wallop on the jaw, with two or three knockouts already charged against him. Yet he has done more fighting than any of the others in the last year and that gives him the lead to date. Sharkey hasn't had anything like a decisive victory over a fairly good man since Dempsey beat him—and this includes matches with Heeney, Risko, Christner and Stribling.

The boxer or fighter who believes he can take over a million dollar crown by barely getting by will stumble over a rough jolt before he is through.

RATES STRIB AS LIVE PROSPECT

Fight Scribe Proclaims Georgian Has Bright Ring Outlook.

Dixie Boy Better Fighter By Virtue of Defeat By Sharkey.

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

NEW YORK, March 9—The official ring records credit Jacques Sharkey with winning "The Battle of Miami," but it does seem to me that the ultimate gainer is W. L. Stribling of Macon, Jawja, suh!

As a conqueror, Sharkey showed nothing that could excite even the Boston delegation. Stribling had no great difficulty in smacking him and Stribling showed no effects when Jack rattled his heaviest punches off W. L.'s jaw or drove them into the Georgian's body.

Sharkey won not because of all-around superiority but because he had the greater experience which had enabled him to outsmart Stribling as soon as he became wise to the southerner's style.

Vet of "Big Wars."

Sharkey went into the ring something of a veteran of "big wars," while Stribling was comparatively a novice, against the so-called class performers. Sharkey had fought Dempsey, Wills, Heeney, Risko and others, grabbing ring cunning from contact with each.

Stribling never had met a big heavyweight who was in Sharkey's class and the result was that when Jack began to pull his big league tricks, W. L. was all out of focus with himself.

That Stribling Rib.

Despite all that, Sharkey won by a few nods only. Through the first four rounds he was trailing. After that, Strib suddenly began to humor his left arm—it was claimed afterward that he tossed a rib out of shape — and when Sharkey found himself faced mainly by a one-handed attack, he became the aggressor.

Sharkey fought his fight—the best that he can do. He will not be able to improve much on that. But Stribling learned plenty. He can summon it to his aid in the future. W. L. will be a better fighter for having been whipped.

Awed at Big Names.

The flaw in Stribling always has been his seeming awe of names. If they had put a mask on Sharkey and called him Josephus Doakes, the Georgian perhaps would have stepped into his opponent with the fierce attack he can show when faced by Palookes—and he might have traded wallops with Sharkey and knocked him stiff!

But no mask was used and the name was Sharkey — not Doakes. Jack was the man that made Dempsey do some reeling and he also whipped Harry Wills. That made Strib decide that Sharkey was tougher than he is; more dangerous than he was. And so Stribling, instead of forcing a furious slugging pace, elected to leave the issue to boxing and generalship and ring cunning, in which Sharkey was his master.

Outsmarted His Man.

It's rather singular, but it is true that Sharkey—long called "The Foolish Fighter" and the bloke who thinketh not cannilly—actually beat Stribling to the "dook" by outsmarting him. So far as the use of brains was concerned, Jack put up the greatest fight of his career.

But so far as the rest of it goes, the same Sharkey is no champion—not even of the most synthetic kind. He has no killing punch; he has slowed up, and his defense is flopping, rather than being on the upgrade. Jack has far less of greatness today than he had two seasons ago. His trend is backward, not forward. Sharkey will not improve; he will only slip backward.

Georgian Learns Lesson.

But Stribling, having fought a feared name — but not a feared fighter—and knowing now that he might have won if he had gone relentlessly on attack, has learned a lesson. With that new equipment, Strib should be able to go on, forget that names mean anything, and become the aggressive slugger that he can be when he thinks of the other fellow only as a fighter, not as to-be-feared celebrity.

If the men were rematched today, the wagering probably would favor Stribling, for the belief exists now that Sharkey isn't the better fighter. Jack simply had the wider experience and the superior wisdom. Stribling learned much from Jack in their recent bout, so much so that he might convert that knowledge into victory were he to meet Sharkey in a return bout.

Farrell, Sarazen In Special Match

ASHEVILLE, N. C., March 9—(I. N. S.)—Johnny Farrell, American open golf champion, and Gene Sarazen, former holder of that title, will meet here in an exhibition match March 29, according to announcement made here by officers of the Asheville Golf and Country club.

The exhibition match will follow the annual North-South open tournament at Pinehurst March 26 and 27, in which Farrell and Sarazen are expected to play.

Efforts are being made to persuade Jesse W. Sweetster, former British and American amateur champion, to play a four-some exhibition match with Farrell, Sarazen and one other outstanding golfer to be named later. This match would be in addition to the Farrell-Sarazen exhibition.

Sport Briefs.

The International league opening games find Rochester at Reading, Buffalo at Jersey City, Toronto at Baltimore, Montreal at Newark.

As the Buffalo club packed for the trip south there were only three outfielders on the roster and one of them a semi-pro recruit.

George Monfredi, New York university southpaw, will have a trial with Jersey City. He belongs to the Yankees.

On the Newark pitching staff are several big leagues of note—Mr. Quillan, Mamaux, Pruett, Aldridge, Bagsby and Goldsmith.

Prince Mac, 2:05¾, by Allercyone McGregor	2,500
Strathall, 2:06½, by Patsey Allerton	2,100

Dr. Romaine of Scotia, Neb., has purchased the dam of the fast pacing gelding Prince Pachuta, 2:06½, and the dam shortly will foal again to Pachuta, sire of the pacer just mentioned. Dr. Romaine owned, until her death a year ago, that fast pacing filly Jane Maxey, 2:09, by Judge Maxey. Prior to that he owned Democrat Boy, p., 2:17¼.

Fancy Todd, 2:29¼, by Sorrento Todd, 2:11, dam Exila, by Conrad, 5381, grandam Exalmo, dam of Dr. Nick, 2:04¼, was purchased at the Gould dispersal sale by her breeder, N. J. Ronin, Fremont, Neb. Fancy Todd is dam of Todd Maxey, 2:19¼, and Fancy Silk, p., 2:24¼. She is due to foal soon to Judge Maxey, 2:24¼. Sentiment prompted Mr. Ronin to buy the mare.

Sorrento Todd, 2:11, by Todd, 2:14¾, dam that great brood mare Sorrento, by Grand Sentinel, proved a true source of speed while owned in this state, being represented by 34 trotters and six pacers with standard records. In addition, seven of his sons are sires of speed and 12 daughters are dams of speed. Of his sons, Fred C. Todd, Percentage and Willow Brook Todd are sires of 2:10 performers, the fastest being Shamrock E., p., 2:04¼. His daughters are dams of Golden Fred, p., 2:07¼, and Bingen Bold, 2:08½.

I. S. Walker of Kimball, Neb., advises us that Queen Crowdfast, a probable starter in the Hambletonian Stake this fall, is more or less a Nebraska product, as her dam, Charm King, 2:12¼, by Norval King, 2:12¼, was bred by him. The Hambletonian is most valuable of all stakes ever offered the trotting-bred horse and this year will be worth in the neighborhood of $70,000. Charm King, 2:12¼, is also dam of that fast two-year-old pacer, King Crowdfast, 2:13¾, holder of the world's record for age, sex and gait over a half-mile track at the time the performance was made in 1926. King Crowdfast and his sister were bred in Colorado, the filly now being owned in New Jersey.

Mr. Walker also bred the trotting mare Sara King, 2:29¼, dam of that consistent trotting gelding Gold King, 2:07½, raced for his owner, C. D. Bell, Omaha, by Marvin Childs, Rov Owen, Warren Dennis and William Parks. Few Nebraska-bred trotters have raced longer or more consistently than Gold King, whose race record over a half-mile track is 2:08¼, with only one other Nebraska-bred trotter equalling that performance, that one being Dr. Nick, 2:04¼, whose half-mile track record, 2:06¾, was gained in 1924 over a lightning fast track in New York state.

It now seems possible that seven or eight weeks of harness racing will be on the 1929 program for fairs located in the panhandle of western Nebraska and in eastern Wyoming. It is quite certain that seven fairs will offer a program for trotters and pacers, and prospects are flattering for an eighth town to join the circuit.

Several towns in that section which formerly sponsored rodeos in connection with their annual fairs are turning from that form of entertainment and adding races for runners, pacers and trotters. Last fall several very good race meetings were held in the section mentioned and the classes filled well.

Mart Doran of Lincoln writes entertainingly of old times at Beatrice and, among other men, mentions Andy Hale, Ike Curley, Fred Woodcock, Gus Hart, Billy Edwards, Dick Tilden and Charley Murray. Mr. Doran's father was a first-class horse shoer and Mart recalls when the elder Doran shod Lobasco for James Ladd.

Charley Murray is living at Beatrice and still is fussing with a trotter. Fred Woodcock is at Menlo Park, Cal., with the Perry farm and will have out the coming season a trio of good colt trotters. Fred bred Falmont Jr., 2:20¼, taking that horse to Oregon, where he sired some speed. The fastest horse ever owned by Fred Woodcock was Captain Mack, p., 2:03¼, by The Bondsman, and, by the way, the Captain is the fastest pacing stallion bred in Oregon. Fred Woodcock sold that horse to parties in Indiana for $5,000.

Gus Hart, mentioned by Mr. Doran, trained at Beatrice a number of years and among other trotters raced by him were Idavan, 2:19¼; Red Van, 2:19½ and Fearless, 2:19½. The last named mare afterwards reduced her record to 2:15¼ under the ownership of Hal Brown, owner of Ginger, p., 2:04¼; Don, p., 2:06½; L. S. Crum, 2:10¼, and numerous other good race horses. And, by the way, Hal Brown lived at Fremont, Neb., at one time and a brother residing in that town was likewise an owner of several trotters that gained good records.

Going much farther into details concerning Linden Tree Park, Mr. Doran says: "I worked on that place when it was started and have a vivid recollection of the Arabian stallions owned by General Colby. They never bred a good horse at the Colby farm; not one that could run, trot or pace. They were only a lot of scrubs."

For the benefit of Mr. Doran and other readers of The Star, we would mention at this time that is impossible to call to mind at one time all the old-time horsemen of Nebraska, but of one thing we are quite certain, which is that Beatrice will never again be the home town of such horsemen as lived there from 1880 to 1929, the latter year marking the death of Walter Scott. However, there is a family living in and around Beatrice who still are loyal to the trotter and pacer and we are referring to the Mumfords, owning a number of horses, among them Budweiser, p., 2:07¼.

C. A. Harrison of Oakland, Cal., owner of the filly San Francisco Silk, racing so well last season in three-year-old pacing classes through the California circuit, writes in this manner: "There must be a flock of Bingen Silk colts in Nebraska, as that stallion was a very popular sire." With Mr. Gould, Mr. Harrison was joint breeder of San Francisco Silk, by Bingen Silk, dam by San Francisco, 2:07¾, and naturally has a soft spot in his heart for the son of Bingen, 2:06¼, owned at Midway Farm, Kearney, Neb., from the time he was a yearling until early in the year, when he was sold at the Gould dispersal sale.

We doubt if there is a very large flock of Bingen Silk colts and fillies in Nebraska and for the reason that Mr. Gould sold a large per cent of the foals of that stallion at public sale in Chicago and they are scattered all over the United States. Mr. Gould was a man of strong likes, as well as dislikes, and he fairly worshipped Bingen Silk. He could not patiently listen to any criticisms of that stallion and more than once we found him much vexed when some one spoke favorably of some other stallion at Midway Farm.

Mention was made of Max Silk in a preceding issue of The Star and now we are thinking of Lord Silk, p., 2:08, a son of Bingen Silk that is owned in California and reported to be siring a very fine class of foals. One of his three-year-olds raced fairly well during 1928, gaining a race win record of 2:21 pacing over a half-mile track. Another colt, now three years old, is being talked of quite a lot in southern California, where he is in active training. We would also refer to Peerless Silk, 2, 2:16¼, another son of Bingen Silk owned in southern California and a well bred one at that. Peerless Silk, now six years old, will be raced again the coming season and is now in active training at Pomona, that state.

BOSTON ALL SET BID FOR FIGHTS

Beantown Promoter Has Plan Cooked Up Go After Big Ones.

BY GENE KOWSKE.

BOSTON, March 9—(I. N. S.)—An outdoor boxing program, expected to outrival anything of its kind previously attempted anywhere, is in store for fight fans of New England. The first show will be held May 27.

Braves field will be the scene of the weekly shows, Eddie Mack, promoter and matchmaker of the Boston Garden, will conduct the open air matches under the principle of the former Argonne A. A., with 50 rounds of fighting at a penny a round.

Title Brawls In Sight.

In addition to the regular shows to be held Monday night, Mack plans to hold five special fights of which two would be for world titles. The world championship bouts would bring together Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan and Sammy Mandell. The other would be between Al Mello, New England welterweight champion, and Joe Dundee.

Also the Garden matchmaker plans to show Max Schmeling, German heavy, Jack Sharkey, Jim Maloney, Ernie Schaaf, Mickey Walker, William (Young) Stribling, and last, but not least, Jack Dempsey, now better known as a promoter than a fighter.

On Dempsey's Trail.

For some time the optimistic promoter has been negotiating with the Manassa Mauler for a bout in the Hub, with Jimmy Maloney tentatively scheduled as the opponent. A flat sum of $250,000 was offered Dempsey with the added inducement of 40 per cent of the gate receipts. The battle would be staged at Braves field, which is capable of being reconstructed to accommodate nearly 100,000 persons, sometime in July or August.

As yet Dempsey has given no information concerning the proposal, but it is expected that he will do so soon, now that the Sharkey-Stribling fight at Miami is out of the way.

Mack said that he had backing for any bout put on in which Dempsey is named a participant, and was confident such a fight would attract 75,000 fans with a gate of about $750,000 to $1,000,000.

MARK STILL STANDS.

Although they weighed only 125 pounds each, Rathborne and Lyons, of the New York Athletic club, set a dead water record in the double sculls at the National regatta, Saratoga Lake, in 1879, that has never been beaten.

GOOD GOODS IN SMALL PARCELS

Muddy Ruel Pat Example of What Little Fellow Can Accomplish.

Midget Catcher in Major Loop Holds His Own With the Best.

That good goods come in small packages is exemplified by Herold Ruel, attorney-at-law and 145-pound catcher of the Washington Nats, who has been working in the American league for 11 seasons and been catching 100 or more games a season for nine years. Never has Ruel weighed more than 150 pounds, while, at times, his weight has gone below the 140 mark. Nevertheless, he has gone in behind the plate day after day and caught all styles of pitchers, including Walter Johnson, the speed king, Stanley Coveleskie and other spitters, Firpo Marberry, another hurler with terrific speed, Carl Mays, the famous submarine pitcher, and a bunch of rookies whose wildness made them anything but easy to handle.

Lowdermilk Wild Fellow.

In fact, the day he broke in as a major league catcher with the Browns when only a boy, he was called upon to team up with Grover Lowdermilk, than whom there was none wilder.

"No one knew how much speed Lowdermilk ever had," comments Ruel. "He never really threw as hard a ball as he could because of his lack of control. He knew he was wild and feared that if he put everything on the ball that he was capable of, he might kill some batter. So, he was content to throw a half-speed ball.

Ray Chapman's Death.

"That reminds me that I was catching Carl Mays the day he threw the ball that resulted in Ray Chapman death. Ray was a great boy. Everyone liked him. I yelled at him, but it was too late. He never had a chance to dodge.

"Marberry will throw more fast balls in a game than Walter Johnson did toward the close of his career, but when Walter wanted to throw a fast one, it was faster than any Marberry ever threw me.

"I believe Herb Pennock is the craftiest pitcher I ever caught. His control is almost perfect and when it comes to generalship I do not believe he has his equal.

Worked Without Signals.

"Had a pitcher once, Bill Piercy, now in the Coast league, who used to cross me up now and then, so one day I told him we would work without signals. We won that one.

"Yes, a catcher now and then switches signs with his pitcher and infielders, for you know a smart base runner can grab the signs from second base. A switch in signs is likely to be dangerous to the batter. In fact, I have seen more than one batter hit seriously with a pitched ball right after I had instituted a switch in signals. He would think a fast one was coming and would step right into a curve."

Hard To Replace Him.

Of course, Muddy, as he is known rather than Herold, cannot go on catching forever, but when he does pass out of the big league picture as a catcher, Washington is going to have its troubles replacing him. He was a particularly great asset to the Nats in '24 and '25, the two years that Washington won the American league pennant. He caught all but five games for the Nats in '24 and batted close to the .300 mark. Naturally, he was expected to be of great assistance at the bat in the world series with the Giants. But, six games were played before Muddy made a hit. Then he made two, scoring the tying run in the ninth inning and the winning tally in the twelfth. An injured ankle, by the way, prevented him from catching all 154 games that year.

Admitted to Bar.

When he does lay aside the mask, protector and big mitt, he probably wil become either a manager or devote himself to the practice of law. There was some talk of his becoming manager of the Cleveland Indians a year ago, but Roger Peckinpaugh drew the ticket. If no managerial position is offered, the law may claim Muddy. Passing the examinations that allowed him to practice in Missouri, after having graduated from Washington university, Ruel has kept in touch with the legal profession by study during the winters and attending trials during the summer months when baseball practice did not interfere.

With Four A. L. Clubs.

Ruel has been a member of four American league clubs. Breaking in with the Browns when a boy, he was released to Memphis, which sold him to the Yankees in 1917. Muddy, however, did not play in 1918, going to an officers' training camp, instead. In 1921, he figured in the trade with Boston whereby the Yankees acquired Hoyt and Schang while two years later, Boston traded him, along with Allan Russell, for Picinich and Shanks of Washington. And, with Washington, he has remained ever since, being one of three receivers, Luke Sewell and Micky Cochrane being the other two, to catch more than 100 games in 1928.

Matched With 'Hard Rock'.

Otto von Porat, who will fight Tom Heeney, recent contender for the heavyweight crown cast aside by Gene Tunney, next Tuesday at Chicago. Von Porat is known as one of the heaviest hitters in the prize fight business. The winner probably will be matched with Sharkey, conqueror of Stribling.

CRACKER SLATED STAY IN HARNESS

Schalk Spry as 'Rookie'; Ready Take His Turn Back of Plate.

NEW YORK, March 9—(I. N. S.)—Ray Schalk, once the best catcher in the American league, may don the mask and mitt for the New York Giants this season.

The former White Sox manager is with the Giants in the capacity of coach. But according to advices from the New York team's training camp at San Antonio, Tex., the fiery "Cracker" is displaying all the spryness of a veteran.

Schalk started to whip himself into condition as soon as he arrived at San Antonio. He took his turn with the others at batting practice, sped around the bases at a fast clip in running out his hits, threw to second with his rifle-like accuracy, shagged flies in the outfield and warmed up the pitchers.

Working Hard.

And when not performing any of these stunts or coaching the rookies, he topped off the day's workout by corralling a younger but heavier athlete and jogging around the park with him, to the intense disgust of the victim.

When Schalk signed with the Giants Manager John McGraw expressed the hope that Schalk would be able to carry part of the catching burden this season, but it was generally believed that the midget's active career was ended.

Good Ones Scarce.

If Ray keeps up the good work at training camp, however, he may yet see considerable service before October rolls around, for good catchers are scarcer than the well-known poultry's molars.

Few of the most prominent catchers in the big leagues today were stars six or seven years ago. In 1922 the leading backstops were Schalk, Bob O'Farrell, Wally Shang, Hank Gowdy, Steve O'Neill, Frank Snyder, Muddy Ruel, Eddie Ainsmith, Butch Henline, Bassler, Cy Perkins Hank Severeid, Al Walters, Ivy Wingo, Bubbles Hargraves and Luke Sewell.

Indications are that of this bunch only Ruel and Sewell will be first-string backstops in the big show this year.

WON EVERY PRIZE.

During his racing career, Jockey Johnny Callahan, now a trainer, guided home the winner of practically every major stake in the United States and Canada. He rode continuously from 1902 through 1928.

Yank Women Golfers to Invade England.

Maureen Orcutt, Glenna Collett and Marion Hollins will make America's bid for the British Women's championship at St. Andrew's, Scotland, in May. Helen Hicks, youthful star of Hewlett, Long Island, is expected to accompany the trio of veterans. They will sail in April.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET
By International News Service

NEW YORK, March 9

Most of the active industrial stocks closed the week today at the highest prices recorded since last Saturday. A rush to buy the coppers and the Radi combination was the outstanding feature of the short session of the market and even the week-end profit-taking failed to materialize on any large scale.

Stock trading was slightly under 2,000,000 shares in volume, one of the lightest half-sessions of the year to date.

Close to 175,000 shares of Radio, new and old stock, were turned over in a violent movement in these stocks. The old shares rushed up 20 points to 465, retaining 16 points of this new gain when the stock closed at $461 a share. The new stock advanced 4½ points to 95½ and closed at 92. Kennecott was the feature of the final period with a spurt to 99½, up 2½ points, on reports tha tthe stock would be exchanged share for share with American Smelting in the merger of the two companies. Smellers sold today at 116.

Western Union reacted about 5 points from the peak on official denial of a merger or combination with Radio, but the stock closed with a 2½-point gain at 215.

The Radio-Victor-Western Union combination, with a few of the well known industrial and specialty stocks for the first hour today monopolized the week-end market in another powerful and sweeping advance to the highest prices on record.

From the first sale of the new Radio shares appeared on the tape in the form of a 25,000-share block at 91⅛, up 2⅛ points from Friday's final price, the old stock meanwhile starting the day at 449, climbing to 465 in the first half-hour. This was a gain of nearly 100 points in a week of comparative inactivity until its sky-rocketing move was started at Thursday noon.

AN AUCTION—

WILL QUICKLY—Convert your property into cash. The auction method is today recognized as an equitable and sure way of selling property. A properly conducted auction means a positive sale on a definite date. It attracts several buyers to your home at the same time instead of individuals at various intervals who may be only "shopping around" for a house.

OUR FIRM PIONEERED—The auction method of selling houses in Lincoln and has actually sold more than any other firm. We have hundreds of satisfied clients to prove that our method is safe, certain and satisfactory. We believe that the prospective buyers trust an auction firm that merits confidence and will continue so long as that trust is not betrayed.

SINCE THE FIRST OF THE YEAR—We have sold eight houses at auction and it is our prediction that more houses will be sold in this manner this year in Lincoln than any previous year. If you contemplate selling your property in 1929, call us now and let us inspect your property and explain our method. You may do this without obligating yourself.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

WHIPPET STEPS AHEAD OF FIELD

Retains Seven-Bearing Crankshaft Despite Lowered Prices.

Bodies Made Roomier; Motor Compression Ratio Increased.

The remarkable public acceptance accorded the new Whippet six, said to have set a new high standard of quality construction and engineering features in the light six field, is cited as one of the outstanding features of the past year in the automobile industry.

Introduced at the lowest price ever reached by a six cylinder car, the Whippet six went even further, being equipped with a seven-bearing crankshaft, and even today the new Whippet six is outstanding as the world's lowest priced six with a seven-bearing crankshaft. This notable advancement centered the eyes of the entire industry on the Whippet six and its subsequent public acceptance and high standard of performance were chief factors in creating a demand even greater than was anticipated.

In Willys-Overland's introduction of the superior Whippet six, many of the features of the former model, including the fully drilled seven-bearing crankshaft, have been retained. However, the present bodies have been newly designed, made larger and roomier, and are marked by a style and quality development which illustrated a new idea of value and beauty in the low priced bracket.

Uses Less Gasoline.

The motor in the Whippet six has an increased compression ratio which has materially increased its performance rating and also has had a marked beneficial effect upon the gasoline consumption. Its ability to master steep grapes is attributed to the increase of power to an average of 50 horsepower as against 45 horsepower in its predecessor. The carburetor in the new Whippet six has been entirely redesigned to meet the change in compression.

In the adoption of the seven-bearing crankshaft for the Whippet six it is declared that this type of construction is necessary in a six cylinder car to eliminate vibration and give the superior character of engine performance that an answer of this type car is entitled to.

Restoring Rusted Rims.

It is necessary to scrape and sandpaper the surface to remove rust from rims. After a thorough cleaning, apply a coat of ordinary shellac mixed with some graphite. When this is dry, apply another coat. An aluminum paint will improve the loks of the rim if it is desired and will serve the same purpose.

Efficient Starting of Engine.

The air supply should be partly cut off when strting the engine to permit an extra supply of gasoline to be drawn into the mixing chamber, thereby making the mixture richer and more readily ignited. This is accomplished by pulling out the choke. After the engine has been running a minute or two and begins to warm up, the choke is returned to its normal position.

Watch Gasoline Supply.

Gasoline consumption should be carefully checked on a new car, so that the number of miles to the gallon it takes to operate it can be determined. This will also show how often it is necessary to add a new supply. This checking up on the gasoline also gives an opportunity to note if there is an excessive use or leakage, and, if so, to locate the trouble.

Worth Remembering.

A little lubricating oil added to the gasoline is recommended for the first few weeks of driving of a new car. This oil goes into the cylinders with the gasoline and is deposited on the cylinder walls in the combustion chamber, making a little better working arrangement than might otherwise be the case. The proportion used is one quart of medium oil to five gallons of gasoline.

Attention to Spare Tire Carrier.

When looking for looseness of a car, examine the spare tire carrier and if the least amount of play is found, tighten or repair it. Much damage can be done to the body or chassis by allowing any play here, particularly if two spare tires are carried.

MOTOR BOATING GAINS FRIENDS

Chrysler Official Discusses Increased Interest Annual Show.

More widespread public interest in motor boating this year than ever before is predicted by H. E. Fromm, of the marine engine division of Chrysler Motors. Mr. Fromm is well known in the motor boat industry, having been actively associated with it for twenty-nine years.

He points to the remarkable success of the 1929 motor boat show in New York, which was attended by approximately 35,000 persons daily; the much lower prices now asked for well-built craft; standardized engine hull and design, simplified construction and the faster speed now being obtained without increased stress on the hull or engine, and the growing number of motor boat display and sales rooms.

"The 1929 motor boat show made it clear that thousands who hitherto have depended solely on motor cars for safe, speedy and private transportation are rapidly becoming familiar with the possibilities for pleasure on the waterways. The absence of traffic congestion, the freedom of movement offered by motor boating, are very appealing to folk who seek healthful outdoor recreation," said Mr. Fromm.

Faith in Builders.

"Boats powered with the product of outstanding automotive manufactures gained the immediate respect and attention of the visitors at the show. From their experience with automobiles they place their faith in companies with sound reputation.

"Similar confidence on the part of the boat builders was evidenced by the fact that nearly three times as many Chrysler powered boats were dispayed at the 1929 show as all other makes combined. In the twenty-one months that Chrysler marine engines have been in production, Chrysler Motors has come to the forefront among builders of marine engines for popular-sized craft."

Chrysler Imperial and Royal marine engines are standard equipment for the Chris-Craft, Corsair Cruiser, A. C. F., Gar Wood, Dart, Jr., Wheeler Seaskiff, and Sea-Lyon, as well as optional equipment on many other makes of standardized boats.

Chrysler marine engines set a new high sales record for products of their size in 1928 when more than 1,000 of them were ordered and shipped.

Touring Car Requires a Navigator.

When on an extended tour one of the party should be appointed navigator, whose sole duty it is to keep the car on its proper course. It may be the driver or it may be the person sitting beside him in the front seat. Certainly, it should not be the whole family.

Replacement of Valve Springs.

The springs of valves do not have to break to become useless. Losing their tension, their efficiency is reduced to nothing, but because the engine goes on functioning the car owner fails to notice sub-normal performance. It pays to find out just what a difference new springs would make.

Where to Look for Highway Accidents.

Dangerous places in the highways cause the fewest accidents, while the locations which look so safe that drivers relax produce more accidents. Where the highway obviously is liable to invite accidents, drivers are extra cautious and negotiate the difficult places safely. However, where the open road looms ahead apparently free from obstruction and danger the relaxation and carelessness of drivers under such conditions increse the accident toll.

Oil Clutch to Silence Noise.

Extreme care should be exercised when applying oil to the clutch to give it silence. Unless sparingly used the lubricant will get on the plates, where it will cause severe damage. If the noise is the product of a lack of alignment it is better to have the unit realigned than to try oil.

The clutch spring is weakened, wearing the throwout collar unnecessarily, if the clutch is held out when waiting in traffic.

DODGE CONQUERS CHINA 'HIGHWAY'

Boulders and Unbridged Rivers Comprise Pekin-Kalgan Road.

American motorists who roll comfortably along on smooth pavement over well marked roads would age considerably in making the 125-mile journey from Pekin to Kalgan. A log of the trip would indicate that only an airplane could negotiate the route.

In following the "Blue Book" of the trail blazers, the driver's hair might stand on end if he glanced down the list of landmarks and found that a "horse's bend around sunken road—and mud" awaited him twenty-five miles out of Pekin. Three lines of trenches are next to be crossed. Then he might bounce along fifteen more miles and find a "Ford—with big boulders—bad place if water is high." At 44.5 miles, there is another ford with instructions to go upstream a short distance.

Such is a recent "drive-away" trip made in a new Dodge Brothers 1½ ton truck by the owner, who also transported a heavy load of freight. The trip was made safely in two days, with the owner's comment that twice the load could have been carried successfully.

Must Use "Boards."

If the first barriers were hurdled, the log informs the driver that there is a proposition of "Ford—mud hole—use boards" 58 miles out of Pekin. Two miles further, the boards must be used again to approach a high stone bridge. Emerging from this, the driver runs into heavy sand, "only 110 feet deep." This stretch is a mile long, and the trucking time is half an hour. At 78 miles, temporary relief is granted by the welcome entry of "Hit Road." But somehow this road quickly disappears into a sandy waste.

Ninety miles out of Pekin, the driver must watch for quick-sand, a 100-yard mud hole, a half-mile of heavy dry sand, a narrow rocky pass and two difficult fords through swift currents. In fact, the only difficulty he escapes is heavy traffic. And finally Kalgan is reached by way of a dry river bed.

All gasoline and oil for the trip had to be carried in containers aboard the truck. No filling stations grace the corners of such villages at Ma P'u Shoe, He Ma T'uer, Hsi P'o Tze, Wu Li Pu, Ni Ho Tze or Yao Chia Chuang that are located on the "highway."

SOCIETY PEOPLE In The PICTURES

Miss Mary Trude Bronson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Bronson of Fremont, who are announcing her engagement to Donald Alison Reed, son of Prof. and Mrs. A. A. Reed of Lincoln, today. Miss Bronson is a former co-ed at the University of Nebraska, and is a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. The wedding is to take place in California during the early summer.

Miss Ruth Smith is the attractive daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Roscoe Smith. She will arrive in Lincoln Easter morning from Wellesley to spend the spring holidays with her parents.

Mrs. Howard Bell, formerly Miss Marjorie Carr, and her baby, of Greeley, Colo., have been guests the past week of Mrs. Bell's mother, Mrs. Florence Carr.

Mrs. Mark Simons, before her marriage last Monday, was Miss Dorothy Yungblut, daughter of Mrs. W. W. Day.

An interesting Lincoln guest will be Mrs. Alan John Stanley of Atlantic, Ia., who comes the latter part of the month to attend the Founders' Day banquet of Chi Delta Phi, honorary literary sorority at the University of Nebraska. Mrs. Stanley was formerly Miss Ruth Moore, who will be remembered as prominent in dramatic and literary circles during the time she attended the University of Nebraska, and who gained considerable recognition as a playwright. She is the author of "The Red Cockatoo," which was presented by the University Players during Mrs. Stanley's senior year at Nebraska.

Last Tours Annual Art Exhibition

Thirty-ninth Show Closes Sunday With Three Lectures at Morrill Hall.

The thirty-ninth annual exhibit of the Nebraska Art association closes today with three gallery tours. The first at 2 o'clock conducted by Ernst Herminghaus, member of the board of trustees of the association, the second at 3 o'clock by Miss Gertrude Moore, of the department of history and criticism of art in the School of Fine Arts and the third, by Prof. Paul H. Grummann, director of the School of Fine Arts.

The response by members of the association, and those interested in art to this year's exhibit has been most satisfying. Clubs making reservations were provided with speakers competent to conduct gallery tours which added greatly to the visitors' enjoyment of the pictures. Many Lincoln clubs visited the exhibit and an increasing number from out of town motored in to enjoy the privileges of a truly representative collection of contemporary art.

Society Begins to Look to Activities of Warmer Days

With Country Club Opening April 1, and Eastridge Staging Party On Thursday Night, Indications Are That Society Has About Finished Its Whirl for Winter Months.

It would seem that the social whirl has whirled its last little whirl until spring bursts forth in earnest. It may be that the members of the inner sanctums of who's who socially are fed up on the more or less routine dinners and luncheons, and long for some of the activities that warmer weather will bring.

The Country club is to open about the first of April, with the opening dinner dance sometime during May. Many interesting features have been planned for the coming season at the club, which will no doubt be one of the popular haunts of the smart set during the late spring and summer months.

Eastridge club is having a St. aPtrick's dinner dance Thursday, and will have one each month the remainder of the season. About fifty couples are expected to attend the party which is to feature everything suggestive of old Erin.

Towles Are Home.

Perhaps when those of the smart set who have been a-journeying are all settled society will be a little more pert. Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Towle arrived home last Tuesday after being away five weeks. They spent a month in Florida and from there went to Princeton where their son, Curtis, is in school. In Chicago they met Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Cozier and spent a short time with them before returning to Lincoln.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce returned Saturday afternoon from Florida where they have been spending several weeks.

Meanwhile there is the Univer-

Co-eds To Compete In Riding

All riding enthusiasts, both in and out of university circles, will congregate at the Faulkner Brothers and Walker ring next Wednesday for the third Intramura riding competition. Events will begin about 6:45 o'clock and close about 8 o'clock. More than forty girls will ride in the three contests, using either privately owned or academy mounts. Keith Walker, instructor in horsemanship at the university, and Peg Ames, in charge of intramural riding, have planned some unique events to replace the customary musical chair ride and potato race.

It is definitely known that the compet is going to provide a chance for real exhibition of skill on the part of the contestants, and a good deal of amusement for the spetcators. Most of the girls have been riding for some months and will be able to give the onlookers a foretaste of the Junior league horse show which is only two months off.

From the girls riding Wednesday evening will probably be selected the sorority representatives who will ride in the "Big Show," contesting for the cup offered by the academy. Mr. Walker is positive that the girls have made real progress the last few months, and will make an excellent showing. Some of the more advanced classes are taking up jumping, and despite a few croppers, are coming along splendidly.

Lincoln Woman Is Guest At Hoover Inaugural Ceremony

Mrs. John G. Maher Impressed With Brilliance of Event, and Democracy of America's Social System As She Witnesses Inauguration from Box Between Mrs. Coolidge and Diplomatic Corps.

EVEN though the atmosphere was dulled somewhat by clouds and drizzling rain, the inaugural ceremonies last Monday at Washington, D. C., were unusually interesting and brilliant. Colonel and Mrs. John G. Maher and their daughter, Catherine, were invited guests, and occupied a box between that in which were seated Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Coolidge and members of the Hoover family, and the one arranged for the diplomatic corps.

According to Mrs. Maher the eager crowd that stood during the rain to witness the ceremony, was estimated at 250,000.

A Vivid Description.

The following vivid description of just what happened, and a close up of Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Coolidge and other notables, was sent from Washington by Mrs. Maher:

Sunday in Washington was a day of such clean sunshine and warm spring air that the crowds gathered in the city in overwhelming numbers, assured that the weather man was unduly pessimistic in his prediction of rain and colder weather. Every avenue and public building was crowded to capacity with sightseers and motorists, Sunday. The capitol rotunda and corridors were a restless mob guided by chattering captains detailing the beauty and the history of the place to many who came with an appreciation and a thirst for a circus more than an inspiring spectacle.

Monday morning was cloudy and the air had a pleasing tang that foretold rain. We went to the capitol and to the senate galleries at 10:30. Only those having tickets were allowed within the capitol building on the morning of March 4. Those having tickets to the ceremonies in front of the capitol were permitted to take their places at any time.

Like Theater Tickets.

The senate gallery tickets were numbered like seats in a theater. We had front row seats in the gallery division adjoining that in which Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover sat. The diplomatic gallery, where the wives and families of the ambassadors viewed the ceremonies, were on our left; the press representatives were in front of us in the gallery just over Vice President Dawes chair. Mrs. Johnson of California, with Mrs. Kendrick of Wyoming and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman of New York and Mrs. Shepard of Texas, had the seats next to ours. Directly behind us was Mrs. Robinson of Arkansas. It was through her courtesy that interesting faces and figures were made known to us during the ceremony. Mrs. Taft sat a few seats away in the same row.

House Members Enter.

After the senate was called to order, a discussion of an amendment to the immigration bill occupied the senators and continued until the last moment when the presence of the "speaker and the house of representatives of the United States" was announced. Business was suspended as Speaker Longworth and the members of the house took their places. The papers and the radio nave made the actual events an experience to the public, I know, so I am only going to give you a few impressions, too trivial, perhaps, to be mentioned by the professional.

The diplomatic corps in brilliant uniforms of gold and color were an effective group, headed by Sir Esme Howard, the dean, and followed by the others, the Turkish ambassador in his fez, the Chinese in black and gold and most spectacular of all, the Japanese in a uniform of richest cream cloth, emblazoned with embroideries of gold and color. The Supreme court in gowns and the general army, chief of naval operations nad commandant of the marine corps made up another uniformed group, taking their places on the opposite side of the chamber.

Coolidge, Hoover Seated.

The president, escorted by the committee on arrangements was announced, and President Coolidge entered and took his place facing the chamber in the center chair of a row of six just below the clerk's desk. His stony countenance was smiling and he seemed gratified at the burst of applause which greeted him. He became somewhat embarrassed, however, when it continued for some minutes, and his relief was evident when President-elect Hoover was brought to his side. They stood, almost exactly the same height, Mr. Hoover being the heavier figure, however. When they were seated ready to listen to the ceremonies, they crossed their knees, slouched in their seats, and Mr. Hoover's face took on an expression of problematic thought. Mr. Coolidge looked at the ceiling and seemed entirely abstracted from the surroundings. They did not converse for the full hour that they sat there, but after a time they assumed a duplicate position which was almost funny, elbows on the chair arms, hands clasped, fingers interlocking except the forefingers making a gable which rose and fell rhythmically.

Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover made a charming pair. Mrs. Coolidge wore a sand-colored cloth coat with large soft collar, and had a red fox fur thrown about her shoulders as she entered, and which she carried as she left. Her hat was a tailored straw of a rust-brown shade. Mrs. Hoover wore a dull plum-colored velvet frock with a small felt hat to match. Her coat was black satin with a sable collar. Mrs. Dawes wore a mink coat, brown hat and gown. Mrs. Gann's coat was grey with great masses of grey fur. She wore a blue hat.

Handsome Young Men.

Mrs. Hoover's two sons and her daughter-in-law were with her. The younger Mrs. Hoover's gown was a flowered brown velvet with a small brimmed hat to match. She is a dainty, beautiful girl. The two Hoover boys are exceedingly handsome in a clean-cut, brilliant way. The very evident good taste in the gowning and the demeanor of the Coolidges and Hoovers was worthy of genuine admiration. There is nothing cheap or egotistical about them. Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover were compelled to rise in their places and hold their wraps to admit late comers to places just as other spectators were, and they did it with an atmosphere of good-fellowship that makes one realize how exceedingly democratic the American social system really is.

After the ceremonies in the senate chamber, the people in the galleries were escorted to places in front of pillared platform, where President-elect Hoover was to take the oath. As we came out, a light drizzle began to fall. Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover "got lost" in the corridors on the way and delayed the ceremonies a few moments. President Hoover delivered his speech with raindrops beating his face, but it was a good speech, none-the-less, and the enthusiasm of the thousands listening was intense.

Pelted By Rain.

After the address, a closed car was brought up to convey Mr. and Mrs. Hoover to the white house. It was Mrs. Hoover who said "if all these people can stand the rain, we can, also. Open the back of the car." So she and the president rode in the rain.

We got into our car and were seated in the covered stands at the white house, facing the president's glass-enclosed box, before the presidential party arrived at the gates. When they came, escorted by a spectacular troop of cavalry prancing ahead of them, Mrs. Hoover's hat was wet to a shiny brown and President Hoover's topper was dripping at the brim, but they smiled joyously and waved at the people who stood out in the rain, most of them, for a sight of the new white house couple.

Lincoln, opened the exhibit with more than 700 in attendance. The living pictures animated by persons well known in Lincoln vied in interest with the art galleries during the evening.

The art exhibit was a popular place Sunday aftrnoons when Lincoln artists conducted gallery tours giving their interpretations of the pictures on display.

Voting on the pictures was another interesting activity of the exhibit. The trustees of the association required that the ballots be signed, resulting in more thoughtful selection.

The display of oil paintings was augmented by a beautiful and discriminating collection of photographs by artists of the United States and Canada. During the exhibit Mr. Richard M. Speaight, past president of the Royal Photographers of Great Britain gave an informal talk on photography as related to classic art.

The art of the poster had its place in the exhibit, recognized by the board of trustees through the prize of $25 offered by J. L. Teeters, a board member, and won by Miss Rose Reynolds of Lincoln.

The work of the 1929 Art Year will be brought to a close and organization of effort and material for the exhibit of 1930 will be carried on by the board as constituted at the recent election, as follows:

University Prepares For Civic Opera Performance

Carpenters Beginning Work on Coliseum Floor and Stage; Number of Mail Orders Indicates Crowd Will Hear Faust.

With the appearance of Chicago Civic Opera here less than two weeks away, plans are rapidly shaping for the "Faust" performance at the University of Nebraska coliseum, Thursday, March 21.

Several weeks ago the university carpenters started preliminary work on the improved plan for floor elevations which will feature the main floor seating at this season's opera performance. Instead of the three elevations of last year, the present scheme calls for a sloping raise from the fifteenth row to the back of the auditorium. This will be over three times the height of last year and will provide an improved vew from each seat.

The opera company again will require the use of the mammoth stage in handling the operatic production. The University of Nebraska coliseum is one of the few places on the transcontinental tour where the Chicago organization can present its beautiful stage spectacle just as it is arranged for Chicago opera-goers at the Auditorium theater.

Last year when the Chicago artists presented "Il Trovatore," John K. Selleck, business manager of university athletics and treasurer for the opera guarantors, solicited suggestions from the company regarding possible improvements for the coliseum stage. He was informed the coliseum presented one of the finest stage outlays which the organization encountered during its trans-continental tour.

While work in the carpenter shop is going ahead on the floor improvements, mail orders continue to reach Selleck's office from Nebraska patrons providing additional indications that Lincoln will be the mecca for music lovers the day of the opera.

Delegations of college students will help swell the throng. Reservations have been received from Nebraska Wsleyan, Cotner college, Doans college, Midland college and Peru Teachers college. Wesleyan, with over 300 reservations, tops the list.

The Chicago Civic Opera company appeared in El Paso, Tex., Phoenix, Ariz., and Los Angeles, Cal., during the past week, the Los Angeles engagement continuing through next Monday. Before the Lincoln engagement the artists will appear at Fresno, Sacramento, Oakland, Cal. and Tulsa, Okla.

Mr. Selleck is in receipt of enthusiastic reports of the opera seasons at Dallas and San Antonio. The company presented "grand opera without a deficit" for the first time at Dallas. The Fair Grounds auditorium was sold out before the performance and standing room was at a premium.

The same story comes from San Antonio. W. G. Higgins, manager of the San Antonio guarantors, has written Mr. Selleck that the three opera appearances there drew an attendance of more than 15,000 people.

"Faust was presented by Chicago Civic Opera to the greatest crowd ever assembled to attend opera in San Antonio," says a San Antonio music critic.

"Five thousand five hundred people gathered to hear the Gounod opera which was rendered in a triumph of dramatic and musical beauty."

Club Girls to Attend Conference

Plans for the all-Nebraska Girl Reserve conference in Lincoln, April 5, 6, and 7, are being rapidly developed. About 500 delegates are expected. The theme of the conference is "We" and is built around the modern advancements in opportunity and responsibility of girls. Emphasis will be given to present educational advantages by means of a tour of the university campus. Our civic responsibilities will be stressed on a tour to the state house. By means of discussion the girls will grow in understanding of service they owe to all groups with whom they come in contact. Last year the conference was in Omaha with approximately 400 representatives present from more than fifty high school clubs of the state.

Delegates will be met at the train Friday afternoon by a committee of eight girls from the four high school clubs. Following registration, a dinner will be served by the members of the Bethany high school group at the Y. W. C. A.

An "air-port" party will be arranged and conducted by the University Place club, Friday evening.

Miss Weichselbaum, recreational director of Lincoln, will advise the girls in their planning and will lead the games. Dixie Lowry, together with a large committee, has charge of the affair. Paper caps in the form of flying helmets, and leaders in flying clothes will make the trip more realistic.

Saturday morning a memorial service for Mable Cratty, national general secretary of the Y. W. C. A. for almost thirty years, will be sponsored by the group at University Place.

The discussions which will follow are being arranged by the teachers college club. Leaders are being selected from among girls all over the state, from university students, and include many Lincoln people.

Saturday Evening Banquet.

Time will be devoted to interviews with specialists who will meet the girls an hour before the Saturday luncheon, which will be served by Teachers College Girl Reserves. Exhibits will be in the "Y" gymnasium Saturday and they will include material, programs, publicity, songs, skits, camp craft, party suggestions, peace and world-friendship material, hobbies, ceremonials, handcraft, and service suggestions, together with ideas that will directly interpret the ideals and challenge of the Girl Reserve movement to local clubs. Material will be gathered from all parts of the state. The Bethany club has charge of the exhibits.

The afternoon will be spent in learning to know the city and the features that are of statewide interest. Following a visit to the agricultural college, the girls will visit the Nebraska campus, with extra time given to Morrill hall. A conducted tour of the state capitol will be followed by a tea.

Lincoln high school has charge of the banquet Saturday evening at the chamber of commerce. A pageant will be given depicting the history of the Girl Reserve movement. Many entertaining numbers together with toasts by representatives of Nebraska districts will also be included in the program.

The conference will close with a church service Sunday morning, the delegates attending in a body, in full uniform.

Y. W. C. A. Spring Classes

Health classes have begun to chase the elusive tennis ball around, learning the foundation strokes. As soon as the court dries they will go out doors.

New and old golfers are given an opportunity to learn that great outdoor game before they are able to go on the courses to play. The classes last year were enthusiastic and gained much.

Horseback riding gets more interesting every week. We are able to ride outside part of the period now and get that expert instruction so much appreciated. The horse show in May will be interesting to all the girls who have taken advantage of these opportunities.

Women of Lincoln are more interested in sports than ever before and hope to present every opportunity for them to gain and keep that eternal youth or the real joy of living which they so much want.

Lincoln Woman's Forum.

The Lincoln Woman's Forum met Friday at the Y. W. C. A., Mrs. C. E. Burton presided. The response to roll call was given with current events which showed wide reading and close observations by the members. Miss Mae Chamberlain presented "Some phases of World Peace." She made several quotations from "The Way the World is Going," by H. G. Wells. He says the old saying, "In times of peace prepare for war," should be changed to "In times of peace prepare for peace." Wells originated the recent famous expression that the World war was "a war to end war", which expression was pronounced inbecile by Kathleen Norris, who said we might better have a "peace to end war."

The discussion which followed covered both sides of the question.

Miss Chamberlain quoted Isaiah 2:4 and asked if that prophesy is to come true we must do our best to help if "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

After adjourning several went to Morrill Hall and visited the art department of the Woman's club and the art exhibit with Prof. Kirsch's group.

One of the Forum members, Mrs. Fern L. Upton, wrote and dedicated to the Forum this poem:

Blow, Strong Winds of the North, and give me courage;
Blow, sweet winds of the east, and give me grace;
Blow, soft winds of the south, and give me love;
Blow, wild winds of the west, and give me strength;
Blow, ye winds of God, and give me life.

COME SHOP with MODERN EVE

Easter brides and spring vacationists would do well to make a ramble through the stores this week for never before have I seen such an abundance of new merchandise, and then, too, so many stores are featuring their spring openings that it's just interesting to be down. Glance through this column today and perhaps you'll glean some information on what is being shown.

At Arthur's

WE not only expect to find just the type coat we're looking for but at the price we want to pay. Mr. Levy has for so many years supplied the demands of smart women that he knows just what type clothes it takes to be decidedly chic. This spring's showing is especially low priced and so alluring, beautiful satin, moire and velvet coats, luxuriously trimmed in fur, may be found in the dressy group. Twills and smart novelty tweeds, these are for sport and street. A great demand has been to find the proper coat to use with a dress to form an ensemble, so naturally Mr. Levy also has a smart showing of these.

Silk Theatre Suits Have Printed Chiffon Blouses

SO-CALLED "theater suits" consisting of jacket or coat, also skirt of plain silk flat crepe are said to be liked with blouses of printed chiffon. Lace is sometimes used but the chiffon seems to be favored and in larg patterns which contrast gaily with the solid color of the suit.

You May Have the CORRECT hat for every ensemble and still be termed economical if you select yours at the Band Box, where no hat is more than $5. Natural straws, beautifully moulded, an abundance of violet, red and the voguish sun-tan shades are developed in pliable shapes and very smart lines.

I Don't Know What I Expected to Find.

BUT I never imagined it to be a ladies' apparel shop. I'm speaking of that adorable little nook just opened in the Cornhusker Hotel building. It looked so homey with its sheer ruffled curtains, soft carpet and painted furniture, that I just wanted to stay and look until my hearts content. You know this little shop is showing millinery, hose, lingerie and beautiful apparel for spring. Of course I need not tell you that all the merchandise is brand new and arriving daily for the co-ed's Easter ensemble. The Shop is being maintained by two delightful women, who make it their business to know just what is in demand and will be only too glad to aid you in your selection. Remember this is in the Cornhusker hotel with one entrance through the lobby.

Silk Sleeping Pajamas Also Feature Tuck-in Blouse

NOT only in lounging pajamas is the tuck-in style adopted but it is now seen in sleeping pajamas as well and is already being featured. Both crepe de chine and glove silk are employed for them and usually the tuck-in is so made that it can be worn outside the trousers as well as inside. The trousers are made with fitted belts in the front and elastic fulling in the back although an occasional model has its fulness pleated into a straight band which ties at the side in a bow.

It Is Not An Affliction

TO BE stout, but its a tragedy, if no merchant has thought of you on their buying trip. Harris-Goar's have an extremely nice line of Easter togs for the stout matron, and the nice and unusual part is that they are fashioned of lovely spring shades and with interesting straight line effects. Then, too, there are some printed models, that are very popular in stouts. The small design type, with clever coats, to make up a nice ensemble. These may be purchased from $15 to $34.75. Harris-Goar's have an interesting hat section and handle the smart Page hat. On this item, too, their buyer has thought of the matron and there are many large head sizes in these. You will be extremely well dressed if you are a stout and consult Mr. Fox on the clothes which will help to slenderize and youthify you. Remember at Harris-Goar's your Easter clothes may be paid for after Easter.

Not since the days of red flannels—which this generation regards as highly comic — has red been sponsored for lingerie. Yet bright red in one of the newest colors to be seen in lingerie and its use is traceable to the ensemble mode. With present-day short skirts light or colored lingerie is apt to be an inharmonious note in the red costume, it is said, and as a consequence, new lingerie in bright red georgette and ninon is making its appearance in the market.

Bakou Combined With Felt

Narrow brimmed bakou and ballibuntl models in solid or felt combinations are receiving flattering attention. While the majority of these models reflect a tailored styling there are apparent certain details of workmanship which give them a distinctly feminine note.

Piped Ballibuntls.

Th ballibuntls are distinguished by pipings of a darker tone, or as in the natural types, brown grosgrain ribbon is employed. Invariably this fabric is used on the crown to emphasize the brim manipulation. Broken effects are shown by fan pleats which have the crown over-lapping in a pointed effect.

Tucked Bakous.

Bakou with felt is prominent with either body used for the brim in the more tailored types and the straw inserted in novelty box pleated effects in the dressier turbans. Straws devoid of contrasting trimming are individualized by novelty tucked details.

Sports Tricots.

In a popularity priced line the tricot turbans are given special emphasis. The visca types are particularly outstanding and are expected to be the leding item of the summer season. Several sports tricots of the novelty silk effects are also highlighted in this collection.

Kinney's Have a Nice

BRAND of hose which they are selling for only $1.29. You may buy these in all the new sun-tan shades. Why not complete your spring wardrobe with several pairs of these inexpensive popular hose.

You See Them

ON others and you wonder where they get those clever coats, and yet if you just follow me around a half day I could show you some that would certainly tempt you. For instance I found a perfectly adorable black chiffon broadcloth coat with striking cape effect of self material. The finish, tailoring and the simple touch of one white gardenia made it exceedingly smart and very chic. This was at Colton's and selling at $24.75. Then, there were others, just as alluring, some with exquisite broadtail trim and other summer fur. The models shown for general sport wear, were of twill and tweed, these were decidedly tailored, and do you know I found some priced as low as $14.95? I could just rave forever about others, but you must see them for yourself.

Some very pretty ensembles were fashioned of lovely colorful prints with the coat of neutral shades and lined in the print. While you're there, better see the pretty showing of dresses. Their buyer tells me that never before has he had such a complete range of sizes and such amazing prices. You'll enjoy every minute of your visit at Colton's.

One of the First Things

TO DO when planning your St. Patrick's party is to decide upon the refreshments. Of course the most delectable things which are the least bother are the usual choice, that is why so many women are ordering their cakes directly from Gooch's. You may order any kind you prefer and have the special decorative icings symbolic of the day. Just now these cakes are delightfully frosted in shamrocks and green. The only thing demanded of you is to be sure and place your order early and specify your special kind. It will be delivered to your door the day of the party. It Makes No Difference

HOW much you pay for your hose there is always that dangerous snag or run that ruins the life of them. The minute one comes in your hose you should form the habit of immediately taking it to Ben Simon's where they may be mended exquisitely and I then should say invisibly. You may leave them there one day and call for them the next day. You'll be surprised at their re-knit method which insures you a perfect mend without being visible. You could pass them off as new anytime.

MINERVA'S MAIL

Take Your Troubles To Minerva

An Interesting Review of The Season's Best In Plays, Given by "A Worker"—Only the Stolid Fein Escape Disappointments — The Fight to Retain Ideals Is Worth While.

Winning Lost Ground.

Dear Minerva: "Chicks come home to roost." After an absence of years I have returned to my old tramping ground: O street, for a while; business reasons of course. I opine that Minerva's Mail is edited by the same Minerva that guided its course a decade and a half ago. Lincoln has made some rather remarkable advancement architecturally but does not seem to have changed any characteristically—not much advancement from an urbane point of view. It still clings to its obsolete blue laws with all the tenacity with which Pennsylvania clings to its witchcraft superstitions. This is surprising in view of the fact that all over the country there has been in late years a marked trend away from the blue law bugaboo, even in smaller cities there has been a strong tendency to relegate those useless and foolish things to the limbo of Puritan days where they belong and it naturally seems strange to find in a city of Lincoln's size and importance the rare paradox of pronounced advancement along many lines and retrogression or at least almost complete stagnation in what one naturally considers a corresponding channel. Just as business begets business and like begets like so advancement begets advancement quite naturally. When it fails to do so, it reflects an unnatural and unhealthy state of affairs somewhere along the line, but this is not the subject I intended to write about; just drifted into it.

"Old memories are yours to burn" to paraphrase a line from Ethelbert Nevins' Rosary song but let's not burn them; they are too precious so I say it positively pains me to see the lovely, old theater at Thirteenth and P streets dark and desolate. Time was when it was Lincoln's only playhouse and though theaters have multiplied rather rapidly in this city during the last decade and a half, it is still the only real theater in the city; the only theater having a proscenium arch sufficiently high to properly stage the road shows and the larger vaudeville acts—still it is in disuse. For nearly forty years that corner has been a center of light, gaiety, pleasure and crowds and now it is practically deserted. Upon its stage nearly all the great artists of both opera and drama of the last four decades have appeared. Structurally, the building is said to be as substantial as the day it was completed but

"The lights have fled
The garlands dead
And all the guests departed."

Across the street one of the largest and most beautiful theaters in the west is near completion and rumor says it is going to be another vaudeville and picture affair. Heaven forbid! Why, what's the matter with vaudeville and pictures? Nothing, absolutely nothing. I'm fond of both, only there is such a thing as having too much pie and cake. Come to think about it, Lincoln did have a regular Orpheum when I left long years ago. What did you do with it?

Perhaps you have guessed it. What? That I am not of the present flapper and cake-eater generation. Righto and thank God for small favors. Right here I confess that I am approaching the "fat and forty" age, only I disclaim the fat, and I admit that my memory harks back to the days when the Star twinkled minus any "Minerva's Mail" and that is quite a ways back. Am I not right Editress? Fondly I recall the days before the war when Maude Adams, Lillian Russell, Anna Held, John Drew, Henry Miller, and the Fulton Stock company and breathe it softly: September Morn were names to conjure with, those happy days when Mitzi in "The Spring Maid," "Pom Pom," "Sari" and other tuneful successes used to make night at Thirteenth and P streets both gay and glorious. By the way, a few weeks ago Collier's magazine printed an interview with Mitizi in which the diminutive song bird was quoted as saying that "The road is dying" and that in her opinion, it only has about five years to live. Horrible prediction but I fear only too true. Mitzi placed the blame for this deplorable condition largely upon two things, first: the tendency of the stars to "High-hat the provinces" coupled with a natural desire to escape the hardships of the road by clinging to long runs on Broadway; second: the fact that the younger generation are satisfied with pictures and vaudeville because they have never known anything better; something like the prohibitionists hope to force upon us in regard to what we drink but probably won't get away with. 'Twould be too bad if we lost all our individuality and became like a flock of sheep driven hither and yon every time some reformer cracks his lash; surely the American public deserves a better life than that. Again I strayed away from the original subject; believe I was talking about Mitzi and she is far more worthy of discussion than our revenue-raking-in reformers and their killjoy propositions. Mitzi says she likes the people of the smaller towns and cities and is willing to go anywhere that she may be wanted; contrary to most stars she does not despise the provinces and their people; she likes "The Road." Here is a chance for somebody to do some real missionary work and earn the undying gratitude of those who have higher interests in life than merely driving around in a high-powered car and petting and necking all the time. Why not bring some of the good shows back to Lincoln? We have a theater here suitable for them which is more than Omaha has and if properly advertised would no doubt draw some patronage from Omaha; that patronage with what is here ought to make about a dozen or more worthwhile road show attractions during the winter seasin pay.

Recently the writer visited Chicago and New York and embraced the opportunity to take in some of the big shows as I always do when in the east. Here are a few good ones that ought to be brought out this way for cultural reasons if for nothing more:

White Lilacs. One of the loveliest and most beautiful things of the current theatrical season. Something like Blossom Time, only based on the love affairs of Frederick Chopin and Madam George Sand instead of the life of Franz Schubert. Grand ladies and men and picturesque peasants. Quaint dances, beautiful scenery and Chopin's tender, haunting melodies running through the operetta. Introduces Franz Liszt, Monsieur Balzac and other noted people of the period. Guy Robertson makes a handsome, manly Chopin and he knows how to sing while the beautiful Odette Myrtil makes of the strange, eccentric Madam George Sand a piquant though altogether lovable character. That fine old actor: DeWolfe Hopper adds dignity and artistry to the cast.

Three Musketeers. Dashing and delightful for those who like a large male chorus headed by the handsome young star: Dennis King who played the leading role in The Vagabond King Company at the Great Northern theater in Chicago last year but not with the company which presented that show in Lincoln last October. The Vagabond King show seen here a few months ago was sure a frost after seeing the original company in Chicago.

My Maryland. Memories of Mrs. Leslie Carter in the play of that name produced in "The Gay Nineties." History and romance, largely the latter. All the glory and glamour of the old South. Tears and smiles. Soldiers and lots of them; boys of the blue and boys of the gray; scores of handsome fellows and flashing swords and a bevy of pretty girls in the hoop skirts and crinolines of the Heroic Sixties. Stirring marches and dreamy waltzes; a romantic serenade or two and one simply exquisite mother song at the close of the second act. A tender love story told in music; We Are Tenting Tonight On the Old Camp Ground, John Brown's Body, The Girl I Left Behind Me, The Mockingbird and other soul-stirring, lovely old tunes of Civil war days. Clean as a whistle; you can take your mother, your grandmother or the pastor of your church to see it and look them in the face after the show is over without blushing or having anything to apologize for.

Rio Rita. Along the Mexican border town on the rainbow tinted desert, then a cave scene in that trouble-tortured land. Act two: A beautiful Spanish patio and garden and the great shawl. Act three: A floating bootleg palace plying up and down the Rio Grande. Dashing young Texas Rangers, beautiful Mexican senoritas. Spanish shawls and fans, Spanish music and dances. Spanish wines and the click of castinets. Gorgeous scenery and beautiful costumes—what there is of them; a typical Ziegfeld production but not as scantily clothed as his pieces usually are. More sophisticated than the first three named but altogether delightful and well worth seeing.

The Strange Interlude. A strange play given partly in the afternoon and partly in the evening. Unusual and really fine but probably not suitable for a road-show production. A wonderful character study but it takes too long to produce it.

Sunny Days. Splendid show. Youth and springtime and lilting tunes.

Straight Through the Door with the fine American actor: William Hodge.

Mae West in "Diamond Lil." Miss West is a gifted and beautiful woman. The white slave traffic as it was in the so-called "Gay Nineties." No doubt a truthful but a rather sordid picture of conditions and a state of society now happily past. Not vulgar but rather daring in spots and would probably offend the orthodox. An excellent character study well worth reviewing by the student of history, morals, etc.

Rosaille. Indescribably lovely music and girl show of the higher class featuring the splendid dancing of Marian Miller. Ditto Ziegfeld's Showboat, Irene Bordeman in The Musicbox Review, George White's Scandals, Earl Carroll's Review, all tuneful and girlie, girlie par excellence.

The New Moon, tuneful, bright and pretty but I must stop so I close with the question: Why not some of these good things for Lincoln again? Properly advertised they should pay even as Grand Opera does. Is there anyone here interested enough in the matter and possessing courage enough to try a worthy experiment? There is such a thing as winning back lost ground you know. A Worker.

Challenge of Life.

Let this be life's challenge.

It is the easiest thing in the world to become cynical—the most difficult to remain sweet and tolerant and understanding. It is so simple to choose the easiest way and drift into seeking mere comforts of life or the excitement that covers regrets.

Don't be a weakling and choose the easy way. Be strong and courageous and cling to your ideals and standards and love of life. Fight to retain the zest of living. It is most worth while.

Disappointments — embittering, disillusioning experiences enter the lives of most of us. Only the stolid few who are more vegetable than animal, escape them. It is the strong person who can mark them down to experience, even rate them as character builders and continue with flag hung high.

It is the afraid-of-life, weak person who goes under. She who clenches her teeth and rises above circumstances will find reward in her own strength, find contentment in her own developed philosophy.

The writer of the following letter has a battle before her, but I'm backing hre to win.

Dear Minerva: I have been a faithful if somewhat skeptical raeder, skeptical in the sense that the answers to so many questions are surely self-evidnet to the writer. But I now come seeking for advice and inspiration, for, it seems to me, I have come to a veritable crossroad in my life. A life where so much of the past is composed of unfulfilled desires and bitter memories and the future holds no promise.

And, Minerva, I'm not being melodramatic, but I've reached the age of twenty-three where I can't keep drifting on and my life seems somehow so wasted and just attempts to attain that which I haven't been able to. Through sheer despair I've been tempted to end it all, though I realized the wickedness of such an act. But to quote a passage I recently read that expressed my doubts—"In this engulfing wave of desolation, I wondered if God-minded people arriving uninvited into his Heaven. Did he, pouring out your draught of life, expect you to drink it down to the last bitter drop?—wishing you to atone and suffer for your own misdoings, but demanding of you neither evasion or shrinking."

I have learned that to love too much and unwisely only ends in heartache. I fell madly in love with a man and he with me. He urged an immediate marriage but I said I must finish my years of college. Then we drifted on, not really engaged, but with an understanding between just us two. Now, I believe that such "understandings" often lead to disastrous endings. We weren't together often then, due to the distance separating us, and we both had the desire to make up for this when we did spend an evening together. He urged more intimacies on the above grounds and somehow I wasn't strong enough to resist or realize how we were drifting. We were neither of us bad and had no intention of overstepping any bounds of decency.

Then he went away, where his work took him, and when he did come home, it was as before. Then I realized a difference in his letters. Later he came and told me he was afraid marriage for us was out of the question. His health was poor and in him was an unconquerable desire to roam, always seeking some new line of work or adventure. I didn't blame him entirely, and I learned one lesson—that to give yourself unrestrainedly to a man lessens his desire and respect for you. Something went out of my life then—and it hasn't returned. That has been a year ago, yet a chance face that reminds me of him, or an association that recalls the past when he and I were together, seems to bring back the same leaden feeling in my heart.

Later I started going with another man. But I realized that my first experience could not be forgotten. But I couldn't bear just to stay at home and this friend and I had many a good time together I didn't realize it, but his was more than a mere passing fancy and not long ago he proposed that we get married. I was torn between a desire to marry him and end all the suspense, but somehow I couldn't say yes, then. He isn't a man that I can look up to and respect as my mate for life. Not that he isn't a fine, upright, morally and physically clean young fellow, with good character. But I can't help but know (I'm not being egotistical that I am his superior in intellect and his ideas are so much different from mine. He doesn't especially care for the things I do and I fear that six months married life with him would find me more dissatisfied and unhappy than I am now. What would I do? My friends all advise me to take him. He is a business man in a fair sized town with prospects which though not startling bid fair to be successful. I read that heartbreak is where unhappiness ceases, and peace enters in. Then my heart must not have been broken, for, as yet, I have found not that peace. Sometimes I think I shall go mad.

Things that interest other people seem so trivial and it is rare that a looked-forward-to social event ends with anything but more heartache to me. I think I must get away, out among strangers. Do you believe this theory that for every person there is a true mate waiting if that person but has patience? Or do you think that I should marry this man, and that that respect and content, which is after all what love turns out to be, will come to me. I have thought about it so much that I seem to go around in a circle and get nowhere. Indecision.

A. Don't compromise with your own ideals and hopes by marrying a man you do not love. You are very young yet, though you think twenty-three is an advanced age. Have patience and courage and strength and life will produce for you happiness and understanding.

Feed Fat Away

The Food is in Marmola

It seems queer, but the modern method is to feed away excess fat. The food is a gland substance, taken from cattle and sheep. The amount decided by scientific tests is two grains a day.

The reason is this: Medical research has found that the great cause of excess fat lies in a weakened gland. It is really a disease. No exercise or diet can correct it.

When that gland is under-active, too much food goes to fat. Physicians, the world over, in treating obesity, now try to correct that condition.

The main factor is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. They were perfected in a famous medical laboratory. People have used them for more than 20 years—millions of boxes of them. They have told the results to others. Not only constant loss of weight, but new health and vitality. Thus the use has spread, from year to year, until countless people use this modern method.

You can see the results wherever you look. Slender figures are the rule. Excess fat is now a rarity. Men and women try to look and feel their best.

Try this method for excess fat in any part that makes you look old or abnormal. Watch the fat fade away. Watch the new vigor that comes. You will be amazed and delighted. Don't go on with a weight of fat when so many are getting slender. Start today.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

HOME BUILDING TO ADVANCE AS FROST RECEDES

Construction of Smaller Structures a Feature of 1929 Program.

HIGHER STANDARDS ARE NOW IN ORDER

Inspector Thinks Speculation Past; Fewer Larger Buildings Seen.

Held up for two months now by unusual weather conditions, home building in Lincoln is expected to start in earnest this spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

Three feet of frozen earth has presented such an obstacle to economical excavation that very little of it has been done so far.

That condition has not been a barrier, however, to the start of construction work on one of Gold's new additions. Since the building to the south of the present retail store is being erected on the site of an old one, few difficulties in the line of earth removal were offered.

But steam shovels aren't used in providing foundations for the average dwelling.

Forecast Is Not Clear.

Just how many of thse "average homes" and how many business blocks or other structures will be completed during the year 1929 remains to be seen. No one can tell with much surety and City Building Inspector Frank J. Peck won't even venture a prophecy. The regular march of events, he says, has been too much altered by the intense cold.

But it does seem fairly evident that last year's total valuation figures on new buildings won't be surpassed and may not be equalled. The reason for it is that few large structures have been scheduled for erection this season.

Such buildings as the Sharp, the Stuart, the Federal Trust, the Cornhusker and Capital hotels and Lincoln's great schools run up the valuation total without much affecting the number of permits.

There is no reason to suppose that any decrease will occur in the number of single residences built. And two family dwellings also are specialties in Lincoln.

Curve Near Turning Point.

The high peak was reached in Lincoln in 1925 when permits for $7,006,076 worth of new construction were issued. In 1926, that figure sank to $5,951,465; 1927, $4,398,540; and 1928, $3,221,608.

Thus the curve has been downwards, but City Engineer Dave Erickson does not believe it is destined to sink much if any lower. Within a year, he declares, all extra office space in the city will be absorbed. The post-war average year, prior to 1924, was about three million dollars. During 1918, the low ebb of $759,172 was reached. Before that, the high mark was $1,939,916 in 1916.

In February this year, but 12 permits for a total of $188,375 were issued. They included the Gold building—hence the high valuation. In February last year, 69 permits were issued, with a valuation of $115,515. The January record of 35 permits and 86,525 this year compares with 54 permits and $134,315 last. This is but an illustration of how cold weather has held up work.

There is one positive, optimistic note in the building situation. That is the mortgage and property transfer record as kept by the county register of deeds.

Transfer Records Look Good.

During January and February this year, more deeds were recorded than for the same period last, and the amount of the consideration was greater.

Part of this is due to the big improvement in farm land sales. Four or five times as many farms are being sold this spring as last, and the consideration average more.

But the rest of the story pertains directly to city property.

Here is the tabulation for the first two months of the year 1928 and 1929:

Deeds	439	460
Consideration	$858,695	$1,185,090

A definite advance in the number and amount of satisfied mortgages also is registered for these first two months of 1929. A slight decrease in mortgages given is noted, but the consideration there also increases. Here are the figures:

	1928	1929
Mortgages filed	374	357
Consideration	$1,356,713	$1,457,865
Releases filed	347	374
Consideration	$807,710	$1,124,350

A trend towards btter construction methods in homes is seen by Building Inspector Peck. He takes this as an indication that the era of building for speculation has passed, and that building for home making has arrived.

LINDY'S RETURN SET FOR SUNDAY

Braves Dangers of Revolution to Fly to Brownsville.

No Sign of Rebel Movements Seen During Saturday Hop.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., March 9—(U. P.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh engaged successfully in another mission of service today when he braved the dangers of revolutionary Mexico to inaugurate the Mexico City-Brownsville air mail and passenger lines.

Leaving behind the comparative peace and security of Mexico City, as yet untouched by rebel bullets in the latest Mexican uprising, he flew over a vast area of rural Mexico now seething with revolution against the government.

Although his route took him beyond the zone of actual fighting, a forced landing in the mountainous and sparsely settled section between Mexico City and Brownsville would have proved embarrassing and perhaps endangered his life.

But so skillful a navigator is Lindbergh that he made the trip without any mishaps. He will remain here overnight and carry the mail on the return trip to Mexico City Sunday.

No Rebels Seen.

No signs of rebel movements were seen from Lindbergh's plane as it winged its way from Mexico City to Tampico and Brownsville.

Jacob de La Vuelta, a Mexico city newspaperman, one of nine occupants of the big tri-motored plane, said no signs of rebels were seen. Other passengers were silent about the flight.

Colonel Lindbergh himself remained in the plane until police and soldiers had been able to push the crowd back. Then he was whisked away in an automobile to Fort Brown, where he had luncheon and spent the afternoon. Newspaper men did not reach Lindbergh.

He did not make his appearance when Captain Ira Eaker's plane, in which the Question Mark pilot hopes to fly from Brownsvill to the canal zone on a dawn to dusk hop, was christened by Miss Mary Fechet, daughter of the air corps chief.

Miss Fechet broke a bottle of grape juice over the ship as she named it Pan-American. Others in the christening party were Miss Amelia Earhart, trans-Atlantic aviatrix, Major General James E. Fechet and Mrs. Fechet.

Attends Banquet.

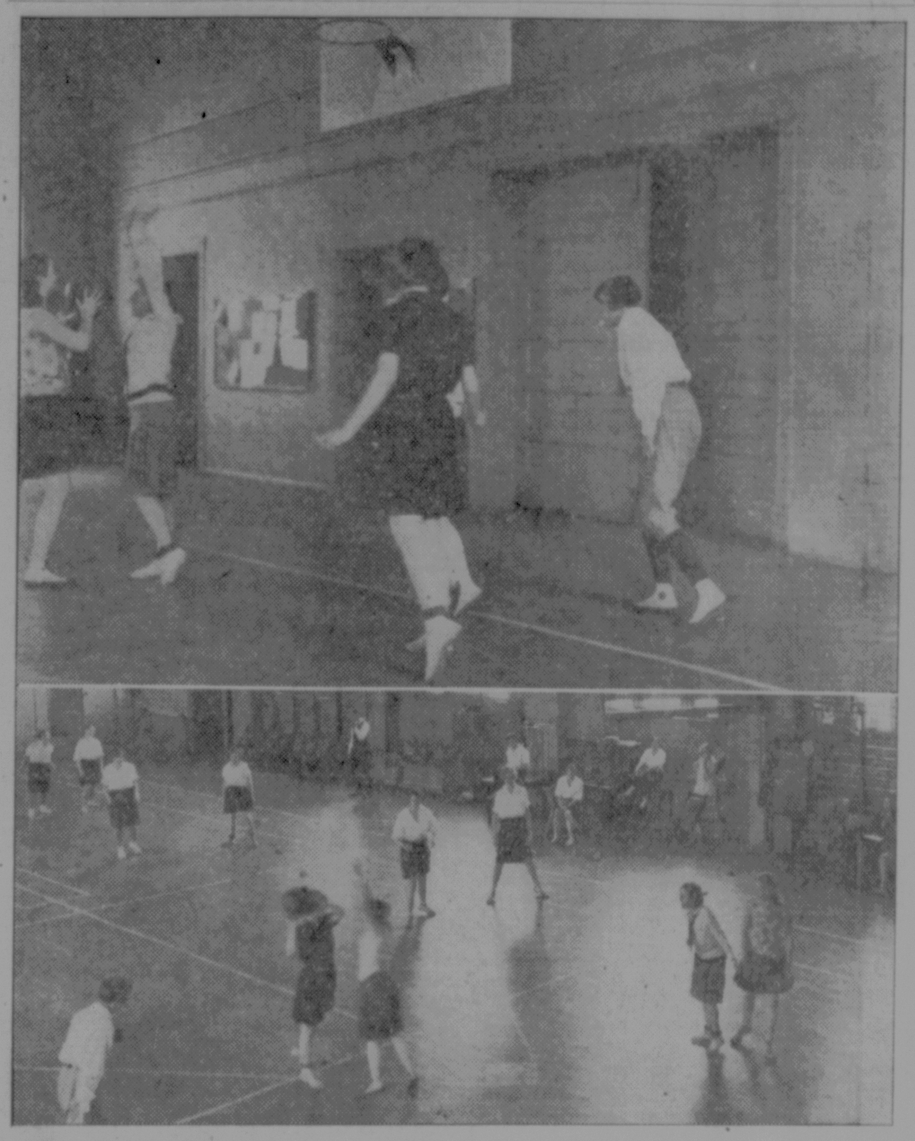

Lindbergh, was however to appear at a banquet here tonight honoring himself, Miss Earhart, Frank Hawks, transcontinental record holder, Gen. Fechet and others.

Lindbergh expects to take off for Mexico City on the return mail trip about 7 a. m. Sunday.

Lindbergh took off with his load of mail from Valbuena field, Mexico City, at 7:56 a. m., and arrived at the international airport here at 1:36 p. m. He kept practically true to his schedule, making but one stop enroute, at Tampico, where he serviced his plane.

Awaiting him at the local field were thousands of visitors. Police threw a guard around his plane and a fife and drum corps formed to escort him to the reviewing stand, where Major General Fechet and other notables awaited.

Camp Fires to Observe Anniversary

National Birthday Plans Include Entire City—Groups Work for Honors.

Camp Fire girls all over the world will celebrate the seventeenth anniversary of their organization, March 17. The organization has grown from a few groups in New York to hundreds of thousands.

Each year Camp Fire has a project known as the Birthday Project, in which all girls in every land participate. As their slogan is "Give Service," all of these group activities are helping others. One year it was beautifying our own homes; another, conserving the forests by planting trees and shrubs; another making garments for flood sufferers; and this year growing flowers and plants.

To complete the birthday honor requirements each girl must have a growing flower by birthday time and then present it to some shut-in or person who does not have flowers. The group must also plan or have started a "Service Garden," which is a flower garden at some church, school, institution or park, where the entire community may enjoy it.

Many Lincoln girls have raised bulbs and have them blooming for birthday week, and plans made for their out-door gardens. They will celebrate the birthday by a grand council fire, March 15, in the gymnasium of Whittier junior high school. The Camp Fire chorus will have charge of the singing, and ranks, honors, and national honors will be given to the girls by a national field representative, Miss Ruby Lattimore.

A radio program over KFAB, Saturday, March 16, will complete the celebration in Lncoln. The Camp Fire chorus will sing and representatives of Camp Fire groups will have a part in the program.

WASHINGTON, March 9—(U. P.)—White house handshakes are going to be scarce.

President Hoover today abolished, temporarily at least, the daily noonday receptions which Calvin Coolidge maintained throughout his administration. Mr. Hoover wants to save time to devote to the pressing problems of his new task, so the receptions will be reduced to two or three a week, starting next week.

MORE FIRE PROTECTION.

(Special to The Star.)

BEATRICE, Neb., March 9—At a meeting of the village board of Summerfield, Kas., this week it was voted to construct a large cistern in the business part of town for better fire protection. The action of the board is the result of a rule made by it several years ago to build a cistern every year at a strategic point.

General Hospital Has Best Year In History With Increase of 445 In Number of Patients

The year 1928 was the best in the point of service in the history of the Lincoln General hospital, according to a statement contained in the superintendent's annual report submitted Saturday to the board of directors and covering the twelve months from January to December 31, 1928.

The number of patients admitted during the year was 2,933, an increase of 445 over the previous year or a daily average of 80 plus. This figures does not include two hundred outside patients cared for by hospital staff members during the year. Residents of twenty-one states from coast to coast and Canada to Mexico, were received at the Lincoln General hospital in 1928.

The total number of deaths for the year was 121, or less than 4 per cent of the net, eleven of the deaths occurring within twenty-four hours after admission. The superintendent declares that, "when we consider the growing reputation of the hospital and its staff is attracting an increasing number of serious and difficult cases each year it is very gratifying to find the death rate remaining at the low figure which it has been."

Surgical Cases Numerous.

Surgical cases far outnumbered all others, 2,145 operations being performed during the year. Medical cases come next with 467 and obstetrical cases third with 321. 325 babies were born at the Lincoln General hospital in 1928.

The greatest event of the past year according to the superintendent, was the opening of the nurses residence. December 16, when the hospital was host at an informal tea celebrating the occasion. Located a half block from the hospital itself, the three story fire-proof brick structure affords living accommodations for seventy-five persons, and with grounds occupies a quarter of a block.

Among the new equipment added during the year is an electric-sector radio knife installed in the operating rooms and a Cameron light and its accessories. The pathological and X-ray laboratories recorded considerable increase in work done during the twelve-month period.

Nearly Quarter Million Meals.

The dietetics department has been particularly honored in 1928 in that the American Dietetics association has approved the course of study offered to student dietitians at the Lincoln General and has placed the hospital on the accredited list of the hospitals authorized to train student dietitians. A total of 235,754 meals were served in 1928 of which number 88,737 were served to patients, representing an increase of 9,468 over the previous year. The cost per meal was reduced slightly more than one cent under the cost estimate per meal for 1927. A meat slicer was installed in the dietetics department last year.

The hospital maintains a staff of twenty-eight doctors. Seventy-two non-staff doctors are associated with the institution making a total of one hundred. There were fourteen graduate nurses on duty in 1928 with fifty-five student nurses registered and one interne. The dietetics department employs twenty-five persons. 528 private-duty nurses were called into the hospital for special duty on privte cases the report shows. Five engineers and janitors, five office employes and eleven miscellaneous employes complete the personnel of the hospital, the affairs of which are administered by a board of directors numbering eight persons.

Two Ways To Avoid Failures

By CHANCELLOR E. A. BURNETT
(University of Nebraska)

Thre-fourths of the freshmen students who were in the lowest fourth of their high school graduating classes lost out at the university during the first semester over a period of three years. But only two per cent of the freshmen students who were in the upper fourth of their high school graduating classes were dropped for poor scholarship over a period of three years.

Obviously we might check up carefully on those prospective stujdents who are unable to do justice to their high school work.

There are two ways in which we might accomplish this end:

1. Refuse to admit to the university those students who were in the lowest fourth in their high school graduating classes except by examination.

2. Furnish an examination to high schools which would give students an idea of how capable they would be in pursuing university work.

Because the university has been leaning over backwards in its efforts to help every possible student and to give everyone a chance, the first plan has not yet been adopted. That it has merit seems apparent. There is of course the possibility that we might now and then miss a brilliant youth, who possibly by force of circumstances would be in the lowest fourth of his high school class and who would be awed by the possibility of examination.

I have discussed the second plan with school administrators in the state. I feel that it would be an excellent plan to furnish questions to high school seniors throughout the state in from two to four subjects, one of which would be English. These papers would be graded at the university and every student would have a good idea of just where he would rank in university work. If he fared very poorly in the examination, he would obviously see that he was not fitted for university work or that he must spend more time in preparation.

At the present time I should not consider the examination as determining the fitness of a student for entrance, but I think it would serve a useful purpose in giving the student a self-check on his capabilities.

BY LYNELLE GREER.

Getting the low down on Buddy Rogers straight from Buddy's mother is just about as interesting a piece of business as getting it from the famous screen star himself, for Mrs. Rogers is a most attractive and charming lady. She was in Lincoln for a short time the past week en route to Hollywood to visit Buddy, and was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. John A. Binford.

Every screen fan knows Buddy. They know all about him. In fact they know so many things about Buddy that aren't true that they would fill a book. They know he had to be spanked incessantly when he was a small boy in order to keep him in the straight and narrow path; they know that it was the sorrow of Mrs. Rogers' life that Buddy never appeared anywhere with a clean face when he was a youngster; they know that he had a great love on Claire Windsor when he first went to Hollywood, and that his mother went flying out to rescue him from the clutches of a woman who was so much older than he.

Buddy Quite Docile.

Blah! Just pure and simple blah—all of it. At least that's what Buddy's mother says, and Buddy's mother ought to know. If there was any spanking done, she did it, and if any faces had to be washed she was equally efficient at that. But the truth of the matter is that Buddy was a most docile son, and was quite a neat youth in the bargain.

Buddy, as most every one knows by this time, was reared in Olathe, Kas., where he led the life of every other small town boy. He played football when he was in high school, was expert in most athletic feats, liked music. He took the lead in the senior class play, "Clarence," and was normally popular.

Buddy's father, B. H. Rogers, has a newspaper in Olathe, in conjunction with which he runs a print shop. Here it was that Buddy first earned cold hard dollars at the age of 9. He was the printer's devil, and his father paid him a regular salary for the work he did after school and during vacations, and unlike most small boys, he saved most of it. When he was about 11 years old, or perhaps 12, he had $500 in the bank.

Learned to Play Drums.

Buddy's sister, Jerry, went to K. U. during the time that Buddy was still in high school, and every once in a while Buddy would go to Lawrence to visit her. He discovered that many of the college boys earned their way through school by playing in dance orchestras, and liking music as well as he did, decided that earning one's livelihood in that manner would be both interesting and delightful. Buddy could play a horn or so, but it was the drums and traps that caught his fancy, and so, when he was a senior in high school he bought some drums and all of the fascinating accessories.

"There they were in my living room day in and day out," Mrs. Rogers said. "At first I attempted moving them out, but the moment Buddy would enter the house, the drums would make their appearance in the living room again, so I finally gave up and just let them stay there, and now I'm glad that I did."

It seems that there was no one in Olathe who was especially proficient in the art of drumming, so Buddy undertook the job of being his own teacher. The family had a phonograph and this was Buddy's first assistant.

"It made no difference what hour of the night it was," Mrs. Rogers said, "that phonograph and those drums would begin just the moment Buddy had taken off his hat. We might all be in bed but it didn't matter to Buddy. One of the neighbors was laughing about it the other day, and said that the whole neighborhood could testify how Buddy learned the drums."

But the drums helped the young actor through his three years at K. U., nevertheless, and who knows, they may have helped in the movies.

Worked Way to Europe.

While he was a student at K. U., Buddy and a group of other boys took a load of mules to Europe. They went over on a cattle boat, and came back second class, but they had a lot of fun. The next year Buddy had an opportunity to make a world tour with a ship's orchestra, but in the meantime much had happened.

Just before he went back to school in 1924, Buddy was talking to S. C. Andrews, the man who owns the motion picture show in Olathe.

"He told Buddy that he should go in the movies," Mrs. Rogers said, "but Buddy just laughed at him and told him that he had no ambitions along that line. You see, Buddy was taking journalism at the Kansas university, and intended to follow the profession. But Mr. Andrews didn't forget the idea, and when he heard about a Paramount contest for boys and girls which was to be held in Kansas City, he immediately wanted Buddy to enter it. The winners were to be sent to a Paramount school in California, and if they made good there, would leap almost at once into stardom in the movies. Mr. Andrews wrote to Buddy and told him that Mr. Cunningham, who was the manager of the Paramount houses in Kansas City, wanted to see him. Well, Buddy had a little orchestra that played for dances in Lawrence and surrounding towns, and one time it was asked to play for a dance in Kansas City. It was then that Buddy went to call on Mr. Cunningham.

Took Screen Test.

Mr. Cunningham's final message to Buddy on the last day of final examination was to come to Kansas City at once, so that a camera man and electrician could take a screen test of him.

"It seems that Mr. Andrews had done so much talking about Buddy to Mr. Cunningham, that Mr. Cunningham had sent some of Buddy's photographs to the Paramount people. Anyway, examinations were out of the question after that long distance telephone call, because Buddy says he couldn't even write. He went to Kansas City and met the electrician and the camera man. Buddy had had no experience whatever in makeup, and neither of the two men had but they decided they should do something to Buddy's face They did, and the screen test was terrible.

"None of us ever have known for sure just how Buddy got into the movies. His screen test was terrible, and they told him at the school that it was not his looks that brought him to California.

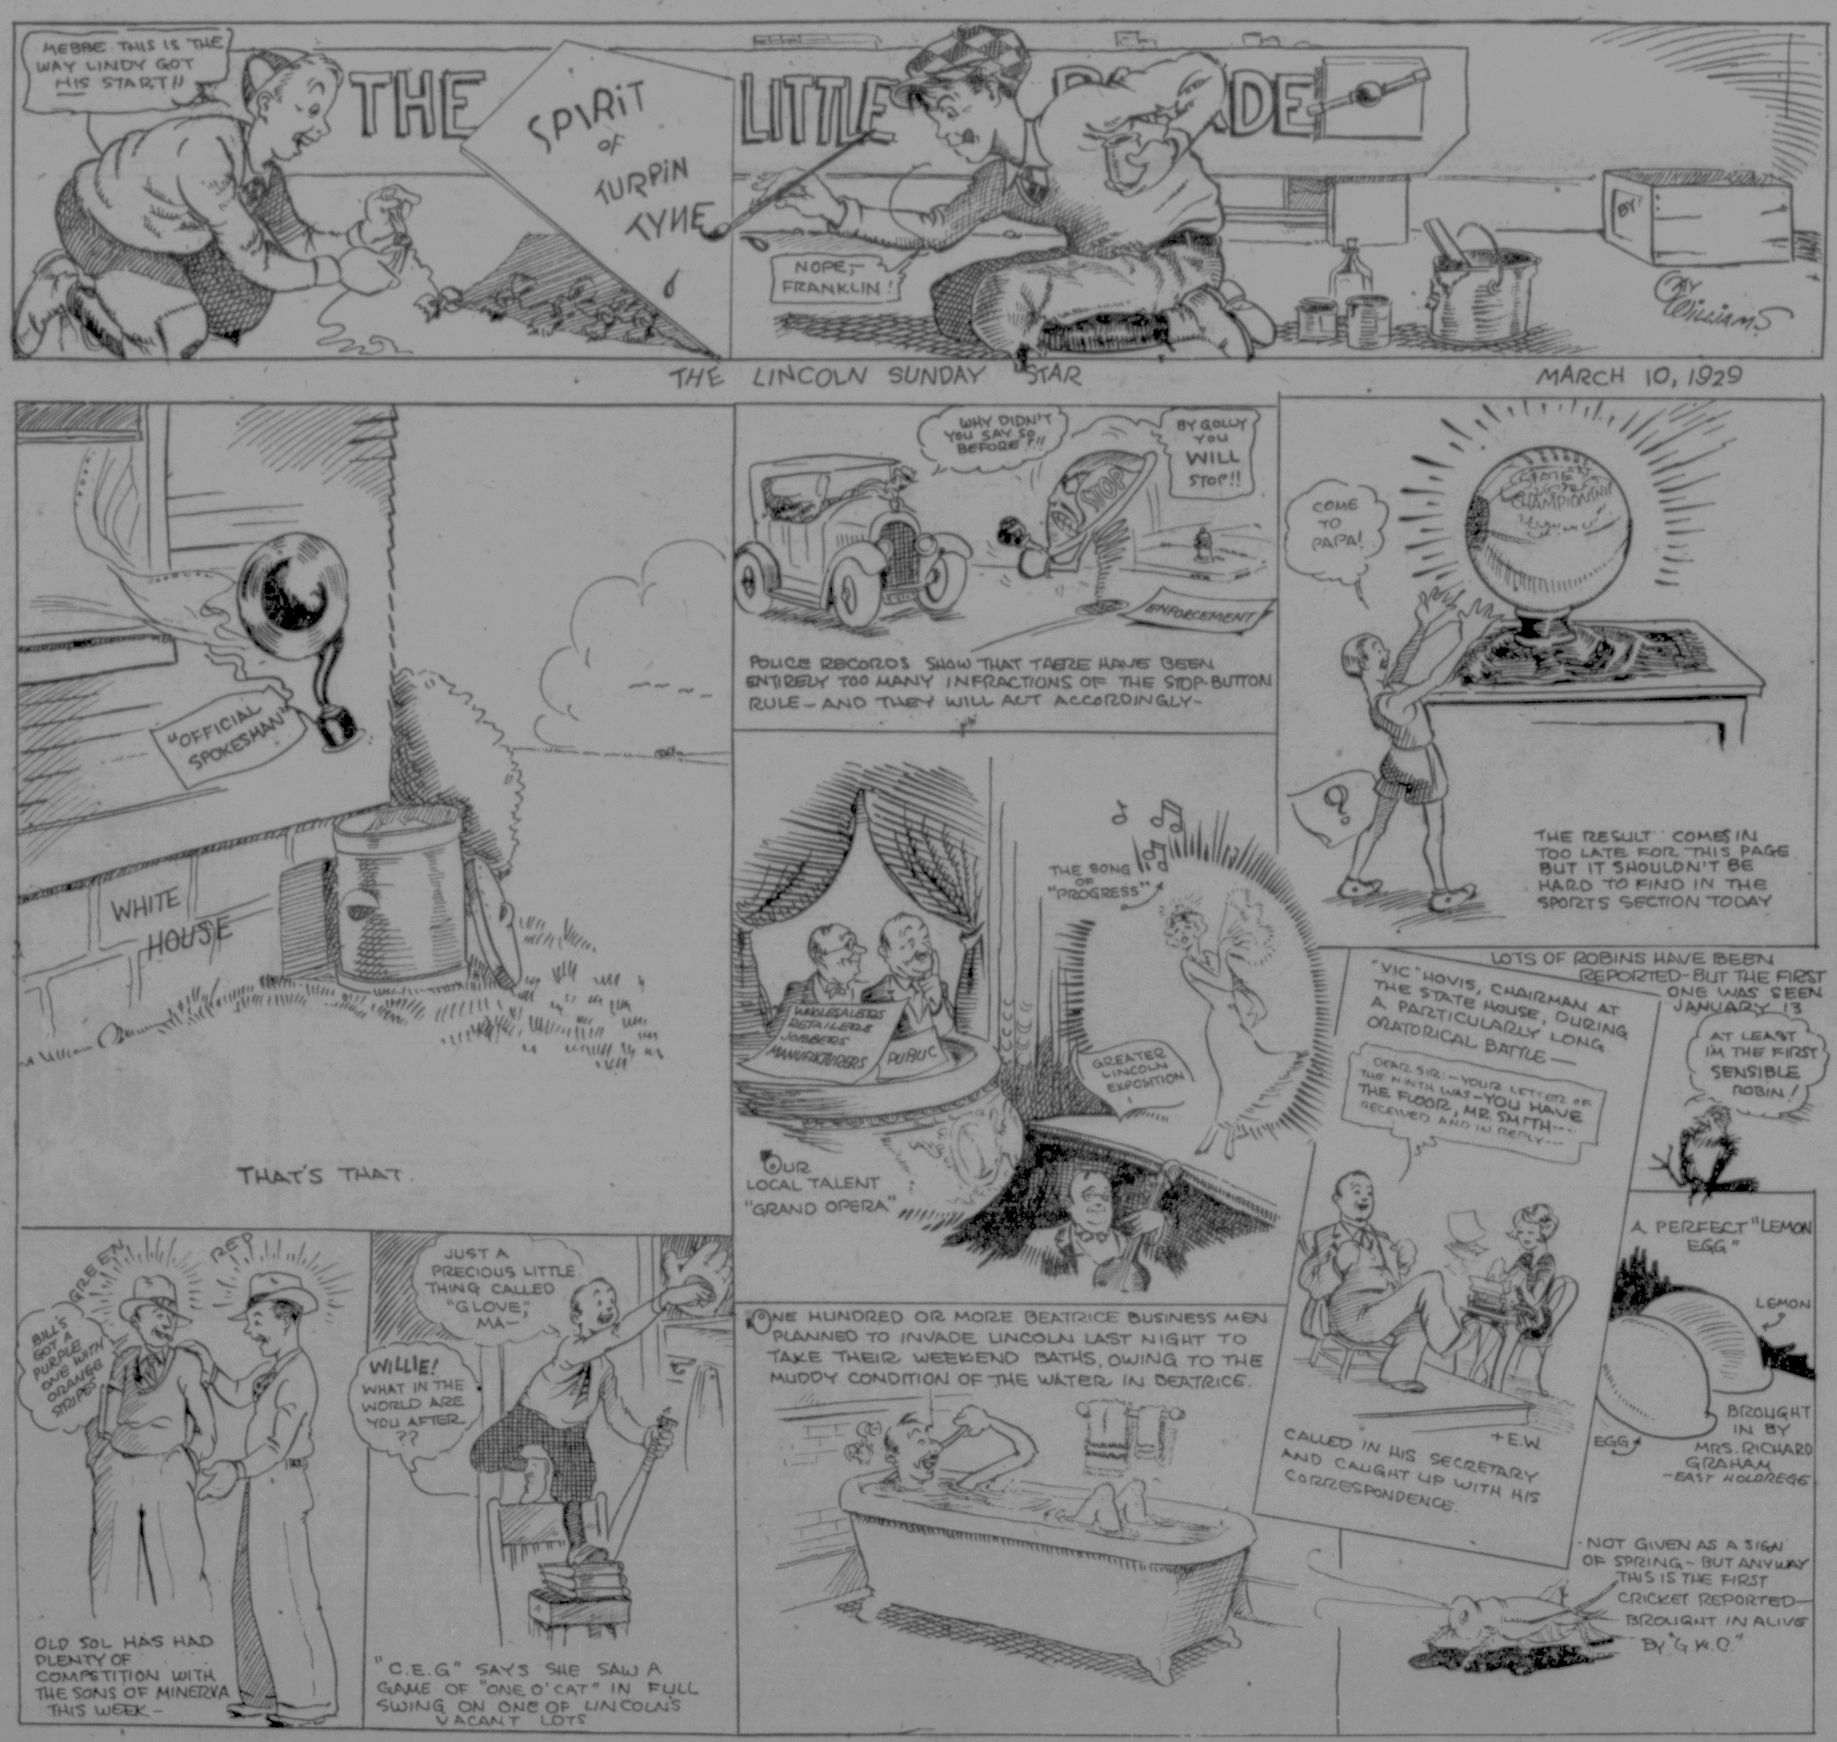

"The director at the school told me after Buddy had really made good, that he thought for the first month that Buddy would have to come back home, that he wouldn't make a go of it. Buddy tried hard enough, but somehow or other his work wasn't so good as it might have been. One day the director asked him to do some little thing, I really don't know just what it was, and Buddy did it successfully. He had been absorbing a lot of ideas, although he had no especially original ones of his own. It may have been because he had formed no set ideas of how things should be done that he did so well what he was told to do. After that he went along famously, and was leading man in the Paramount school picture "Fascinating Youth."

Played Opposite Many Stars.

Buddy has played with Mary Pickford, Mary Brian, Clara Bow, Nancy Carroll and some of the foremost of the feminine screen stars. "Wings," was perhaps the picture that put him over with the public as much as any other, although he had an adoring public when he was seen in "Able's Irish Rose."

Buddy took his mother and his sister back to New York with him for the pre-view of "Able's Irish Rose," and a gay time was had by all. There was nothing that Buddy didn't do for them, and for Mrs.

The picture at the left is Buddy Rogers' family group .The young man in the swanky top coat, of course is Buddy. At his left are his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Moll, and at his right is his mother, Mrs. B. H. Rogers, his father, his sister, "Jerry" Binford, of Lincoln and his young brother, Bh.

In the center, Buddy is taking a close-up of Jerry while she was his guest in Hollywood last fall. Buddy came hom efor four days at Thanksgiving, the time the family group was taken, and when he returned to the coast he took Jerry with him.

Doggs, his "California mother," as he calls her, who is the mother of a fraternity brother of Buddy's. The young actor makes his home with them in Hollywood and pays $16 a week for room and board.

His mother has made several trips to the coast, and when she is there Buddy takes an apartment so that things will seem more like home, and so that mother can cook some of the things for him that tasted so good when he was at home in Olathe.

He went back to Olathe last Thanksgiving and saw his brother, Bh play football. When the town discovered that Buddy was on his way home, it arranged that Buddy should 'kick off' and start the game. Buddy did, and Olathe lost. However never before in its history had it ever cleared two thousand dollars at a football game, four hundred being the next highest amount. So while they were remorseful about the outcome of the game, which was not ruined because of Buddy's kick, they were well pleased with the gate receipts.

Brother Wants In Movies.

Bh wants to go in the movies, now, but his brother insists that he go to K. U. for at least two years before he will do anything to help him. Bh is very much like his brother, minus the curly hair—and oh, the irony of that. Buddy was always deploringfg his wavy locks, and Bh was always so pleased because of his straight ones. And now, Bh would do almost anything if his hair were curly, according to his mother.

One very interesting bit of conversation with Mrs. Rogers concerned Buddy's love affairs, or rather his lack of them. Buddy has no loves, although he has given Mary Brian and June Collier quite a little time. The rumor about Claire Windsor was nothing but rumor, and the tale about his affair with Clara Bow was equally false.

Buddy is good looking, every one appreciates that fact. He has dark hair and eyes, and is six feet tall. There is a marked resemblance between Buddy, his mother, his sister and his young brother. They all have the dark eyes and nice features.

Successful Because Indifferent.

Whether this very popular screen star will ever consider the profession of journalism again, no one knows. But for the present he is sold on the movies. He loves the work, and his popularity is proof in itself that he has ability and appeal. He did some very good work at Kansas university in his line, and it is just pure luck that he is one of the film stars of today rather than a country journalist.

"Sometimes I think Buddy's success was due to the fact that he was so utterly indifferent at the outset," Mrs. Rogers said. And that may be the secret of the whole affair. He didn't ask the movies to take him. They asked him to come, and he hasn't disappointed them.

Buddy is a Phi Kappa Psi at Kansas, and his sister, Jerry, is a member of Sigma Kappa.

A New Car For Brother.

All feminine hearts in Olathe go pit-a-pat whenever Buddy's return is rumored, and who can blame them. When he was home last Thanksgiving he checked over the grades Bh was getting in school, and because he had above 90 in everything, Bud did nothing but present him with a new car.

Perhaps it was because he wanted to show no partiality that he took his sister, Jerry, of this city, back to Hollywood with him for several weeks, and while she was there Jerry had the time of her life. She met Gary Cooper, she met Clara Bow, she was an honor guest at a dinner where the guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Don Alvarado, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mulhall, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Arlen, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Loder, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blankenbeker and Mr. and Mrs. William Blankenbeker; the Misses Mary Brian, Claire Windsor, Marion Nixon, Bebe Daniels, Carmen Pantages, Josephine Dunn, Harriett Parsons, Nancy Pope, Sally Duvall, and Jetta Johnson; the Messrs. Gregg Blackton, Charlton Ames, William Haines, James Shields, Lloyd Pantages, James Hall, Albert Gran, Charles Farrell, Lars Lavignino, Ralph Forbes, Johnny Hines, Dean Borgs, Neal Bruce, and Lester Maberly.

Dolores Del Rio, Lupe Velez and Nancy Carroll were also among those whom Jerry met in Hollywood, but perhaps she learned to know Nancy Carroll better than any of the others, because Nancy has played opposite Buddy is several pictures.

Here's Material For Movies.

And here's a little secret about Nancy. She is married and has a baby, and when she went back to New York with Buddy and Buddy's mother and sister to see the preview of "Abie's Irish Rose," the nurse and the baby got lost, and such a time as was had by all.

It seems that Nancy's management didn't want anyone to know that the baby belonged to Nancy, so the nurse took care of it almost all of the time. One day when they had to change trains, Nancy, Buddy and the rest of the party boarded the train, and after they had been on their way an hour or so, Nancy began looking for her baby, and the baby wasn't there. Then they discovered that there were four sections to the train, and that they were on the first. Inquiry revealed that baby and her nurse were on section four which was a number of miles behind. That fact didn't stop Nancy's worries, and things began to happen. Section three was held for section four, and the nurse and her charge were transferred to that train; section two was held for section three, and again a transfer was made, and finally section one was held, and Nancy's baby and baby's nurse were reunited with the rest of the party.

Buddy isn't married, isn't even engaged, and what's more seems to have no immediate intentions of matrimony, according to Mrs. Rogers. He likes girls, but he likes 'em all, which is hard luck for the girls. According to Mrs. Rogers, Buddy, who is now 24 years old (he'll be 25 in August) intends to wait until he has reached the 30 mark, and then some before he marries. But when he does marry he intends to stay that way.

"Whether he will marry in the profession or out, I don't know," Mrs. Rogers said. "They don't seem to be happy if they marry out of it, and they don't seem to be happy if they marry in it, so it's hard to tell."

Essay Winner Says Educational Cost Justified If Better Citizens Result

Munro Kezer of Fort Collins, Colo., received the second award in an essay contest on "The Obligations and Rewards of the College Student," sponsored by Chancellor E. A. Burnett of the University of Nebraska. Mr. Kezer is a senior in the arts and science college. His essay follows:

From time to time some clever writer with an eye for generalizations has called attention to the fact that the world's supply of humor is cast in a few stock forms such as the mother-in-law joke and the fat man joke. Modern America, among its other claims to greatness, can point to the addition of two types to the old list of stock forms. The college student and the go-getter business man bulk large in the twentieth century humor storehouse.

College students have been the aiming point of much of the intended humor of recent years. Too often the general public has seemed to forget that there is anything serious about college life. Under the influences of this popular misconception, students also have, in a measure, tended to forget the responsibilities of college. At times, they have even forgotten that they have any obligations to themselves.

First Obligation to Self.

Yet the first obligation of any student is to himself. It is to utilize his opportunity. The college student is living in close contact with the collected and organized experience of the ages, past and present. He is attending an institution designed to assist him to acquire readily the basis of knowledge which has been laboriously collected by earlier generations. To fail to take advantage of such opportunity is to miss a primary obligation of the individual, wholesome self-development.

In a sense, utilization of opportunity is the whole of the student's obligation to himself. But it covers a range of possibilities not always recognized. In the university there is opportunity especially for mental or intellectual growth. It is accompanied by opportunity for social development and for sound physical recreation. Social development does not mean just dances and parties. It means the development of an intelligent understanding of one's fellows. It includes the cultivation of those amenities which make life possible as civilization crowds individuals more closely together.

The college student should cultivate sound mental habits. They are a primary requisite to his utilization of opportunity. He ought to select a course of study which will permit maximum development. He needs to give such application as will insure greatest growth during the college period. At the same time the student should maintain his sense of balance. He will miss part of his opportunity if he overapplies himself to one field of knowledge at the expense of other branches of learning. Likewise, he will not fulfill his promise if he overlooks the values of significant social training or extra-curricular activities which offer chances for development. Over-emphasis on these latter phases at the expense of fundamental knowledge is as serious a danger to the student as over-stressed scholastic efforts. The golden mean is as valuable today as in the time of Aristotle.

A Duty to Others.

The student has obligations to others. He has a duty to parents or others who furnish the financial support for university attendance. This debt, although deep, may be expressed in a single sentence. It is to exert sufficient effort to justify the expense involved. Gratitude calls for at least that.

The state has made a heavy investment in education. It is entitled to expect a reasonable return on its investment. While in school that return must be in effort. Further returns are justly expected after school. They come by the student utilizing his development in the community to which he goes. The state is not justified in furnishing free public education solely to enable individuals to earn more money. It is justified in such expense if students serve their communities better in work and as citizens. In so doing, college graduates have justified a thousandfold the expenses of higher education. Finally, the college student has one more obligation to the state. It is to assist in offering continually improving educational opportunities to those who will follow in succeeding years.

Not surprisingly, the rewards of the college student closely parallel his obligations. While in school, he may enjoy growing mental power,

Mae Morley, Prescott Principal, Succeeds In Keeping 'Kiddies' From "Snowballing"

These jolly scenes of snow and sun aren't at the gay Lake Placid, where all the winter playboys and girls indulge in stunts and sports.

Rather are they in the studious atmosphere of Prescott school, no longer ago than week before last.

About that time Lincoln was favored, if one be not choice of words, with a six-inch fleecy snow. Fleecy, moist, and ever so thick on the ground.

Snow that made such splendid snowballs. Good, compact ones, that broke with such pleasant squashiness against an unsuspecting neck. And even wild, modern, blazing youth, under twelve, can't withstand a snowball.

Because the snow was such a delicious temptation, Mrs. May Morley, principal of the school, told the children they might make all sorts of fine snow images—if they wouldn't throw a snow ball. Nobody did, 'tis said. During the recess periods and before school in the mornings of the snow, the youngsters executed their architectural designs in snow.

Pupils of one 6A grade, shown on the upper left, made an image of Nebraska's new capital, tower, terraces, and entrances. Miss Margaret Allen is teacher of the room. The 4A pupils, under direction of their teacher, Mrs. Clara Finch, had been studying wild animals, and they chose to make a lion, pictured on the upper right.

Miss Mable Hendrickson's 6A grade modeled an ancient castle, fast within its towering walls. The children have been studying medieval history, which inspired the idea. Truly patriotic to their school were the 6A group under Miss Edna Gabus, who designed the good ship S. S. Prescott. It never crossed an ocean, but the sun was harsh with it, as with all others, and bits of it may now be going down some river to the sea.

Maybe the 5A and 6B children in Miss Elsie Forter's room sing "The Old Oaken Bucket," because the well in which it hung was sculptured from snow by the youngsters. It is shown in the third row. The pupils of the third grade modeled a jack rabbit, as realistic as nature ever was, and the 5A children made the Liberty bell, but some unkind soul robbed the rabbit of an ear and the sun was especially hard on good, old liberty.

However—no man lost his derby or fedora or any one of the five models fashion decrees for the well dressed gentleman, and no woman had a chance to shriek politely—because of a trickle of icy water or a hard bang in the head, from a Prescott snow ball.

First Territorial Legislature Was Stormy Session On Capitol Location

Reproductions by Bucklin.

Three of the prominent members of the first territorial legislature were, from left to right, A. J. Hanscom, speaker of the house; J. L. Sharp, president of the council; and H. P. Bennett, president pro tem of the council. The legislature covened in Omaha the middle of January, 1855.

When Gov. Francis Burt of Nebraska died so short a time after taking his oath of office, he left as a legacy a perturbed political situation. If Nebraska legislatures have now and again had lively sessions, precedent for tumultuous meetings was established in the first territorial legislature.

There are those who say that the dying governor would have chosen the old, at the time, most populous, settlement, Bellevue, for the capital. The acting governor, Thomas B. Cuming, unhampered by pledges, chose Omaha for the territorial capital, after a struggle between the old Bellevue and the new Omaha. The defeated Bellevue vented its feelings by contesting seats in the first territorial assembly and the situation was increased by the South Platte members, who felt, as was later proved, that the greatest population lay south of the river, and that the capital should go that way.

Held in Omaha, 1855.

The first territorial council, which convened in Omaha Tuesday, January 16, 1855, at 10 o'clock, was held in a building erected for the purpose by the Council Bluffs and Nebraska Ferry Co. on Ninth street, between Farnam and Douglas streets. It was a two-story brick building, the first in the city, 30 by 45 feet in size, with rooms so small that few spectators could attend the sessions. The house of representatives was located on the left of the entrance hall, the governor on the right, with the council chamber on the second floor.

J. L. Sharp, who was said to live in Richardson county, but who lived in Iowa, even though president of the council, John Latham, Hascall Purple, Layfayette Nuckolls, and William Kempton were none of them Nebraska residents but all came from Iowa. It is not without proof that Iowans featured strongly in the election, so strongly some of their residents were members of the first assembly.

One story goes that the Douglas county members of the 1855 session, with their natural Omaha interests, were opposed to the Bellevue claims for capital location, the ticket put forth by the south party of the county, now Sarpy, having been snowed under at the polls. The south side attributed its defeat to an Iowa county, the vote being divided between Plattsmouth and Bellevue, while Council Bluffs and Pottawattamie county voted for Omaha.

That is, all but one wagon load of electors who were sent forth to have an election in Burt county. They struggled north, and had their election, with an Iowan being unanimously elected as representative. Later reports showed that the election had not been held in Burt county, but that the valiant had gone only to Washington county. However, as Iowa men had been instrumental in securing the incorporation of the territory, and an Iowa man located the seat of government, so that it seemed reasonable, to some, that is, to continue the Iowa idea.

Thirteen in First Council.

The first territorial legislature was composed of a council of thirteen of whom two were out state men, and a house of representatives of twenty-six, with three of the number from over the river. J. L. Sharp was chosen president of the council, Dr. George L. Miller, chief clerk, O. F. Lake, assistant clerk S. A. Lewis sergeant of arms, and H. R. Folsom, doorkeeper. For the house A. J. Hanscom was made speaker, J. W. Paddock, chief clerk, G. S. Eayre, assistant clerk and Isaac L. Gibbs doorkeeper.

H. P. Bennett occupied the chair during the organization of the council. He was a South Platte man, favoring the removal of the capital from Omaha to a site south of the Platte, where the South Platte men had more corner lots than in Omaha. The corner lot problem was a great political question in the state between the two Nebraska parties.

"All the parliamentary law I knew I had gained from a study of Jefferson's Manual, which I had borrowed after election," Mr. Bennett writes many years ago. He had gone to Nebraska City from Glenwood a few weeks before election, but he had been, with his brother, one of the first to locate a claim in Nebraska after the passage of the bill.

The day the legislature met the high, the majority of the members feeling between the parties was being excited and ready to fight. The South Platte men, Mr. Bennett writes, had the advantage in nerve and fighting quality, and might have won out, excpet that the lobby was made up of Omaha supporters.

Some Were Armed.

"Some of them," he says "were armed and were quite as willing and ready as were our side to have the council organized peacefully, even if they had to fight for it." Several members were known to keep brick bats in their desks, although the situation never came to the point that they were used.

Early in the morning, seven members met to elect Judge Bennett speaker of the council, after which the council adjourned to the house chamber fo rthe governor's message. The acting governor, an able but imperious man, tried to administer the oath, declaring allegiance to the United States constiution and the organic act, and added, for good measure, to the oath, that each one must be a resident of the state and more than 20 years of age.

As the assembly was standing, Judge Bennett sat down, with one other, and the former, watching out for his colleagues, pulled young Lafayette Nuckolls down with him. The judge doubted his state citizenship, and he knew that Nuckolls, "the gentleman from Cass," was too young, being only 19. Nor was the a citizen, but his age whis his greatest disadvantage in those informal times. When the three refused the oath, the ceremony was again gone through before Judges Ferguson and Harden, respectively.

Following the morning organization, when the hour for the election of permanent chairman came, it was felt that the permanent chairman-to-be was trying to get support of two sides. Nominally from Richardson county, the North Platte bid for his support by promising him the presidency, which he secured.

The early days were spent in a seat contest, the result of which was never reported out of the committee on elections, as every one knew the reasons for the trouble. The capital location question followed, and that was settled by February 5, with Governor Cuming's choice of site victorious.

Thousands of Toll Bills.

Thousands of bills on toll bridges or ferry charters were filed, and all passed. They covered every buffalo trail and Indian path to and from watering places, and fords on the Platte, and on every other stream requiring two steps of a bridge. The first motion ever made in any legislative body in Nebraska was made by A. J. Poppleton in the house of representatives for the temporary organization of the house. Council File No. 1 was a joint resolution providing that the style of law should be: "Be it enacted by the council and house of representatives of the territory of Nebraska."

The enactments of the first legislature were in eight parts. The first was the complete civil code, appropriated from the Iowa code; the second, the laws of a general nature prepared by the legislature; third, a criminal code, also taken from the Iowa statutes; fourth, location and establishment of territorial roads; fifth, definition of boundaries and location of county seats, or provision for their establishment; sixth, incorporation of industrial companies and town, or cities; seventh, incorporation of ferry companies, authorized the keeping of ferries, and erection of bridges, eighth, joint resolutions adopted at the session.

Census is Ordered.

The first of Part II authorized a census to be taken by October 11, 1855, new apportionment of the house of representative members, and designated the time of the annual election and the time the legislature is to convene.

In the second place, the sale or manufacture liquor was prohibited in the territory. No one has ever been able to explain the passing of a law so out of place on the western frontier. A strong prohibition sentiment was growing in the east, and it is probable the ideal was brought into the territory by newcomers, but no attempt was made at enforcement, and subsequent legislatures made attempts at dealing with the problem.

Doane College Notes

The Faculty Women's club enjoyed a musical tea Saturday afternoon, March 2, at the home of Mrs. Kettering, the hostesses being Mrs. Hunt, chairman, Mrs. Korab, Miss Hawkes, Mrs. Kettering and Mrs. Cooper. Among the matters of interest that were considered was the question of supporting the chila labor amendment which is soon to come before the state legislature. By a large vote, the secretary was instructed to write to Crete's representative, urging that he support the amendment when it comes up for a vote.

Radio Digest

To Control Sensitivity of a Set.

One of the best ways to reduce the signal pick-up is to install a suitable variable high resistance shunted across the antenna and ground connections. A table type clarostat will serve this purpose, since it can be placed without any changes in the receiver wiring and can be put where handiest.

Voltage Fluctuations.

Receiving sets that operate from the 110-volt alternating current lines are in some localities subject to a rather wide current fluctuation, ranging from 90 to 140 volts. This surging of the current shortens the life of the tubes and plays havoc with tonal quality. When the voltage drops into the nineties the sound intensity decreases just as if the volume control was turned down, then within a minute, or even a few seconds, the voltage may run up as high as 140 volts and greatly increase the volume.

Plan to Eliminate Static.

Among the various means of reducing the disturbing effects of static is the use of a small antenna. This may be relatively low and short outdoor wire, or may be an indoor antenna. Such an antenna receives less powerful signals, but this may be compensated by using a more sensitive receiving set, employing, that is, regeneration or radio-frequency amplification. A small coil antenna or loop antenna, consisting of a few turns of wire on a frame a few feet square, may be used provided the receiving set is so designed as to permit operating with such an antenna. The coil antenna has th eadded advantage that it can eliminate, by virtue of its directional characteristics, the atmospherics that come from a specific direction.

the pleasure of increasing ability to associate and to work and play which may be one of the chief satisfactions of post-college days.

The college student develops a richer mental outlook. He has a greater variety of interests. He has a wider range of appreciation. He has a larger social horizon. His is not just a gain of position and prestige. It is a gain in an understanding of the structure of society and of the individuals who compose it.

It is the combination of this greater usefulness to the community and of this richer mental outlook which furnish the ultimate satisfaction to the college student. They give him the pleasure of seeing his efforts contribute to the erection of a better state, a better society. He may look back on work well done, effort justified by results. From such efforts he receives the reward of a full life, well-lived.

PIRATES AHOY! - - By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

THE BLOODY AFFAIR AT SAN JUAN DE ULLOA

Piracy is robbery on the high seas, the sovereigns or nations of the robber and robbed being at peace.

It is not piracy to rob and plunder the ships of a country with which your country is at war. But it is piracy to rob ships of your own nationality, or those registered under the flag of a friendly country, or a country not very friendly, perhaps, but yet not actually hostile.

It is necessary to have these definitions and limitations distinctly in mind when considering the great pirates of the Elizabethan era. We have become accustomed from childhood to read about the glorious exploits of Sir Francis Drake, Sir John Hawkins, Cavendish and Dampier. It comes with a shock to many to learn that all of these gentlemen were pirates first and heroes afterward.

Sir Francis Drake was a great English patriot, a friend of Queen Elizabeth, a first-rate figure in English naval history. These phases of his character and history have been pictured for us for generations by talented writers of British naval history.

But we have heard much less of Francis Drake, the pirate. He was a courageous, dashing, persistent pirate, whom Fortune and the Queen smiled upon. For my part, I like him immensely.

E. F. Benson, in one of the best biographies of Drake coming from an English source, has a tendency to put the blame for Drake's piracies mostly upon the Queen. Unquestionably, Queen Elizabeth not only condoned the piracies of Hawkins and Drake; she also was a shareholder in their piratical enterprises, drew her dividends, insisted upon every ounce of her share of the gold, and then a little more, and always maintained the right to repudiate the men who risked their necks to rob the Spanish galleons for her.

For it must be remembered that Spain and England were at peace with each other during the period of the great Drake expeditions, from which the hero came home to England heavily weighted down with Spanish gold. Elizabeth secretly received her shares, and then told Philip of Spain that she certainly would punish this fellow Drake if she could only be sure that he was robbing the galleons of her beloved brother-in-law.

John Hawkins (later Sir John) was a slaver and a pirate, and mighty good at both trades. He enriched himself imemnsely, carrying slaves from the Guinea coast to the West Indies.

Francis Drake was a cousin of Hawkins and, while his parentage has been the subject of much bootless historical bickering, he is generally said to have been the son of a vicar in an English port town. He went to sea while still a child, and he was only twenty, according to the generally accepted accounts, when he went out with Hawkins, in 1567, as capain of the little brigantine Judith. This was Drake's apprenticeship in piracy and slave-trading, and this voyage furnished the beginning for a noteworthy career of seamanship.

There were six ships in the fleet of Hawkins, who already had acquired so much favor with the Queen that Elizabeth herself was a stockholder in the expedition, holding sixty shares in her own name. She furnished one of the vessels, piously named the Jesus.

This was the third slaving and pirating voyage of John Hawkins. His earlier voyages had been so successful that he had been received by the Queen at the palace, and had been granted many favors. When he departed from Plymouth on this third venture, with such a handsome squadron, the Spanish court was aroused Philip authorized a squadron of many well-armed galleons to depart for American waters, largely for the purpose of keeping an eye on the doings of Hawkins.

Having taken on a goodly cargo of black men and women on the African coast, Hawkins made for the Canaries, where he repaired some damage his ships had suffered in a storm. He then steered for the Island of Santo Domingo, where he had been successful in disposing of his negroes on his earlier voyages, but missed his goal and did not sight land until he reached the coast of Mexico.

The two battered vessels limped out under heavy fire.

It was unlawful, under Spanish monopolistic decrees, for an Englishman to sell slaves in a Spanish port. Hawkins was aware of this, but he had been able to smuggle his merchandise into other western Spanish ports, so he sailed into the harbor of Rio de la Hacha, not far from the modern city of Vera Cruz, and proceeded to offer his wares to the planters. He was warned off by the authorities, and in reply he landed a force and took the town.

This, of course, was, to say the least, a hostile act. But the Spanish planters were glad to get as many of the slaves as they were able to pay for. Having completed his bargaining, Hawkins went on to Carthagena, but was warned off by an official order backed up by the guns of the fort. He sailed on, disposed of the rest of his slaves at various ports, and ran into a most unfortunate hurricane.

Badly battered by wind and wave, the slaver squadron took refuge in the harbor of San Juan de Ulloa.

It seems probable that the Spanish authorities at the port of San Juan had heard of Hawkins and his doings at Rio de la Hacha. They could have prevented his entrance, for his ships were in bad shape and they had a good defence battery mounted upon a sandy tongue of land near the harbor entrance.

But the Spaniards mistook the English vessels for part of the Spanish fleet of Admiral Alvarez de Bacan, which was expected just about this time. This was the very fleet that had been sent out to keep watch over Hawkins. Also, it chanced that de Bacan had once been in command of a Spanish fleet that took refuge in an English harbor after a storm, while Hawkins was lying there with some of his vessels. On that occasion, Hawkins had fired into Admiral de Bacan's flagship, released the Admiral's prisoners, and created quite an international incident for his friend the Queen, to settle.

So Hawkins entered, with his six vessels. He found a fleet of twelve Spanish merchant ships lying in the harbor, some of them said to be laden with gold. But Hawkins was in no condition to make an attack and a quick getaway. He merely asked permission to lay up for repairs and purchase supplies. This being granted, Hawkins took into custody two of the chief Spanish citizens as hostages, to assure civil treatment. You see, Hawkins didn't have an altogether clear conscience as regards his recent relations with Spanish subjects.

The Englishmen also occupied the little fortified island that commanded the entrance to the harbor, thrusting the Spanish troops out. The Spaniards did not fight, but they looked forward with some anxiety to the arrival of de Bacan.

The very next morning, de Bacan appeared off the harbor's mouth, with thirteen well-armed and well-manned vessels.

Hawkins sent out a boat to inform the admiral that he, an Englishman, subject of a friendly power, was in charge of the harbor, and that he would permit the Admiral of Spain to enter with his fleet only on condition that the English fleet be not disturbed, and that the Englishmen be permitted to continue occupying the fortified island.

To these terms de Bacan finally consented and then the great Spanish fleet sailed in and took up positions across the harbor from the little English fleet.

On the third day after the arrival of the Spanish war fleet, about noon, fighting broke out between the English and the Spaniards ashore. All the English sources of information insist that the shooting was started by the Spaniards, and this seems not improbable. Soon the battle was raging in the harbor, with the Spanish ships so preponderant in strength and numbers that there was nothing for the English to do but take to their heels.

The British soldiers in charge of the island forts jumped into the water and tried to swim to the ships. The Jesus, property of Elizabeth herself, was farthest with the harbor, and closest to the Spanish guns. She had no chance to get away. Hawkins and some his men took to their boats and rowed through heavy gunfire to the Minion, which was farther out toward the harbor mouth, just as a big fire-ship came booming down upon the Jesus, setting her afire. The Jesus was well laden with gold and silver, and it is probable that this treasure still lies at the bottom of the harbor at San Juan de Ulloa.

Drake, with the Judith, was nearest the harbor mouth. He slipped his cable when he saw the fire ship bearing down upon the the Jesus, and spread his sails for the open sea. He kept his guns going, but chiefly his attention was given to the means of escape.

The Minion, next in line toward the mouth of the harbor, made after the Judith, Admiral Hawkins himself directing her course. But she was raked fore and aft by the land batteries now in the hands of the Spanish gunners again. Her sails were pierced by many shots, and the hull was badly splintered.

The two battered vessels limped out under heavy fire, leaving behind them all the treasure gained during this expedition, four of their six ships, and more than half of their men.

The two battered vessels limped out under heavy fire, leaving behind them all the treasure gained during this expedition, four of their six ships, and more than half of their men.

The Judith and the Minion came together for consultation when they were well down the coast and it was clear that the Spaniards were not pursuing. But that night Drake set sail for England. Hawkins, recording this incident, says the Judith "forsook us in our great misery."

Misery was no adequate name for it. The Minion was small, overcrowded, unseaworthy, and almost without food and water. A hundred hundred of the seamen were landed on the Florida coast, to make the best of bad circumstances and lighten the small ship of her overload. But by the time she had passed through the Bahama channel the Minion had plenty of room for the men she had left behind, for the crew died of wounds and pestilence so rapidly that there were hardly enough men left to work the ship.

The Judith arrived at Plymouth many weeks ahead of Hawkins, and Drake had plenty of time to spread the news of the diaster. He became a hero, for of course his own part in the expedition and final battle was not minimized in the telling.

Hawkins missed the British Isles entirely, and when he made a strange port, in January, 1599, it proved to be the port of Vigo, Spain. However, there was an English fleet in the port, and peace still existed between the two countries, so Hawkins was safe.

When Hawkins finally arrived in England, he, too, was a hero, and there was plenty of money forthcoming to outfit another expedition. Drake, however, was destined to outshine his famous cousin and commander, and to carve with his sword a permanent place for himself in the history of heroes of the sea.

A WHITE HOUSE GHOST BURIED.

One of the first acts of Herbert Hoover as president of the United States was to bury a white house ghost.

In his initial conference with newspaper men he announced they had his permission to quote him directly. With that statement the "official spokesman," who has been projecting his nebulous personalty in all news emanating from the white house, flitted out into the mists of the morning air and was last seen disappearing in the haze which shrouded the Potomac.

It seems a small matter and yet it isn't. For months and even years after Calvin Coolidge became president of the United States, people living in many sections of America were puzzled by continued reference to the "official spokesman." Who was he? Colonel House passed even before Woodrow Wilson retired from the presidency. The "little Green House on K street," and its master and the rest of the boys were through when Harding died. Who was this mysterious stranger who presumed to discuss national policies, to rake individual members of congress with scorching censure, to speak with authority concerning what was going to be done and what was not going to be done? The riddle remained unanswered until Editor & Publisher lifted the veil with sharp criticism of Mr. Coolidge for insisting upon remainng under cover when warily endeavoring to feel out the public pulse.

No other president in American history constructed a ghost in order to make the country acquainted with problems connected with the public business. From Washington on down through to Calvin Coolidge, they had gone before the public in all candor, in full courage to set forth their views upon pressing, trying problems. It is harsh to suggest that through his rigid adherence to the tradition of the "official spokesman" Mr. Coolidge revealed a timidity, a lack of faith and confidence in his own position entirely at variance with all the other acts of his administration.

Mr. Hoover returns to the type of leadership with which America is familiar. Perhaps nothing more clearly reveals the difference between Mr. Hoover and Mr. Coolidge than this trifling incident. Mr. Hoover has the assurance of a bold leader. He is not timorous about venturing into strange lands, without disguise.

He will assume full responsibility for his views, which does not mean that he will not change them. Before he starts out he will know pretty well what the country thinks of his expedition, for Mr. Hoover has shown an uncanny capacity to analyze and assess public sentiment. He has the sureness about him which comes from scientific training. The inevitable consequence is that he will bring the office of the president of the United States closer to the people than it has been, and will establish a more intimate, companionable bond between it and the masses than has existed.

Not only in this but in other matters have Mr. and Mrs. Hoover shown a desire to cut loose from some of the form which has existed. Mrs. Hoover has dismissed the personal body guard and will go forth from the white house unaccompanied by a secret service agent who accompanied Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Harding wherever they went. It is evident that the Hoovers have determined to humanize the presidency and the white house as much as possible.

AT $30,000 PER.

Barney Dreyfuss, who looks after the finances of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and the Waner boys are at loggerheads.

The Pirate stars believe they are worth $30,000 to the box office. Dreyfuss insists that $24,000 is the limit. Most ordinary folk won't understand what all of this is about. Were the Waner boys slated for the executive duties of some great business institution or industrial plant? Not at all! They play outfield for the Pirates during the baseball season. The $30,000 which they are demanding is the measure of their ability to chase fly balls, to throw runners out at the plate, and to larrup the old horsehide when they are at bat.

Barney avows he will have a pretty fair outfield even without them. Just that and nothing more. No major league magnate in America can turn thumbs down on two such players as the Waners without losing something. They come high but most of the fans will vote they are worth it.

COMPELLING WOMEN TO BE JURORS.

Some time before the end of the legislative session the house judiciary committee may be expected to report out the senate bill providing that women be required to serve on juries. While this bill was being debated in the senate it was stated by some of its supporters that women really desire that this measure be enacted into law, which assertion was denied by a senator, who stated that he had asked a hundred women, met casually by him, and that not one of them was desirous of having this duty thrust upon her.

It is safe to say that a similar investigation by other members of the legislature would produce almost identical results. This could not be expected, however, if the query were propounded exclusively to the ones who have much time to devote to the spreading of propaganda, and who presume to speak for all the womanhood of the state. These would of course assure the inquirer that all feminity is clamoring for an opportunity to sit in the jury box and afterwards to debate over the details of the testimony to which they had listened for hours or perhaps for days.

The senate amended the bill so as to include among those who might claim exemption from jury service, "housewives." It is suggested that the house might still further improve the measure by striking out the word "housewives," and substituting "women."

If the bill were enacted in this form it would give those women who do not want to serve on juries an opportunity to escape such embarrassment by simply expressing their desire to be excused. On the other hand, it would place no obstacle in the way of such as have the time and inclination to render such service. Surely there could be no objection to such an arrangement. Those who are back of the bill insist that women want to be jurors, while those who oppose it say that the opposite is true. The fact of the matter is that some want to, while others seriously object. By wording the bill as here suggested all can be accommodated.

Many women who are not housewives will have a natural repugnance toward serving on juries and they may have legitimate reasons not connected with their housekeeping duties. They should not be put to the embarrassment of stating these to the court, but should be allowed to go their way, just as is any other person who is entitled under law to claim exemption. There is probably no disposition upon the part of anyone to keep women off juries if they want to serve, men being quite anxious to escape. But no woman should be placed there if she does not want to be.

"LET THE BUYER BEWARE!"

Illinois' grisly record with poison liquor revives that ancient principle of law: "Let the buyer Beware!"

Sixteen persons living in downstate Illinois, and outside of Chicago, which is the blackest spot on the map, have died in recent days of poisoned liquor. Ten victims lived in Peoria, one in East Peora, four in Vermont, and one in Washington, both small cities. Three people in Peoria have gone blind as a result of drinking the stuff, ten others are in the hospital in a serious condition.

That is only one state in the union. With reports from all of them, the figures would constitute an even more impressive warning to the thirsty that they are taking grave chances. To risk death, blindness, or serious physicial impairment for the sake of taking a drink is a heavy price to pay for booze. Yet that is the situation which confronts those who are determined to persist in it.

The fact is that Mr. Hoover's sweeping arraignment of law conditions, with promised reforms, is already having salutory effect. From the close-lipped gentry who have grown rich in supplying liquor to those who are thirsty comes the word that decent stuff is getting increasingly difficult to get each month. It will become more so because Hr. Hoover is determined to make a respectable showing in the matter of liquor law enforcement. There will be more rotten liquor, more blindness, more deaths if folks persist in drinking the stuff. The wealthy man who made bootlegging profitable by paying sky prices for illegal liquor will leave it alone hereafter if he shows the same prudence and caution in this matter which have governed his other actions.

THE MOUTH OF A GIFT HORSE.

Once again the house of Betsy Ross, known to generations of Americans as the traditional birthplace of the Stars and Stripes, has been offered to the City of Philadelphia, just as it has been offered to virtually every administration in the last twenty years.

Such consistent generosity ought to be rewarded, one would think. But there are conditions. Chief among these is the requirement that the city purchase adjoining property. The proposition has been turned over to a council committee which may or may not follow the mayor's recommendation and take the house.

Not only has the municipal government looked this particular gift horse in the mouth before, but so have the state and the federal. Fire is the impelling motive of the owning association to pass title to the house. Built as it is on Arch street, in an old section of the city, and sandwiched between two brick structures, drastic measures are needed really to protect it against the danger of conflagration. Within two years, 500 fire alarms were turned in within two blocks of the site.

Some suggestions have been made that the house be moved to Fairmont park, where other historical relics are now enshrined. In the minds of many people, that plan is most feasible of all.

But to others, it seems sometimes that acceptance of the house on any condition would be a burden. The fact is, that there is a danger of too many "shrines" being established. At the time when the authenticity of dozens of "sacred" spots has been challenged, it is well for governments to consider carefully whether they want any more. The Betsy Ross house is a case in point. Without doubt, Betsy lived there. The church she attended is but a short distance away. But did she have anything in particular to do with the Stars and Stripes? Some sober historians now doubt it.

If she did not, then there certainly can be little in favor of preserving her home. Intrinsically, it has no particular attraction. And governments have heavy enough burdens without shouldering expensive mementoes that can be of no real value to the citizens.

AGAINST A 9-FOOT CHANNEL.

An army engineer, Major Charles L. Hall, has thrown a wet blanket upon the hopes of those who have wanted to see the Missouri river opened up for navigation on a wide scale.

One of the urgent steps in this connection was deepening the channel from 6 to 9 feet. That would permit the safe operation of much larger barges and boats than at present. Major Hall does not report upon the Missouri river project but he does deal with the problem in connection with the upper Mississippi channel. He is opposed to deepening it to 9 feet and says that if 6-foot navigation cannot be made to pay the sums which would be required to provide a 9-foot channel would doom any hope of successful financial operation. He estimates the cost of bringing the upper Mississippi to the same level as the lower river and the Ohio at $88,000,000.

Major Hall is trampling upon one of Mr. Hoover's pet projects, however. The president while secretary of the department of commerce took a leading part in the plan of Mississippi and Missouri river development and has consistently indicated he purposed to undertake it during his administration. Mr. Hoover is not necessarily alarmed by the fact it will cost $88,000,000. On the contrary whenever he has spoken of it he has indicated it would cost "several hundred millions" of dollars but he has insisted it would be money well spent. So the thing which is of interest in connection with Major Hall's report is that finding which suggests the impossibility of successful financial operation.

The evidence on that point is confusing and conflicting. The government barge line operating out of St. Louis realized its first earning last year but even this was attacked on the ground that proper charges had not been made in bookkeeping. If all of the allowances had been made which would have been necessary had it been operated by a private company, there would have been no profit, it was claimed.

ON YOUTHFUL SHOULDERS.

Time and events wrought great changes.

Here was the youthful Prince of Wales indulging his love for the out-of-doors by hunting big game in Africa slightly more than two months ago. His father, the king, was taken seriously ill and the son was summoned home post haste. The king has recovered but will never be able to undertake the heavy duties which were imposed upon him prior to his sickness. The work has gone forth that the Prince of Wales will shoulder the load.

It is a big job for a young man. The World war has left great scars upon the British empire. The bonds between the mother country and her far-flung domains have been altered materially. More and more the provinces are making their voice heard in the conduct of affairs. But it is in the home country itself that the Prince will find his greatest problem. Economic distress is great. Unemployment is large. There is much suffering and little of encouragement. But Wales has shown himself to be an able, tactful, sympathetic young man and there is every reason to look forward to his larger participation in the affairs of his country with the utmost confidence.

A Play, "The Dinner."

BY WILL ROGERS.

Where's My Sock?

Scene—The White House, Washington, D. C.

Time—Sunday night, March 3, 1929.

Play produced under the management of U. S. government.

Characters in the order of their appearance.

Calvin .....Mr. Coolidge
Grace .....Mrs. Coolidge
Lou .....Mrs. Hoover
Herb .....Mr. Hoover
Supers in mob scene, congressmen and senators.

Calvin—Grace I bet you gone and packed my shirt front.

Grace—No I dident Calvin. I dident touch your old things. You just about endorsed it and sent it back with those other bills to congress.

Calvin—Well, what am I going to do for a shirt tonight?

Grace—Wear the one you are going to wear to the innaugaration tomorrow.

Calvin—I am not going to wear any to the innaugaration tomorrow. Its not my innaugaration. Hoover will have on enough for both of us.

Grace—Well, for lands sake hurry up, they will be coming in a few minutes, cause he is noted for being on time.

Calvin—From what I hear, he is noted for about everything. Where is my other sock. I bet you packed it around that painting.

Grace—Calvin I dident see your old sock. Put on your cowboy "chaps" and thye wont notice you having one sock missing.

Calvin—What would I want to put on my "chaps" for? I am not running for anything.

Grace—You are running for this train tomorrow aint you? You claim you are in such a hurry to get out of town. Hurry up now, they will be here any minute. They are just the kind that will be on time.

Calvin—Now I lost my collar buttons. What truck did you pack them on? I had em laid out right here. They was the pair that Tom Heflin brought me from Rome.

Grace—Well I do wish you would hurry up. I want to straighten up this room after you get out, for she will want to look around. By the way, who owns these sheets, us or the government?

Calvin—U. S.

Grace—I've got Emily Post's book here on "What is proper to carry in and out of the White House."

Calvin—Well, there is a "precedent" I reckon, half of Washington does nothing but study up "precedents." They can tell me what color underwear that a retiring president should have on when he turns over the salary to his successful competitor. If people of Washington obyed as many laws as they do "precdents" they wouldent even need a calaboose in the whole town.

Grace—Well, I know I want to leave the house in good shape. I hade the whole place all fumigated after those senators breakfasts you had here.

Calvin—Well, they shouldent be so particular. They lived in a rented house all their lives havent they?

Grace—Why no, they got a home in California.

Calvin—But they was only there the night the election returns come in.

Grace—Well where was you the night your election returns come in?

Calvin—I was asleep.

Calvin—Well I seen a lot right here in Washington without traveling.

Grace—Why he has been in Siberia.

Calvin—Yes, and the first time he has a run in with that senate, he will wish he was back in Siberia.

Grace—He is an engineer, he can do lots of things.

Calvin—Well he will wish he had studied to be a conductor instead.

Grace—Listne I hear em, or is that them?

Calvin — It dont sound well enough organized for them.

Grace—Yes that's them, hurry up, fasten your suspenders. "Precedent says we should both meet em at the door, and say in unison, "Welcome to your new home."

Calvin—Well suppose it was a democrat, how could you say "Welcome to him"?

Grace—There has been so few democrats that there has been no "precedent" established.

Lou and Herb in huddle outside of door. Herb speaks:

Herb—Now let's dont stay here long for I want to get home and reherse some jestures on my speech for tomorrow. I bet they forgot this was the night we was coming.

Grace—Hello, why its you all. Come right in. Calvin will be down just as soon as he vetoes two more bills.

Herb—Nice place you got here.

Grace—Yes we think so, that is we thought so. Its old but we have managed some way.

Lou—Reminds me of a little "Igloo" we had in West Australia.

Where is the "study?" I want to fix up about Herbert's study.

Grace — Well Calvin studied wherever he happened to be. He dident have any regular place to study, when he studied. He used public dinners mostly.

Lou—How is the help, are they dependable?

Grace—Well they are government help, and you been here long enough to know what that is, either in Kabinet, Kongress, or Kitchen.

Lou—Oh, but look at those cuspidors!"

Grace—You have to have those for congressional receptions.

Calvin—Hello Herb, glad you come to the wake.

Herb—Well thought we would walk over. Lou wanted to look the place over, the two trunks wont be over till tomorrow.

Calvin—Well, we about ready to get out. Oh! We got maby ten or twelve truck loads of little knick knacks around yet.

Herb—How is the place anyhow? I just wanted to ask you about that.

Calvin—Oh its allright. But you cant get much of a steady lease on it. The fellow just lets you have it on short term, about four years, then lots of times he dont want to renew, and thats what makes it bad. Come on in and sit down to dinner, we aint got much, just kinder a little snack. Just sorter cleaning out what little was left in the ice box, and dident want to get in anything. We figured you was like most folks, you liked to come in with all your own stuff. There is a few half jars of some stuff that we dident think hardly worth while packing, and maby be some butter left from breakfast, and lot of just little small things like that, that we just thought we would leave. I expect there is a little flour in there too aint there Grace? She will give your wife the name and phone of the grocer and they will send you up what you will need for lunch tomorrow. Just run a charge account there, thats the way I did. But you got to watch the bills. This town is awful slick that way, they just live off such and you and me. You see there is so many of these politicians that get away and dont pay their bills, that they have to make it up on those of us who do.

I dont want to be telling you your business, but dont go and make the mistake I did and start feeding the senators and congressmen breakfast. They will eat you out of house and home, and then go right back up on the hill and vote against what you fed em for.

Lou—Come on Herb, now we must be going, and let these people get some rest. They got a long hard trip in front of them tomorrow. Thanks for showing me the house Grace. Herb has to get home and study up a new cabinet in case the senate is wise to this one.

Herb and Lou—Well goodnight you all. Coming to the inaugaration tomorrow aint you? Maby we will see you there. Thanks for the dinner. Just leave the key under the door mat: and leave your address and I will send you any little thing you might a left.

Calvin and Grace — Goodnight, thanks for coming. Hope you like the place. I will have to mail you the address where we will be, Calvin cant make up his mind.

Here and There

Cabinet Making.

(The Daily Oklahoman.)

Of the ten men called to cabinet service by President Harding eight years ago only three are still performing cabinet duties. With the exception of Mellon and New and John J. Davis the original Harding cabinet is gone.

Near 300 Americans have performed cabinet services since Washington appointed the first cabinet in 1789. Of these 300, fifty-four served less than a year each. About two dozen were in office only a few months. A dozen were in office only a few weeks. Several served only a few days.

Only one cabinet remained unbroken for the full term of the president appointing it. That was the cabinet of Franklin Pierce. Among its distinguished members were Caleb Cushing of Massachusetts and Jefferson Davis of Mississippi.

The average term of the secretary of state is a little less than three years, while that of the secretary of the treasury is even less. The average term of the secretary of war and the attorney general is two years and eight months.

Nine of the thirty men called to the presidency have seen cabinet service prior to their call to the presidency. These nine promoted cabinet officials were Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Van Buren, Buchanan, Grant, Taft and Hoover. Several cabinet officials of outstanding brilliancy (including Hamilton and Webster and Hughes) have been defeated for the presidency. Fifteen justices of the supreme court had been cabinet members and five of them became chief justices.

Thirty-six men have held more than one position in the cabinet; four of them have held three different position. Between 1903 and 1907 inclusive George B. Cortelyou served as secretary of commerce and labor, postmaster general, and se retary of the treasury. James Wilson of Iowa served as secretary of agriculture sixteen years, the longest service ever performed by a cabinet member.

The stormy Wilcon administration saw three cabinet officers complete the eight-year tenure. Exactly the same number have survived the exigen ies of the peaceful Harding-Coolidge regime. While Wilson was sharply criticized for his inability to get along harmoniously with his subordinates, the record shows that he did exactly as well as his two successors.

It Has Its Disadvantages.

(The Denver Post)

A movement has been launched in Kansas to create a new state from the western half. It probably won't succeed. And if it should, the very people who are advocating it are the ones who would suffer the most. This business of being a state is very expensive. Western Kansas would find that paying half the state taxes, as it does at present, is only half as bad as paying all the taxes as it would have to do if a new state was created. Consolidation of states would be an economy. Every additional governmental subdivision increases the burden uuon the taxpayers.

Flying in the Antarctic.

(The New York Times.)

Commander Byrd brooked no delay in putting one of his four airplanes in commission within a few hours after getting it off the ship at the Bay of Whales. Seven times it took the air on Wednesday. When the commander himself went up he discovered a previously unknown Barrier inlet. These sheets of water are necessary to adequate charting of the coast and may extend for long distances inland. The advantages of the airplane over the dogsled for making geographical delimitations Commander Byrd is now in a position to prove. With fine and still weather lasting a few days, he shoulid be able to eclipse his predecessors in Antarctica, Amundsen, Scott and Shackleton, using dogs, snent days running into weeks in traversing distances that the aviator could cover in half a day or less.

Captain Amundsen, while trudging back from the South Pole with his dogs, could only conjecture that Queen Maud's Range extended across the continent, if there was a continent. He put the chain down on his chart, but from the Endurance in 1914 Sir Ernest Shackleton, approaching the coast, saw no mountains resembling the Queen Maud Range. Byrd in an airplane 5,000 feet up might see the end of the range. Maps made by the explorer on foot cannot be regarded as trustworthy. The aviator should be able to resolve doubts. Yet he will be a long time making the whole of Antartica known to the world, for he will have to operate from prepared bases on the coast.

Commander Byrd can hardly enter upon an elaborate program of exploration from the air until the Eleanor Bolling arrives from New Zealand. In the meantime he may have opportunities to scout considerable distances from his base, weather permitting. There is no atmosphere clearer than that of a sunny day in Antarctica, but storms come up with disconcerting suddenness. It will be hazardous to plan long flights into the interior. Antarctic summers are short. All the planes of the Byrd expedition should be available when exploration on an ambitious scale is attempted. The problem of relief in case a plane is missing must have consideration. Rationing the crews at stations and reinforcing them with dog-teams in an emergency enter into the problem. No previous explorer has had so much to think of as Byrd, but he is well read in polar exploration.

Studies of Antarctic weather show that, judging by the thermometer, the true summer lasts from two to three months. There may be several clear days together. Fortunately, winds are usually light in December and January, the best summer months. King Edward VII Land has a bad reputation for snow, and fogs in the Bay of Whales are frequent. While there are snowstorms, and even blizzards in the summer, the winter is the execrably bad season, with temperatures 70 degrees below zero and winds blowing a hundred miles an hour. Commander Byrd's aviators will be limited to the summer for good flying weather.

Who Is Fit For College?

(By Chancellor E. A. Burnett University of Nebraska.)

Last fall we had 1800 freshman students come to us. This spring from high schools in every part of the state we shall graduate thousands of young people, most of them eager to find a place in the world.

The most important educational problem that confronts the university and the high schools is the adjustment between high school and college.

There is perhaps the impression that a large number of students are dropped from the university because of their inability to carry on the work. Roughly speaking, we lose around 5 per cent of our students by poor scholarship, including those actually dropped and those who withdraw voluntarily with poor work. Possibly not so many after all.

But the university is desirous of cutting that number to a minimum, avoiding the heartbreak that goes with a forced withdrawal or the feeling that one is unable to carry the work.

Here is the message to the high school student and teacher. We are beginning to find that the boy or girl who was a poor student or who lacked industry in high school is the same kind of a student in the university.

A study was made a while back of students who had entered the university two years before. Records were available for 239 students from 142 schools.

Here is what we find:

Among the students in the upper fourth in their high school work, 80 per cent were still in school after two years.

Among the students ranking in the second quarters in high school, 70 per cent were still in the university.

Among those ranking in the third quarter, 25 per cent were still in the university.

But among those in the lowest fourth in high school, but 5 per cent were in the University after two years.

The lesson obviously is that a man or woman who is a poor student in high school should hardly expect to attend college. The struggle is too great.

Famous Pets Of Famous People

Sir Robert Gillespie's Black Charger Which Died When Left Behind By Its Regiment.

"Simultaneously, his rider struck the spear through the tiger's back."

BY PRESTON WRIGHT.

General Sir Robert Gillespie celebrated for his part in the British campaigns in India, was a very skilled horseman. Once he was able to give a remarkable demonstration of how tractable a horse can be if it has perfect confidence in its rider.

Sir Robert was present on the race course at Calcutta during a great Hindu festival at which several hundreds of thousands of natives were present. Mounted on a small gray Arabian, highly mettlesome, and requiring a firm hand with so many excited persons about, he was suddenly aroused by the shrieks of the crowd. A tiger had escaped from its keeper and was spreading consternation.

Grasping a boar spear which he tore from the grasp of one of the natives, Sir Robert immediately rode forward to attack the tiger.

That animal, surprised at being suddenly loose among all the shrieking human beings, was rather frightened. But when he saw Sir Robert riding at him, he crouched ready for a spring.

Now horses are not fond of tigers and indeed often are badly frightened when in their neighborhood. But the Arab on which Sir Robert rode had complete confidence in his master. He drove straight at the big cat and, guided by Sir Robert, leapt over him at exactly the right moment. Simultaneously, his rider struck the spear through the tiger's back.

Sir Robert had such a high opinion of this gray that later he sent him back to England as a present to the prince regent, husband of Queen Victoria.

Perhaps the mount which the general loved most was the charger which he rode at the storming of Kalunga. This horse was a truly martial animal, born for wars and warring, and an ideal mount for the brave Sir Robert. From the viewpoint of romance, buth master and horse fulfilled their destinies perfectly.

At Kalunga Sir Robert gave up his life in the service of his country. The black charger survived him after having been his loyal servant and companion from the day when Sir Robert had taken him out to India from the Cape of Good Hope, where he was bred.

It is proof of the high regard in which General Gillespie was held by his men that when his effects were put on sale the privates of the Eighth Dragoons contributed their prize money, amounting to about $2,500 and bid against several officers of the division to obtain the black charger. The animal finally was knocked down to them.

Thereafter the hiderless steed was always led at the head of the regiment on march; and when the regiment was on station at Cawnpore, the animal, which had become the admired pet of all the dragoons, was allowed to take his accustomed place at the color-stand, where the salute of passing squadrons was given at drills and on reviews.

Time passed. The Eighth was ordered home. The funds of the soldiers were now running low and it was deemed impossible to take the charger along. In this contingency, a wealthy Britisher bought him at the price the dragoons had paid for him and turned him loose in a paddock where he might spend the rest of his days in peace and comfort.

It was a sad day for the old horse, who now began to feel his years. When the regiment had departed and the last bugle had sounded, he lapsed into dejection and refused his food.

Being led out for exercise, he broke away from his groom. Galloping to his old station on the parade ground, he tossed his head and neighed loudly.

Everyday Questions

Answered By

DR. S. PARKES CADMAN

(Copyright, 1928, New York Tribune.)

Questions from Lincoln Star readers are answered daily by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, of the Federated Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receive.

QUESTION.

Little Rock, Ark.

We have read in your column of various "lives" of Jesus, but they are all for grownups. Please tell the mother of four children, all under ten years of age, the best "life" of Christ for the children.

ANSWER.

I recommend Dr. J. Sinclair Stevenson's book entitled "The Friend of Little Children," which has an introduction by the late Dr. Chavasse, Lord Bishop of Liverpool, England. His praise of the volume is well deserved and it has recently been revised to meet an increasing demand. Intended as it is for youngsters of tender years, the Gospel narratives are translated into simple yet forcible speech, while the beautiful comments upon them are of a character which both old and young can appreciate. This book is published by Blackwell, of London, and should be obtainable from any first class American bookseller.

QUESTION.

Pittsburgh.

I married against my parents' wishes and judgment, and after my son's birth went home to recuperate, my mother-in-law keeping house for my husband. I was detained at home by a number of circumstances and my husband was apparently not anxious for me to hurry back. A neighbor's letter caused me to return after being away about five months. I then found there was another woman in the case. I returned to my parents again and he has now installed the other person in my place. Sometimes I consider returning to him, and yet I never intend to do so. I am weighed down by terrible unhappiness. I am probably better off free.

Possibly he senses my thoughts and believes he can call me back when he likes. I would like your opinion on my case.

ANSWER.

Upon the facts disclosed in your letter I do not think he cares enough at present to ask you to return, and I wonder if you have supplied all the details essential to a helpful discussion of your case. You fail to say whether your heart dictated the marriage or why your parents opposed it. On the face of it, it appears to have been an instance of "marry in haste to repent at leisure."

Perhaps it was disenchantment that led you to absent yourself from your husband for five months. Of course, your recuperation after so heavy a trial was necessary, but why could it not have been gained in your new home, especially as the mother-in-law might have assisted you in the heavier domestic work?

Certainly your husband's marital infidelity is inexcusable. When a seeming man brings such turpitude as his into the most sacred of relations, you cannot palliate it without sinking to his level. There are people who, like a drunken blackguard, must be left severely alone till the officer of the law appears.

If this man dismisses his paramour, apologizes to you for so degrading a performance and covenants to fulfill to the letter his pledged word, you may then consider the advisability of a reconciliation. I say this because your confession of painful distress is equivalent to admitting that you still love the rascal.

This is a sorry state of affairs on which you alone have to make the final decision. In the long run all marriages must themselves show their origin, whether it be in heaven or hell, and work out their own salvation if they are salvable. I feel, as do others who read this column, a sincere pity for a young mother placed in your dilemma. Some of us would prescribe a drastic solution; others lean to a milder policy. Whatever you do, maintain your self-respect and your rights as a married woman and mother.

May God guide you as one of His troubled children and move the heart of your husband to repentance and amendment.

QUESTION.

The conversation between Jesus and the woman of Samaria at the well took place apparently without any witnesses being present to record what was said.

Please explain on what ground you accept this marriage as authentic or as a historical occurrence.

ANSWER.

The germ of the narrative recorded in the Fourth Gospel, in which Jesus holds conversations with individuals must have come from the Master Himself, who afterward told them to His disciples. To explain them as the pure inventions of the narrator does not solve the difficulty. Personally, I told that in these accounts we have genuine incidents in the life of Jesus made known by Him to His inner circle. During the interval between our Lord's death and the writing of the Fourth Gospel—a period of sixty to seventy years—these events were used in the early church as themes for sermons and spiritual meditations. When they were finally cast in literary form the incident and its application had been so closely interwoven that both were attributed to the ministry of the Master. Modern scholarship has a very difficult task in determining which part of the narrative is a genuine utterance of Jesus and which belongs to the homilists of the apostolic communion.

Its Highway of Gold

Out in the golden West, where nuggets have tumbled out of hillsides at the stroke of a pick, there is a highway which is mottled with precious metal. It is called "The Golden Highway," and ranks among the most unique and costliest trails in the world. The stretch of road, a link in the system of Southern Colorado, is five miles long.

Experts have estimated that every mile of the concrete roadbed contains $3,000 in virgin gold. The gold has found its humble resting place under the wheels of motor cars, by reason of the fact that the crushed rock used in the cement mix was shipped from the ore dumps of the rich Cripple Creek gold field, after all that was practical of its valuable content had been extracted.

Reports show that the highway material essayed $1.50 to the ton and, on this basis of computation, the sparkling metal will average $3,000 a mile.

Battle With Merrimac Recalled by Ponca Man, Believed Sole Survivor of Monitor

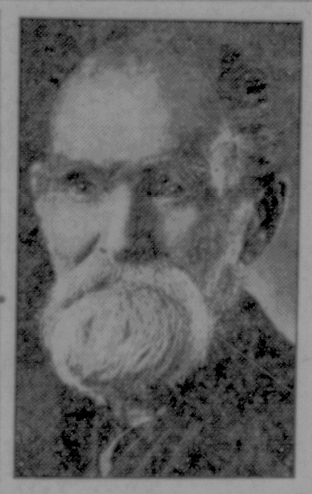

By HARRY L. PETERSON.

Footprints on the sands of time."

These words from Longfellow may be fittingly applied to three score naval men who left their footprints on the abiding sands of American history on the morning of March 9, 1862. For on that morning the dauntless crew of the U. S. S. Monitor of Civil war fame met and successfully defied the formidable Merrimac, new terror of the confederate navy, and made secure the union cause.

The conflict that day was destined to go down in history as one of the most important naval battles in history and resulted in revolutionizing the navies of the world. During the battle the Merrimac carried a crew of almost 350 men and the Monitor's crew numbered 58.

Today, 67 years later, there is as far as is known only one survivor of the Monitor's dauntless crew, and that survivor is James H. McKenzie, inmate of the Dixon county farm near Ponca, who celebrated his 88th birthday February 22. McKenzie does not receive a pension and he has no known living relatives. He served for another man and neglected to find out or remember that man's name and his Scotch independence and indifference throughout the long years has kept him from asking for the pension for which he is so justly deserving. Yet the fact that he is spending his declining years in poverty is not causing him much worry, because of that same dauntless spirit that prompted him to volunteer his services on the Monitor. His greatest concern is that he have an adequate supply of chewing tobacco. He is a great gardener and during the summer cultivates a two-acre tract. From it he makes enough to buy his own clothes so he is reasonably satisfied.

James H. McKenzie, living near Ponca, is probably the only man living today who took part in the famed fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac. More than three score years ago since the battle which demonstrated the value of armored vessels, but he still remembers that March 9, as he was serving with the Monitor.

Veteran Trapper.

Besides being a naval veteran McKenzie is a seasoned hunter, trapper and trader. Even yet today he traps muskrat, and beaver and one night four years ago he got lost while tending his traps five miles from town and had to walk all that night to keep from freezing. His life has been one of long adventure.

As a husky lad near Greenock he used to go out alone in a fishing boat. When he was 17 he ran away from home and enlisted in the Seventy-eighth Scotch Highlanders. But he was under age and his father got him discharged.

McKenzie first went to sea when he was 15 and served in the British merchant marine. His various maritime journeys have taken him half way around the world and he has visited a great many countries. He sailed around stormy Cape Horn twice and was almost ship-wrecked in the tropics once. He has worked on trading vessels which have carried cargoes of indigo from India to Scotland and England. McKenzie claims he was a seaman on the maiden voyage of the Great Eastern, the largest vessel then afloat and which afterwards laid the first successful Atlantic cable in 1866. Some years before the Civil war his uncle was engaged in the slave trade and was bringing negroes from Africa to the southern states for the slave markets. McKenzie was a member of his crew. During one voyage the slaves, led by a gigantic negro, made a break for liberty from the hatch and his uncle who was captain of the vessel, had to shoot three of them.

While the Civil war was on McKenzie served in the union navy on the U. S. S. Constitution, familiarly known as "Old Ironsides." He was never seriously wounded throughout the four years of the war. After the war he came west and learned the butcher's trade and trapped.

McKenzie's Story.

Following is an elaboration of his account of the great fight between the world's first ironclad, the Monitor, and the Merrimac:

Shortly after the mid-night hour on the Sunday morning, March 9, 1862, a strange looking naval craft steamed into Hampton Roads, Va., and cast anchor behind the looming bulk of the stranded Minnesota, Union naval frigate run aground the day before by the Confederate ram, Merrimac.

The newcomer was none other than the celebrated "Yankee Cheesebox on a Raft," a diminutive steam battery which had been rushed to completion in the shipyard of Thomas F. Rowland, at Greenpoint, Brooklyn, and had been named the Monitor. Her inventor and builder was Captain John Erickson, the Swedish engineer.

As the Monitor hove to behind the shadow of the Minnesota her pathway was brightly illuminated by the lurid flames of the burning Congress which had fallen prey to the onslaught of the Merrimac the day before.

Flames Set Off Cannon.

The Congress was two or three miles from the Minnesota, but the ruthless flames leaping over her lit up the bay for miles around. The flames crept up the mast, the rigging, and every spar and rope glittered against the dark sky in dazzling lines of fire. The hulk of the frigate lay black on the water with every porthole aflame like the mouth of a fiery furnace. The flames reached the loaded cannon and set them off and the shells streaked through the black mantle of night, the reverbrations of the shots ringing along the bay. About 2 o'clock in the morning the powder magazine of the ship blew up; not all at once but successively. Explosion followed explosion, each shooting a huge column of flames and burning wood skyward which slowly settled in blazing masses to the blackened waters. It was a grand and pathetic scene. The wreck of the Congress continued to burn all night until past daylight. Then things began to happen.

Crew Fatigued.

Captain John L. Worden, a veteran seaman, 44 years old, was the commander of the Monitor and was as fine and courageous a captain as any vessel ever had. He had conferred with Captain Van Brunt of the Minnesota in regard to battle plans. The Monitor's crew was eager for battle, yet few of them were in condition for it. Hardly any of them had sleep for 48 hours and were fagged out from the exhausting labor of working the hand pumps during the voyage down the coast from New York. The Monitor had not been built to cruise the high seas and she was towed down to Hampton Roads by the cruiser Seth Low. The vessels encountered heavy seas due to a strong wind. Huge waves continually broke over the Monitor sending the sea water rushing through eye slits in the pilot house and down the blower pipes and smokestacks.

The rush of the water down the blower pipes did the most harm as it caused the belts to slip on the blower engines and then the fires under the boilers nearly went out for lack of air which was thus supplied. This condition also rendered the steam pumps useless. The Monitor was in danger of foundering several times and the men worked like giants at the hand pumps. Finally Old Point Comfort was passed and the Monitor entered Hampton Roads.

She first met the Roanoke, which was commanded by Captain Marston, and soon pushed on and anchored behind the Minnesota. The flames from the burning Congress lit up the wohle bay. While they waited the crew heard the powder magazines of the Congress blow up and saw sheets of flame streak the sky.

Merrimac Steams Up.

Daylight came and the Merrimac could be seen lying near Sewell's Point. About 7 o'clock smoke was seen pouring from the broad funnel of the Merrimac and the men knew that she was preparing to complete her work of destruction so triumphantly begun the day before in her sinking of the Cumberland and the burning of the Congress. Worden's orders had been to protect the union war vessels.

The Merrimac got under way and steamed straight for the Minnesota which she had run aground unaware that the Monitor was hiding behind the frigate.

Worden came on the Monitor and all the men partook of a scanty breakfast consisting mostly of hard bread as cooking was impossible. The men on the deck of the Monitor saw that the Merrimac was getting under way. Everyone realized that the time for decisive action was close at hand.

The men in the boiler rooms shoveled coal until they had a huge pressure of steam. The two gun crews, composed of eight brawny men each stripped to the waist and took their stations for battle in the turret. A young mid-shipman, Lieut. S. D. Greene, executive officer, was in command of the gun crews. He was only 22 but had thoroughly familiarized himself with the workings of the Monitor. Besides these sixteen there were two other men in the turret, Louis Stodder, acting master, and A. C. Stimers, chief engineer. McKenzie was one of the gunners and had just passed his 21st birthday.

Howard The Pilot.

Worden, together with Samuel Howard, the civilian pilot, and Peter Williams, the quartermaster, took his position in the pilot house, a small square iron structure forward the turret, from which he directed the battle. Although Howard was the pilot, Williams did the actual steering of the Monitor through the engagement. William Keeler, assistant paymaster and Daniel Toffe" clerk, carried the captain's orders back and forth to Lieut. Greene.

Worden ordered the Monitor to be steered straight for the Merrimac. When the sailors on the Merrimac beheld the Monitor advancing they laughed at her grotesque appearance and promptly nicknamed her the "Yankee Cheese-box on a Raft." But the "Cheese-box" was destined to put an end to the activities of the giant which she confronted.

The Merrimac began firing before the Monitor did. The Monitor had only two guns while the Merrimac had ten. The Monitor drew close aboard the Merrimac. Commodore Franklin Buchanan, commander of the Merrimac had been seriously wounded by a rifle ball during the fight with the Congress the day previous so the command of the southern ironclad had devolved upon her executive officer, Lieut. Catesby A. R. Jones. And an able man was he.

The armored casemate housing the ten guns of the Merrimac was 180 feet long or nine times the distance the width of the turret of the Monitor. Four of the Merrimac guns were rifles; two six-inch and two seven-inch guns, while the other six were nine-inch cannon. All of these guns kept up a furious fire on the Monitor.

Still the fight went on. The Monitor hovered about the Merrimac like a wasp testing the armor plate of her enemy by a steady rain of shot.

Shells from both warships sped back and forth, scores of them striking the armor plate of each to glance off and burst in the air or to plunge with a loud hiss into the water. A half dozen direct hits from the Merrimac's guns left spherical impressions on the eight inch wall of the Monitor's turret.

Merrimac Runs Aground.

Once during the battle the Merrimac ran aground because she drew 23 feet of water to the Monitor's 11. It was a dangerous few minutes for the southern ironclad. The Monitor dashed in close to her stranded enemy. In the boiler room of the Merrimac the firemen worked like mad heaping combustibles on the raging fires to increase the pressure of steam so the vessel could free herself. It was a dangerous piece of business for the boilers of the Merrimac were old and rusty. Her broken funnel belched great volumes of smoke.

The unwieldy Merrimac was jarred from stem to stern as her engines labored and the propellor futily churned the water. Meanwhile the Monitor circled about planting shot after shot against her side. No doubt the superior guns of the Monitor would have pierced the four inch armor plate and the two feet of oak and pine backing of the Merrimac had not Worden and Greene had strict orders to use only a fifteen-pound charge of powder in contrast to a thirty-pound charge which was subsequently used in the same guns.

Gunners Disabled.

Suddenly the Merrimac slid free of the shoal and made a rush for her puny adversary, but Worden anticipating this swung the Monitor nimbly to one side and planted two shots squarely against the sides of the enemy. Though they did not pierce the Merrimac's armor they had a telling effect and their concussion was terrific. Two of the Merrimac's gun crews were completely disabled and bled from the ears and nose.

Stodder who had charge of the steam mechanism revolving the turret of the Monitor was disabled in a similar manner when one of the Merrimac's shells struck the side of the turret as he was leaning against it. He was carried below bleeding from the nose and ears, while Stimers took his place.

Earlier in the fight Worden did a thing of unsurpassed daring. There were two or thre weak points about the Monitor which he feared a shell from the Merrimac might pierce. One of these was the "plank-shear," the right angle where the turret met the armored deck. One of the shells from the southern war vessel did strike the plank-shear and tore up one of the deck plates. Worden felt that the extent of the damage must be investigated.

Crawls Out On Deck.

But instead of ordering a man to go out and see, he had one of the port shutters swung aside and he himself crawled through it and out on the deck where he proceeded to examine the rent. He at once drew the fire of the southern sharpshooters but he was not hit, no doubt due to the movement of the vessel. He found the damage to be slight. He crawled back in the Monitor and announced to the gun crews that the Merrimac could not hurt the Monitor if she pounded her for a month. The men then gave their intrepid captain a rousing cheer, both for his bravery and the good news.

But a serious thing occurred near the close of the battle which came very near putting the Monitor out of the fight altogether. The Monitor made a rush at the stern of the Merrimac endeavoring to snap off her propeller. In this the little boat was almost successful missing the larger ship's propellor by a few feet. But in passing by the Merrimac Lieut. John T. Wood in charge of the stern gun trained the rifle on the Monitor's pilot house and fired a rifle pointed shell which struck the iron logs which the pilot house was made up of cracking the upper beam but not breaking it in two. Worden, Williams and Howard were in the house and Worden at the moment the shell struck was peering out at the scene of battle. He was half stunned by the force of the blow and the hot powder from the ball burned his face and eyes temporarily blinding him.

Merrimac Withdraws.

Lieutenant Greene was then called to the pilot house to take command of the Monitor. It was almost noon then and the battle did not continue long after that. Presently the Merrimac began to withdraw toward the Elizabeth river and the Norfolk navy yard. She was leaking badly but her efficient pumps had kept her afloat. Both vessels fired a few parting shots and as if by common consent the engagement was terminated.

Although Captain Worden and acting master Stodder were severely injured and disabled for weeks, the Monitor had inflicted much more damage on her foe than she had received.

The Merrimac lost two killed and nineteen wounded. Her smokestack, all her boats, davits, stanchions, the muzzles of two guns, one anchor and outside steam pipes had all been shot away.

Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas Farmers, Seeking New Opportunities in Broad Expanses of Texas, Are In Revolt Against Autocratic "Border Barons"

Editorial Note; Vast political changes are taking place in Texas. Since the last presidential election, in which the Lone Star Empire broke tradition by going republican, there has been widespread interest in the alignments of this vast region. The Kansas City Star sent its own political correspondent there to investigate conditions and this is the story which he sent to his newspaper.

BROWNVILLE, Tex.—There is a certain corner of Texas, politically speaking, which is sitting on the edge of a volcano. Those who possess a map of the Southwest in general and the Lone Star state in particular will do well to glance carefully at that triangular section of Texas which extends from Corpus Christi to Laredo to Brownsville in the Rio Grande Valley. Down here by the "great river" of the Mexicans, a battle, bitter in its intensity, is being waged between two elements of the population. On one side are lined up the Iowans, Missourians, Kansans and Nebraskans, who came south to grow grapefruit in the valley of the Rio Grande. Opposing them one finds the Mexican element of the population, sons of men who lived there before the gringo came.

Some of these children of manana land, though fullgrown American citizens, have no understanding of the duties of democratic self-government. They are ruled by a small oligarchy of Americans, mostly native born Texans, called by many the "Little Tammany" of Texas.

Settlers Are Disfranchised.

Those Americans, for instance, who went to Hidalgo county to make homes and build a representative American civilization, have found themselves disfranchised, browbeaten, terrorized at every turn. They claim an actual majority of the voting population of Hidalgo, a vast stretch of land covered with cactus and citrus, bigger than Rhode Island, an empire in the making. Large numbers of American citizens, recent new-comers from the state of the middle west, find themselves helpless to control their own local affairs. The recent congressional committee, which spent some time in the Rio Grande valley inspecting the most amazing set of election returns ever brought before a legislative tribunal, heard stories of political manipulation which left them gasping. As one congress member expressed it, "Philadelphia was never like this."

Look at the tier of counties which line the Rio Grande from Laredo to Brownsville. First comes Webb county, farthest from the mouth of the river. It is typical of the border counties. It has one large city of about 35,000 people, Laredo. The rest is ranch country, large landholdings, many broad acres still belonging to the Mexican part of the population. The majority of the population speaks Spanish as a matter of course. The county is rich; large gas wells add to the wealth of the people who own land in fee. Webb county is a miniature kingdom, so far as politics is concerned. It is ruled by one Bruni, millionaire Italian of Laredo, the super boss of the entire southwest. His associate in controlling the Mexican population is John Valls of Laredo, who has been district attorney of Webb county for twenty-five years. He is half Spanish in blood, a Castilian grandee, an accomplished lawyer and influential politician. Bruni is county treasurer and the inarticulate member of the political alliance which governs Webb.

A "King" Over 800 Sections.

Below Webb county lies the "Kingdom of Zapata." It is owned by one man, C. M. Bruni of Laredo. He controls 800 sections of land in the county. Bruni is immensely wealthy. Gas and oil in commercial quantities have been discovered on his land. He probably does not know the extent of his resources.

East of Webb county is the "Kingdom of Duval." Here Archie Parr is king, his capital city the town of San Diego, one of those isolated communities which still retains the genuine flavor of the old west. The town is wide open, the Volstead act is merely a name, the inhabitants of the place Mexican. Many of the large ranches around are owned by outside capital. Absentee landlords reap the benefits of petroleum discoveries. Occasionally they visit their holdings to hunt. Duval county always votes solidly on political questions. Such unanimity of opinion is touching. The Spanish part of Duval's population votes bond issues with abandon. Big-hearted, all of them. Give the kiddies the benefits of education. Vote 'er straight. Carramba, yes!

And a "Queen," Too.

Below the "Kingdom of Zapata" one sees the county of Starr. This segment of cattle land is ruled by a dynasty. The seven Guerra brothers and the queen-mother, Madame Guerra. They form a remarkable family. Years ago when old Porfirio Diaz ruled Mexico with an iron hand, one Manual Guerra got on the wrong side of an argument with the Mexican president and left the country in great haste. He settled in Starr county, prospered exceedingly, married an American woman, Elizabeth Cox, became the political "boss" of Starr county for forty years. He is dead, but his widow carries on. A shrewd and intelligent woman, she is the brains of the family. One of the Guerras is sheriff, another is county attorney, another treasurer. A very convenient arrangement. Starr county is rich in natural resources, totally undeveloped. There is some little irrigation close to the river. Out of a population of perhaps 5,000, barely a hundred are Americans. Most of the inhabitants have heard of prohibition, but they don't believe it.

South of Starr county lies the "Hidalgo free state," facetiously termed such by those rancid souls who profess to believe that the local authorities do as they please without asking the advice of the United States government o nany point whatsoever, especially as regards elections. It is really a privilege to get your vote counted at times. So say the embattled farmers who once farmed broad acres in Kansas and Missouri, and are now trying to raise grapefruit and garden truck in the valley. They say they could make a good living if the taxes of Hidalgo county did not eat them out of house and home. There is a so-called "machine" in Hidalgo county, well oiled and kept in perfect running condition by A. Y. Baker, sheriff, business man, patron of the arts, super-salesman of the most amazing set of election returns ever brought before a legislative tribunal, heard stories of political manipulation which left them gasping. Cameron Went for Hoover.

At the southernmost tip of the state lies Cameron county, named after Capt. Ewen Cameron, "the first cowboy," captain of the Texas rangers, hero of the Texan revolution. Its county seat is Brownsville. The population is now predominantly American. Hoover carried this county by 300 majority in the late presidential election. At Brownsville lives R. B. Creager, the republican national committeeman for Texas. A few years ago Cameron county had a boss, Jim Wells. He maintained control by manipulating Mexican votes. His death stopped the practice to a large extent. The importation of Mexicans to vote in local American elections was discouraged with the aid of shotguns.

These six counties described about are typical of at least twenty in southwest Texas, where large blocks of voters belong to the Mexican race are voted like sheep by their political overlords. The Mexican who can neither read, write nor speak English as a rule votes for bond issues for the construction of roads, schools, hospitals and all manner of local improvements, especially in Hidalgo.

Accuse Creager of Alliance.

Most of the counties in this section of Texas belong in John Garner's district. He is an able legislator, a born leader, a veteran and democratic floor leader of the next congress. His retirement from public life would not benefit Texas nor the nation. But the fact remains Garner is returned to congress without the active opposition of a republican. His district, the fifteenth, lies alongside the famous fourteenth, that long, peculiarly shaped mass of counties which insists on electing Harary Wurzbach, republican, to congress. The continuous immigration from the middle west has made Garner's district doubtful, to say the least. He is returned to power by the votes of Mexicans. The "white" vote of the valley is a republican vote, but it never gets a chance to function except for national offices.

R. B. Creager, hitherto the republican "boss" of Texas, has graciously consented to permit republicans of the fifteenth district to vote for a republican candidate for president, for governor, and for United States senator. But so far no republican has ever run against John Garner for congress. And Creager, intimate friend and business associate of Baker, Hidalgo county's democratic Mussolini, prevented the republican element of the "free state" from getting on the republican county ticket in 1928. That is the sort of thing that makes transplanted Iowa republicans go mad and bite themselves when viewing for the first time the political operations of the Rio Grande valley.

Prof. John L. LaMonte of the department of history has accepted a traveling fellowship in history offered him by the Social Science Research council. After teaching here during the summer session he will leave for France. Professor LaMonte's work will be in the field of fedual institutions. He will spend most of the year—the duration of the fellowship—in Paris and the rest in northern Italy, Genoa and Venice.

A salt manufacturing company in Kansas has ordered 5,000 copies of the bulletin "Operating Expenses of Retail Grocery Stores in Nebraska, 1927" compiled by the committee on business research of the college of business administration. It will distribute the bulletins among retail stores. The bulletin is being reprinted by the extension division to fill the order.

The Nebraska commission of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools met Friday morning to make final recommendations on Nebraska high schools to be sent to the national meeting of that organization in Chicago. The commission is composed of G. W. Rosenlof, representing the state department of public instruction; A. A. Reed, university examiner; and L. C. Wicks, principal of the Fremont high school. Supt. M. C. Lefler of the Lincoln schools is advisory member of the commission.

Answers to Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—Since my last outburst, I have seen some very good talking pictures and I feel that I really ought to say something in appreciation of them.

The first one that I considered a real knockout was Al Jolson in "The Singing Fool." Everyone else in the country seems to agree with me.

Yesterday I saw "Interference" and thought it was real good although I must confess that I am still rather in the dark as to what it was all about. It was a masterpiece of perfection as movies go. "On Trial" was very good, too.

Just for a change I saw "A Dream of Love" and enjoyed it so very much. Nils Asther was perfect in the role and I thought to myself, "at last we have a real prince." He may be the son of the poorest peasant in Sweden, but he is a prince just the same. Maybe not so princely in real life. By the way, is he married? I heard once he was engaged to one of the Duncan sisters. Joan Crawford was good, too, but she never strikes me as being very sincere although I guess she is very good.

Doris Kenyon is another I could never go into hysterics over.

Emil Jannings is coming soon in "Sins of the Fathers." I am wondering if the talkies will cause him to go back to Germany. It seems that nearly all the "furriners" are leaving.

I think Evelyn Brent is a remarkable actress. I always enjoy watching her.

After waiting two years for "The Wedding March" I missed it. One would have a lot to do if one tried to see them all, to say nothing of the cost. I have never seen Von Stroheim nor any of his productions.

I don't seem to be in the raving mood today, so I'll say "au revoir."

JO, Billings, Mont.

We are glad that you still visit us occasionally, even though you have moved away from Lincoln.

"Interference" was very well done, but I think I prefer "The Doctor's Secret." Miss Brent is fortunate because she has a low pitched voice that registers well on the microphone. A few good talkies make us all sound picture enthusiasts.

Silence may be "golden" in the case of some of the foreign players but it will not send them all back to their native land. Baclahova, for instance, has been warned for Paramount to keep her foreign accent. They feel that it adds to her charm and personality in talking pictures.

Mr. Jannings is learning English rapidly and I hardly think the talkies will interfere with his career here. He always plays character roles and can just as well be cast in such parts as will permit and require broken English. He is preparing to start work on "The Concert." The picture will be produced under the direction of Ludwig Berger, who was responsible for "Sins of the Fathers."

Nils Asther has been married, but is single now. He was engaged to one of the Duncan sisters during the filming of "Topsy and Eva," but they both decided to remain single and stay friends.

Mr. Von Stroheim's productions are technically perfect as a rule, but he films so many reels in order to make them so, it's practically impossible to cut the picture down to program length. That's what happened in "The Wedding March," and as a result the picture ended rather abruptly. Seems that a sequel, or follow up will come later, but I have had no late announcements concerning it.

Hope you will continue to write whenever you have the time.

Dear Movie Editor—I certainly think that "Roxie" is all off when she thinks Mary Brian is a bum one, because she is so beautiful and her popularity is increasing with every picture she makes.

My favorites are Evelyn Brent, Mary Brian, Buddy Rogers and Richard Arlen.

I think Mary and Buddy make a wonderful team. I heard they are engaged. Is that true?

Please give me Evelyn's address and tell me all you can of Richard's life.

I don't like Clara Bow. She makes too many pictures and she is getting fatter with very one of them. She needs a vacation.

Could you give me the cast for "That Royle Girl?"

Accept my thanks for your trouble. L. L. B. Colon, Neb.

Well at least Mary has one staunch defender. There has been no announcement of an engagement between Buddy and Mary, but they seem to enjoy each other's company. They are a charming pair.

Address Miss Brent at the Paramount Studio, 5451 Marathon, Hollywood, Calif. She is working on the Universal lot at present, but is under contract to Paramount.

Clara decided she needed a vacation, too, so she's gone off by herself for a few weeks to rest up after making first talkie, "The Wild Party."

Mr. Arlen is "sitting on top of the world" so far as pictures are concerned just now, but he has a long tale of woe to tell before he got there. It took a broken leg to "turn the trick." He tried and tried to break in and finally in order to live, took a job as a motorcycle messenger boy for a film laboratory. The broken leg followed and a casting director helped carry him to the hospital. As soon as he was able to work, Richard got a small part in a feature.

"Wings" gave him his first big opportunity and he proved that his training in the Royal Flying corps in England during the war was of some value in motion pictures. It was during the filming of "Wings" that Mr. Arlen also met and married Jobyna Ralston.

Richard was born in Charlottesville, Va., under the family name of Van Mattimore. He completed his education at the University of Pennsylvania before he enlisted in the service.

After the war, your favorite tried newspaper work and even toiled in the Texas oil fields before he tried his luck in Hollywood.

You will see him next with Mary Brian in "The Man I Love."

The cast for "That Royle Girl" is: "Joan Daisy Royle," Carol Dempster; "Her Father," W. C. Fields; "Calvin Clarke," James Kirkwood; "Fred Ketlar," Harrison Ford; "Adele Ketlar," Marie Chambers; "George Baretta," Paul Everton; "His Henchman," George Rigas; "Baretta's Girl," Florence Auer; "Mrs. Clarke," Ida Waterman; "Clark's Fiancee," Alice Laidley; "Iola Neeson," Dorothea Love; "Elman" Dore Davidson; "Oliver," Frank Allworth, "Hofer," Bobby Watson.

Dear Movie Editor—I am just popping over with questions that I wish you would answer if you can.

What is William Haines next picture and when is it released? What is his address?

Please give me the addresses of the following: Dorothy Mackaill, Josephine Dunn, Larry Kent, Buddy Rogers, Alice White, Al Jolson, John Gilbert, Ramon Novarro and Edmund Lowe.

Where is Larry Kent now? Is he making pictures? What is his next picture?

Buddy Rogers sure is "swell." What is his next picture and when is it released?

Is it true that Al Jolson has been married three times?

Who played opposite Colleen Moore in "Lilac Time?" What is his address?

Do you have to send stamps with letters asking for pictures?

Hoping to see this in print soon, Many thanks.

ALWAYS A READER.

You "popped" into the right place.

William is working on a brand new feature as yet untitled, but dealing with the navy. Anita Page is playing opposite him. His latest release is "A Man's Man." Address him at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, Culver City, Calif.

Josephine Dunn, John Gilbert and Ramon Novarro are also with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Dorothy Mackaill, Alice White and Larry Kent are under contract to First National, Burbank, Calif. Buddy Rogers is with Paramount, 5451 Marathon, Hollywood; Al Jolson stars for Warner Brothers, 5842 Sunset Boulevard and Edmund Lowe may be found at the Fox studio, 1401 N. Western avenue, Hollywood.

At present Mr. Kent is working in "Zeppelin" for Tiffany-Stahl. He keeps before the camera most of the time. When there's no work for him on the home lot, he is loaned out to other companies.

"Close Harmony" is Buddy Rogers' most recent picture. It has just been released.

Yes, Ruby Keeler is the third Mrs. Jolson.

That was Gary Cooper in "Lilac Time." You will find him at the Paramount studio, 5451 Marathon, Hollywood.

No stamps, no picture, is the ruling now. A 10-cent stamp or that amount in money will bring a small photograph, and a 25-cent distribution will bring a larger picture of your favorite.

Dear Movie Editor—This is the first time I have visited your department but I have been an interested reader for many Sundays. I'll try not to ask too many questions.

Who played opposite Billie Dove in "The Yellow Lily?" He was certainly a fine actor.

Please tell me what you know about Billie Dove. She is my favorite actress. Is sh married?

Didn't you think Nancy Carroll was splendid in "Abie's Irish Rose?" How old is she? Is she married and if so, to whom? What is her next picture?

What is Marceline Day's next picture. She is certainly a good actress.

Please give me the addresses of the following: Billie Dove, Marceline Day, Nancy Carroll, Richard Dix, Josephine Dunn, Norma Shearer, Wallace Beery and George K. Arthur.

Please tell me the best way to get a photo of your favorite players?

Hoping to see this in pirtn soon, I remain JERRY.

We are glad that you have become enough interested in our department to become a part of it.

That was Clive Brook in "The Yellow Lily." He is a very talented player and a great favorite with the fans.

Billie Dove's rise in fame has been gradual since she played her first bit with Constance Talmadge in "Polly of the Follies." She is said to be one of the most beautiful players on the screen, but she is a clever actress as well. When Douglas Fairbanks decided to make "The Black Pirate" in colors, he chose Miss Dove because of her photographic possibilities. Lois Weber gave her two excellent roles in "The Sensation Seekers" and "The Marriage Clause," not only because of her beauty, but because she had real ability and charm.

Miss Dove was born in New York City and took dancing and dramatics in school. She had a season in The Follies, and also posed as an artist's model. She is five feet five inches tall and weighs 115 pounds. Her brown hair and blue-grey eyes are listed among her beauty assets. She is married to Irvin Willat, a director.

Nancy is winning new friends with every picture. She's in the early twenties and is married to Jack Kirkland. You will see her soon with Buddy Rogers in "Close Harmony."

Marceline Day is doing "The One-Woman Idea" on the Fox lot. You may address her there, 1401 N. Western avenue, Hollywood.

Billie Dove is with First National, Burbank, Calif.

Nancy Carroll, Richard Dix and Wallace Beery draw their salaries from Paramount, 5451 Marathon, Hollywood.

Josephine Dunn, Norma Shearer and George K. Arthur are with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Culver City.

In order to get a photograph of your favorite now, you will have to enclose from ten to twenty-five cents with the request, depending upon the size of picture you most desire. Address them at the studio addresses I furnish you.

Dear Movie Editor—This is my first attempt to write to you, and also my first on the typewriter, so I hope it doesn't hit the W. P. B. Now this seems to be like all good beginnings of Movie Fan's letters, so I hope I'll be welcome.

Now editor, is it really true that we can't receive the star's photographs free any longer?

What are some of the good pictures I shouldn't miss?

Please tell me all you can about Doris Kenyon and David Rollins.

Thanking you for your advice, I must bid you "adieu." PATSY OF LINCOLN.

Very well written, too. Not one typographical error — just a little teeny weeny strike over.

It's too bad, but you are going to have to spend your candy money on photos of the stars hereafter, that is, if you really must have them. You can pay anywhere from ten to twenty-five cents, according to the size. Or even a dollor if you must have a large picture. The fee merely covers the mailing expenses on the picture. The stars are not charging for their photographs. You can understand the necessity of the postage money when you stop to consider that popular players mail out thousands of pictures every month to their admirers.

There are so many good pictures coming along that it's hard to resist any of them. If you like Richard Dix you will want to see "Redskin," which is done in colors. Then "Broadway Melody" will be along soon, and it's all the rage in Hollywood at present, where it is showing at Grauman's Chinese theater. "The Divine Lady," "The Dummy," "In Old Arizona," "The Iron Mask," "Hell's Angels," "Coquette" and ever so many others will soon be coming our way.

David Rollins who made such a hit in "The Air Circus," is a good looking youngster. He's doing well for himself, too, considering the fact that he is only nineteen years old. David was born in Kansas City, Mo., with dark hair and blue eyes. He is five feet ten inches tall and weighs 140 pounds. David played in several pictures, but it was not until "The Air Circus" that he received creditable recognition.

Doris Kenyon, who answers to Mrs. Milton Sills in private life, is an accomplished pianist and writer as well as an actress. Her name is even in "Who's Who in America" because of some poems that she has written.

Miss Kenyon was born in Syracuse, N. Y. and began her stage career in Victor Herbert's "Princess Pat." She divided her time between the stage and the screen until she signed a long term contract with First National. She plays opposite Mr. Sills in a great many of his pictures.

Miss Kenyon has reddish blonde hair and grey eyes. She is five feet six inches tall and weighs 120 pounds.

Dear Movie Editor—It has been an age since I wrote to you. Most of my questions have been asked by someone else. I hope you don't fait when you see my questions.

First I would like to know all about Wheeler Oakman.

I saw Bebe Daniels in "What a Night." It was surely good. Isn't Neil Hamilton wonderful? Will you please tell me something about him?

Will you please tell me where and when Roland Drew and Francis Lee were born?

I would like to know if Julia Faye, Reed Howes and William Powell are married and if so to whom?

Isn't Kathryn Crawford a new player? Will you please tell me something about her?

Have you seen "Abie's Irish Rose?" I thought it was very good.

I must run along now. Thank you. —BETH FERN.

We are glad you haven't deserted us entirely.

Mr. Oakman will be happy to find out that he is again the subject of interest with the fans. He's an old-time movie actor, but has not had very many good parts the last few years.

Mr. Oakman was born in Washington, D. C., where he received his education. Previous to his screen debut, he was on the stage in "Under Southern Skies," "Strongheart," "Checkers," and such plays. He played opposite his former wife, Priscilla Dean in several pictures.

Mr. Oakman is an athletic type and is fond of all otudoor sports. His hobby is breeding fancy poultry. He is five feet eleven inches tall and weighs 180 pounds. His hair and eyes are both dark.

Neil Hamilton's birthplace was Lynn, Mass. The birthdate was Sept. 9, 1899. Mr. Hamilton also served his apprenticeship on the stage before starting in pictures for D. W. Griffith. He was given a test for "The White Sister," but won nice parts in "Isn't Life Wonderful" and "America." Other pictures in which he has worked recently are "The Patriot," "The Showdown," "Hot News" and "Three Week Ends." You will see him soon in his first talking picture, "The Woman Who Needed Killing." Yes, there's a Mrs. Hamilton.

Kathryn Crawford is such a new player that I can't tell you much concerning her. I notice she has a good figure, and poses frequently in a bathing suit so it shows off to the best advantage. I'll keep a weather eye out for detailed information concerning her.

Julia Faye and Reed Howes have been married to non-professionals. I don't recall hearing of a Mrs. Powell.

Roland Drew was born in New York City, twenty-eight years ago. Frances Lee is from Eagle Grove, Iowa. She is in the early twenties.

Screen Siftings

Court Frees Sue Carol — From now on Sue Carol is free to work when and for whom she pleases. Superior Judge Engs found in favor of Miss Carol and released her from her contract with the Douglas MacLean productions. The action was brought by the producing company to restrain Miss Carol from working for other motion picture companies. Miss Carol claimed the Douglas MacLean Productions failed to notify her thirty days in advance that options for her services were to be exercised, and for that reason she accepted employment with another company.

Westerns Survive—Universal still has faith in the box-office value of Westerns. At any rate they have signed Ken Maynard on a five-year contract to make Western specials at the rate of six a year. Hoot Gibson, the only other outstanding figure in the Western field, is also a Universal star.

Song Writers Busy — Talking films have created the necessity of a song-writing department in the Warner Brothers studio. Eight song writers have been placed under contract by that studio to furnish theme song material exclusively for Warner Brothers and First National studios. They are Harry Akst, Joe Burke, Alfred Bryan, Grant Clarke, Al Dubin, George W. Meyer, Herman Ruby and Norman Spencer, all well known in Broadway's melody lane.

Leatrice Joy Signs—Leatrice Joy will answer "present" to roll call at the First National studios hereafter. Miss Joy has signed to make four Vitaphone starring productions for First National and will start work as soon as she completes her vaudeville tour with Radio-Keith-Orpheum. She is an accomplished vocalist and will have an opportunity to sing in some of the pictures.

Build Chinese Home—A complete Chinese home covering an acre and a half of studio space has been constructed on the First National lot for Billie Dove. Miss Dove is starring in "Careers," which has its locale in Cochin-China. The picture is adapted from the German stage play, "Karriere." The supporting cast includes Antonio Moreno, Noah Beery and Thelma Todd.

Filming Stage Success.—Ethel Barrymore's stage success, "The Constant Wife," is coming to the screen in talking form under the direction of Robert Milton, a former New York stage master. Paramount has purchased the rights to screen this W. Somerset Maugham play to serve as a starring vehicle for Ruth Chatterton. Miss Chatterton will fill the role that Ethel Barrymore made famous—that of the wife who discovers her husband is in love with her best friend. Screen tests are now under way for the players for the uspporting roles.

Roberto Moranzoni, who will direct the Chicago Civic Opera Co.'s appearance in "Faust" at the University of Nebraska coliseum, Thursday, March 21, prefers his exacting work to a career as a composer. When he was still a student in conductors' school, he was urged by Pietro Mascagni, composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana," to direct his talents toward the production of a new work, but Moranzoni turned his back upon the offer and plunged with even greater energy into his career as a conductor.

Moranzoni, who was born in Venice, made his first youthful efforts at composition and attracted much attention. He was placed in a conservatory at Pesaro and while there he came to the notice of Mascagni who pleaded with him to turn his attention to composing, as well as conducting.

"But I had gone too far into the study of the old masters," says Moranzoni in discussing his decision. "I found too much pleasure in interpreting them through the medium of a fine orchestra and a fascination in recreating on the stage an emotional fabric of ever varying hsades, just as a great master would have wished it."

Macagni continued his interest in the young Moranzoni until he was graduated from the conductors' school. The composer had recently completed "La Maschere" and had conducted two performances of it when his friend and fellow composer, Verdi, died and he was obliged to leave Rome to attend the funeral. Mascagni at once turned to Moranzoni and entrusted his work with him. Moranzoni's debut was highly successful and for many years he became increasingly in demand in cities throughout Italy, France and England.

Moranzoni's first appearance in America was on tour with the Boston-Pavlowa Opera Co., after which he became the first Italian conductor with the Metropolitan Opera company of New York. While filling that post he conducted the world premiere of Puccini's three operas which are known collectively as the "Triticco," after having gone to Europe to confer with the composer upon the most effective manner of interpreting them.

Miss Maxine Goodbrod, class of Herbert Schmidt, will present the following program as her junior recital Tuesday morning at the regular Fine Arts convocation at the Temple theater. The recital will begin at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. R. O. Hummel is the retiring president.

Screen Siftings

Davey Lee to Star.—Many of the fans have re-christened "The Singing Fool," "Sonny Boy" because of the outstanding work of little Davey Lee who played the part of "Sonny Boy" in the picture. And now Davey is to star in a picture all by himself which will be known as "Sonny Boy." The story was written around Davey and will come to the screen under the direction of Alan Crosland.

Rathbone in Talkies — Basil Rathbone, the famous New York stage star, has successfully passed the screen and voice tests at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio and will play with Norma Shearer in the all-talking version of "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney." The picture is an adaptation of Ina Claire's successful stage play.

Hope Hampton Returns—Hope Hampton, who has been absent from the screen for some time, will return in a scene from Massenet's "Manon," a Vitaphone short subject. Miss Hampton will be supported by a chorus of fifty voices. During her absence from the screen Miss Hampton has been cultivating her voice. She made her operatic debut as Mimi in "La Boheme" with the Philadelphia Grand Opera Co. She will be remembered by screen fans for such pictures as "Does It Pay," "Lawful Larceny" and "Star Dust."

Stage-Trained Cast — The cast for "The Woman Who Needed Killing," a Paramount full-dialogue production, is made up entirely of stage-trained players. It features Baclanova, Olive Brook, Neil Hamilton, Leslie Fenton, Snitz Edwards and Clyde Cook, all of whom are familiar to movie fans for their work before the camera, but who also served their apprenticeship on the stage before turning their attention to the screen. Rowland V. Lee, a former stage director, is bringing this story to the screen.

Negro Players in Demand—Negro players are much in demand for film work at present with so many all-negro pictures being filmed. A new department has been inaugurated at the Central Casting office to handle colored actors exclusively with 1,000 already enrolled. Threescore negro actors are learning the Swahili language of Africa for the all-dialogue work in "The Woman Who Needed Killing." Many negroes will also be used in the Moran and Mack screen version of "The Two Black Crows," which Octavus Roy Cohen is writing. "Uncle Tom's Cabin." "Show Boat" and "Hallelujah' also brought work to many colored players.

Peggy in Talkies—Peggy Wood is the latest stage star to succumb to the lure of talking pictures. Miss Wood, who is famous on the stage as the heroine of "The Clinging Vine," "Buddies" and other hits, will make her screen debut in "Wonder of Women." She will play opposite Lewis Stone. Clarence Brown is directing this production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Directs "The Devil"—As soon as Dr. Paul Fejos completes work on "Broadway," he will direct "The Devil" for Universal. Joseph Schildkraut is to have the title role of Oliver Necker, the French German barber and secret executioner of Louis XI of France. "The Devil" was written by Alfred Nurmann, who was also responsible for "The Patriot."

Mulhall Starred Again — Jack Mulhall, that leading man with a smile, is to star in the screen versions of the famous stage farce, "Twin Beds." Patsy Ruth Miller is leading lady, and Gertrude Astor, who played with Jack in "The Butter-and Egg Man" and "Armond Kaliz," have already been signed for the supporting cast. Alfred Santell, who made "The Patent Leather Kid," is to direct "Twin Beds." Work will start as soon as Mr. Mulhall completes his part with Dorothy Mackaill in "Two Weeks Off."

British Actor in Talkies—John Loder, the famous British stage actor who made his sceen debut in "The Doctor's Secret," is to fill the title role in Rupert Julian's screen version of Ben Hecht's mystery story, "The Green Ghost." The picture will be made as an elaborate talking feature. Edward Martindale, Lionel Belmore, John Miljan and Richard Travers will appear as English army officers. Mr. Loder, the featured player, was one of the most famous British army heroes during the world war.

Rod In New Role—Since Rod La Rocque has become a free-lance he hardly has time to get the make-up off his face at one studio, before he starts applying it again at another. Rod just finished in "Our Modern Maidens" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, and is now driving over to the Fox lot where he steps into the role of a Persian prince. Mr. La Rocque plays opposite Marceline Day in "The One-Woman Idea." The picture is being made by Berthold Viertel, the friend of Max Reinhardt who has recently come here from Vienna. Miss Day will be seen in a dual role in the feature.

Returns to Chaps—Hoot Gibson, the flying cowboy, is returning to his chaps in his next feature, "Points West." Exteriors will be shot in Wyoming or Nevada. The story was written by Mrs. B. M. Bower, who was also responsible for Hoot's former success, "Chip of the Flying U." Mr. Gibson's current release is "The Winged Horseman," in which Ruth Elder is seen as leading lady.

Lincoln Symphony Orchestra Notes.

BY ERNST HERMINGHAUS.

A fine tribute has been paid George Gershwin, composer of "Rhapsodie in Blue," which number will be played at the last symphony concert of this season to be given on March 24. Burton Rascoe, in his column "Contemporary Reminiscence" of the March issue of "Arts and Decorations," says:

"George Gershwin is perhaps the most incredible phenomenon that has arisen in fine arts in America during the past ten years. He was (and is) a writer of tunes for musical comedy, and some of these are as banal and graceless as the worst in the current musical comedy manufacture. Yet he is capable of work that is revolutionary in character and so original and impressive that it lingers in the memory and becomes in effect part of one's cultural and emotional equipment. When he composed the "Rhapsody in Blue" he was, if I mistake not, not even a composer. That is to say, he was not familiar with the technique of harmony and counterpoint and was incapable of writing the score for full orchestration. He 'dictated' it to Ferdie Grofe, who scored it for the various instruments according to Gershwin's idea after Gershwin had worked out the whole rhapsody on the piano.

This young former restaurant waiter, who is now a millionaire on the royalties of "Rhapsody in Blue" alone, emerged as a personage after that first famous concert of modern jazz given by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra at Carnegie hall. At that concert Gershwin played the piano part of his own composition.

"After that triumph in Carnegie hall it occurred to Gershwin that he would do well to repair his ignorance of some of the technical aspects of his art, so he went to Paris to study composition; that is, after he had written a piano concerto commissioned by Walter Damrosch. While in Paris he wrote a jolly little suite 'An American in Paris' in which he made use of the toyland taxicab norns which are peculiar to Paris and which gives Paris its "sount" character among modern cities. From this suite it is possible to relive in a tinkling sort of music one's experiences as an American alien on pleasure bent in the most dreamlike of all cities. So intensive was Gershwin's study, as I understand it, that he was able to score this composition for full orchestra without the aid of an amanuensis."

In this same connection, we quote from Mr. Otto Kahn in the American Magazine of Art for March: "I believe in you (George Gershwin) with full faith and admiration, in your personality, in your gifts, in your art, in your future, in your significance in the field of American music."

STEPHEN LEACOCK.

THIS HEART-TO-HEART STUFF

Some "Birdie-Birdie" Shot for the "Kiddy-Kiddy" Writers.

They turned up outside his door on horseback with a lariat on the pommel of the saddle.

I want to express my opinion right here and now to the reading public that there is getting to be far too much of this "heart-to-heart," and "brother-brother," "service" stuff in the world of today. I refer to all sorts of letters, circulars, communications—everybody knows just the kind of stuff I mean.

Who writes it, and just why they write it, I don't know. Some of them, I imagine, mistake it for "efficiency"; some of them are just a little soft in the head, and some of them, more likely still, are just the sort of lowdown pups who would really write it.

In the old-fashioned days when a man wanted to sell you furniture, he put up an advertising sign over his place of business, "John Smith, Furniture," he put advertisements in the paper, "John Smith, corner of Smith and John streets, Furniture," and he may have gone so far as to send you by mail a printed circular, "Mr. John Smith begs to call your attention to his fine stock of furniture—tables and chairs in all designs."

But further than that he did not go. You could buy his things or leave them alone. He wasn't going to get down and crawl and whine about it; he wasn't going to get off a whole lot of sob-stuff about your home and your "little folks."

But listen to the stuff sent out by his descendants. The John Smith Furniture company, of today. Here's their last letter:

Mr. Citizen:

What about a little new furniture for that home of yours! How about an easy, cozy leather chair for your den, old man? And while we're talking about your den,—

Notice that—"while we are talking about your den." Who's talking about it? He is. I'm not. I haven't got a den, but if I had I know what I'd do with it. I'd put a couple of hyenas in it and let the "come-along" man go in and talk to them.

His letter continues:

While we are talking about your den, how about one of our adjustable all-trash bookcases? If you haven't seen them, let our Mr. Smith come up and show you one.

And while we are speaking of furniture, won't you want something for the wife, too? Couldn't we help to brighten up that little boudoir of wifie's? And how about the little folks' bedroom? A good idea would be to let the little tots have under their feet one of our all-goat's-wool bedroom rugs from Siberia, Saskatchewan. These rugs are guaranteed to keep the littlt chaps' feet warm in the winter.

And I wonder if the little nuts would like one of our Kiddy-Kiddy bookcases, all made of pure bamboo from our own bamboo plantatins a' Bam, Boo county, Pa.

Suppose our Mr. Smith takes a run up to your home (he'd be delighted to do it) and has a run-round with the kiddies and sees how they are?

To which I would want to say that if he does come—he or anyone like him, who writes the "brother-brother" letters—I'd like to receive him with a shotgun, loaded up to the muzzle in both barrels with bird shot—what he would call "birdie-birdie shot"—and I know exactly where I'd like to hit him as he turned to go.

It is always on the question of children that these brother-brother people are especially strong. They have a silly idea that any parents' heart will open at once as soon as they refer to "that boy" or "those boys of yours."

Take the school advertisements and circulars. A decent correspondence school is content to advertise in a decent way: "The Jefferson Correspondence School: Courses in Shorthand, Typewriting, Accountancy, etc." If you've said that, you have said it all. Beyond that, any further, intimate talk is just bunkum, just froth, worthless, and tiresome. No one is coaxed or flattered or deceived by it, except the poor nut who writes it. This is the sort of drivel that he writes:

Well, what about that boy? Coming along pretty well, eh? That's good! That's fine! And what are you going to make of him? Not thought much about it yet; no, naturally you hardly would. But perhaps we might give you a little help, a few pointers as to what might be done. We know all about it, you know. All the kiddies write us, and our heart is just so big that we have room for them all.

Well, then, about that boy of yours, or shall we say this boy of ours? Pretty good at figures, eh? Kind of natural-born calculator. I wonder if you've ever happened to see out text book, "Calcullatics or the Science of Calculation," by Prof. Calk? This professor swears it's the biggest thing since Isaac Newton. We tell him he ought to sell it at a big price and make money out of it. But, no, he doesn't care about money; he just goes right along selling his books at a plain $5.00 a copy. Even at that he sells thousands.

You say the boy has a taste for measurement! Always measuring things, eh? Ho, ha—hum—hum—let's think. Here's an idea. How about a correspondence course in practical land-surveying? Ten lessons gives him his diploma of T. K. F., or he can get the diploma straight away without the lessons, if we classify him as registered first on the report of Professor Crook; perhaps he can get the registration perhaps not; at any rate, send along a specimen of his handwriting, with ten dollars, to our Professor Crook and we'll see what we can do with it.

Or has the little lad a taste for telegraphy? Edison began with that. Perhaps the little fellow is an Edison. Who knows? The little soapsud may turn out a scientist. Anyway, send along ten dollars . . .

And so on, and so on; more of it and still more of it. In earlier days there used to be vigilance committees for this kind of man. They turned up outside his door some quiet evening on horseback, with a lariat hanging on the pommel of the saddle, with a loop on the end of it all ready for a hanging.

The trouble with these brother-brother people is that they disfigure the whole of life with the pretense of sentiments that they don't feel. Life is not all brotherhood or service—at least not outside of Salt Lake City. Business is business; has been and always will be. Part of it is hard; but it is not made softer by throwing over in a whitewash of hypocrisy.

If I owe a man an account and am slow in paying it, I much prefer to have him write and say:

Dear Sir:

Your account of $10.15 has been overdue at my store for six months. If you don't get it settled by next Tuesday, I am going to sue you.

That's the way to do it—the real stuff. There's no come-along, brother-brother stuff about that. But look at the way in which the brother-brother man deals with it:

My friend and customer:

Well, say, now what do you think? Lokoing over our books we notice that same darned old $10.15 never paid yet! Guess you must have kind of clear forgotten it, eh? Well! Well! All right, send us along your check and let's both have a good laugh over it. And say, stick on 67 cents for interest, will you, just to make the laugh all the jollier? Don't forget it this time, old fellow, because Mr. Snide of our law department is such a darned old crank (we often laugh with him over what a crank he is) that he swears he's going to haul you up into court next Tuesday. Well, so long, old boy, don't forget, ten fifteen and sixty-seven cents, next Tuesday, or jail ten days. Goodbye.

I suppose they wouldn't write this kind of stuff unless there were some people to be misled by it. It is quite possible that the human brain is diminishing in size and is softening in texture. That may account for it. Many things of this sort make people of my age almost anxious to finish with this world and start off for another. Only if I did, I should have a haunting fear that the mail of the next day would bring to my house a printed letter in a black-edged envelope, with the word G R I E F stamped at the top and reading:

Dear Mourning Friends:

Well, well, the good old man is dead. What about burying him? Have you thought of that? Probably not. Let us do the think. How about having our Mr. Croak—he's overwhelmed with tears right now—come up quietly to your home . . .

No, they very thought of that letter would keep anyone alive for twenty years. But what I mean is—What are we going to do about it?

Through the courtesy of D. Glen Hutchison, of Crete, a new radio receiving set was installed in the chapel, Monday morning, March 4, and the schedule of classes was so adjusted that the entire college group was permitted to listen in on the inaugural ceremonies at Washington, D. C.

Sunday, March 3, was Doane day at Burwell and Exeter churches. Secretary Korab was the principal speaker at the Burwell church and President Dean at Exeter.

Professor H. F. Brandt and family spent the latter part of last week at his former home at Jansen, Neb., where he was closing up the affairs of his sister, who died at Jansen, Wednesday evening, February 27. Mr. Brandt was able to complete these arrangements in time to meet his regular appointment with the church at Princeton, Neb., Sunday morning, March 3.

Announcements have been received from Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Whitehorn, '16 (Jeanette Miller, '19), Waverly, Mass., of the birth of a daughter, Joan Whitehorn, on Feb. 15.

The friends of Dr. Arthur G. Kennedy, who for several years has been teaching in the department of English at Stanford university, Palo Alto, Calif., will be pleased to learn that he has recently been advanced to the rank of full professor in that institution. Dr. Kennedy's home used to be as Weeping Water, Neb. He is the son-in-law of the late T. H. Miller, of Crete.

R. P. Gage, who was instructor in the department of English at Doane last year, writes from O. M. college, Oshawa, Ontario, that he has been studying during the past winter at Toronto university towards his doctor's degree. Mrs. Gage is with him and is teaching French.

William B. Hunt, librarian of Doane college, was in Hastings March 1 and 2, serving as a judge in the high school debating tournament which was held there under the auspices of Hastings college. He served also as a judge in the debate between Hastings college and South Dakota state college. Mr. Hunt is governor of th eprovince of the Platte of the Pi Kappa Delta, forensic organization, and will be in charge of the second biennial convention of this province which meets with the Nebraska Wesleyan university, March 14-16.

On Tuesday, March 5, a women's dual debate was held between Doane and Wesleyan. The decision of the judges was two to one in favor of Doane at Wesleyan and the same score in favor of Wesleyan at Doane. On Wednesday evening, March 6, men's dual debate was held with Cotner, which resulted in a two to one decision for Doane at Doane and a three to nothing decision in favor of Cotner at Cotner. Doane's final debate of the season in the conference is a women's debate with Grand Island college, scheduled for Friday, March 8.

The special chapel speaker at the college chapel Wednesday, March 6, was Walter Kirkbride, of Lincoln. Mr. Kirkbride spoke on the opportunities for college men and women in business and in an appreciative and friendly way, said some very wholesome things to college young people regarding the necessity of work, if they wish to win a place for themselves in the business world.

The Doane college community is looking forward with real anticipation to the visit of Miss Lillian Picken, of India, March 20, and of Dr. E. Stanley Jones, also of India, on March 21.
